Baltusrol houses bicentennial ball

By Heather MacGregor and Peter Rosenthal

Springfield was not even a town when Dutch settler Johannes Roll, who died in 1783, first put nail to wood at the top of Summit Road to build part of the house that would be the site of the "crime of the century." Eleven years after his death, and 37 years before the fabled killing of his grandson Baltus, Springfield was incorporated.

Although Baltus' life was cut short in 1831, Springfield is 200 years old this year and will celebrate its bicentennial at the club born on his land in 1895, Baltusrol Golf Club.

"The house that Johannes built," or at least built part of, in the 1700s became home to one of the most famous murders of the 18th century. Baltus Roll, a farmer in Springfield, was known for carrying precarious sums of money on his person and was rumored to store great amounts more somewhere in his home. On Washington's birthday 1831, Baltus was taken from his house, dragged, tied and beaten by what his wife claimed were two men, one large and one small. They left him for dead in a puddle of icy water, where his wife would find him along with a neighbor a few hours later.

Baltus was dead by this time and that began a heavily publicized murder trial which resulted in not a single conviction. Baltus' death was featured in detail by many major news organizations across the country.

The trial, held in Newark, did see to the conviction of suspected killer Peter B. Davis — for forgery while his supposed partner, Lydillus Baldwin, had fled to Morristown and committed suicide after police arrested Davis. Although the murder charges never stuck to Davis, he spent his life in prison on three counts of forgery.

Before the turn of the century, the site of the crime of the century would become home to the most storied golf club of the next 100 years, as well as the celebration of the first 200 years of Springfield.

The Springfield Bicentennial Ball will be held on Monday at the Baltusrol Golf Club.

"This is a great opportunity to celebrate the 200th anniversary of Springfield in grand style," Chairman William Gras said. "And it is a highlight of our community's bicentennial year."

Committee votes to oust town planner

By Heather MagGregor
Managing Editor

The Township Committee voted unanimously during a special emergency meeting Friday to fire its township planner because they were dissatisfied with and no longer had faith in his services.

Committeeman Harry Pappas called the meeting because he said he wanted the committee to determine the status of David Zimmerman, the township planner, after he "unilaterally" decided to change the amount of a Community Development Block Grant application.

The township originally thought it was applying for a $350,000 grant to "rehabilitate" the downtown area. According to Zimmerman, the grant was unique because areas used to have to be labeled blighted to apply and since Springfield never qualified before, it stood a good chance of receiving the money. At that time, the committee agreed to pay Zimmerman no more than $10,000 to fill out the application, Pappas said.

The amount being applied for dropped to $52,652 without formal notification and, therefore, he should not receive the full amount due him, Pappas said.

Zimmerman billed the township 2.57 percent of the original grant amount of $350,000, so he should only receive the percentage of the amount he applied for, which was $52,000, and reimburse the town the rest, Pappas said.

"The town we will be looking to recoup those fees from him," Pappas said, citing a total of $7,764. "We are hoping Mr. Zimmerman will make some sort of a gesture to return those monies or give a reasonable explanation of why he should not."

Zimmerman was advised by his lawyer, Arnold Chait of Vogel, Chait, Shwartz and Collins in Morristown, not to speak on the matter.

Chait, however, said he sees no reason why Zimmerman should have to pay the township any money because "in my opinion, he was hired to provide professional services, to provide a grant application and he did that."

Although Zimmerman does not have any pending work or assignments with the Township Committee, Chait said he is not "convinced" he was fired from the township because he also works for the Planning Board and Board of Adjustment.

Committeeman Herb Slote said the committee was dissatisfied with Zimmerman's performance and how he handled the grant application. Slote said after Zimmerman was told to move forward with the grant application at a set fee, he conferred with members of the County Revenue Sharing Committee and they suggested he lower the grant amount, but he never made it clear to the Township Committee that the amount had changed.

The Township Committee "feels very strongly that he should have returned to the committee," Slote said, "and that he did not earn his fee."

The committee passed a resolution on Nov. 9 approving the grant application for approximately $52,000 by a unanimous vote. Slote was not yet a committee member.

Zimmerman did not clearly inform the committee that the application was reduced, Slote said, "and as a result, it slipped through without the awareness of the Township Committee. As a responsible professional, he should have made it crystal clear what

Merchants discuss downtown's future

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

Residents and business owners said they agreed with the Township Committee's unanimous March 8 decision to withdraw a Special Improvement District ordinance, but expressed concern over the status of the downtown business district.

Melvin Kevoo, owner of Mack Camera and Video Equipment, said the committee "probably did the right thing by dropping it."

Some merchants and property owners want to improve the downtown business district but they need the cooperation of the Township Committee and the residents to make the area more viable. Merchants discussed beginning a chamber of commerce in the local area, but it needs support to keep it going, since the SID was withdrawn, Kevoo said.

The township is in the same shape it was two years ago when an 11-person committee assembled to discuss what the downtown should look like and made recommendations for the buildings and landscape in Springfield, but the plans went awry, he said.

"One thing led to another and it just got overblown and too far, too fast," Kevoe said.

"For the most part, the town has improved slightly because of people on their own initiative," Kevoe said. People erected awnings and signs to improve the look of their buildings.

Mayor Marcia Forman said the township will investigate joining the Union County Chamber of Commerce to get information and new ideas to bring to Springfield's merchants in hopes of starting their own chamber.

Springfield resident Richard Coan said he never supported the plan to revitalize the downtown, but hopes the committee takes action toward improving the area.

Man arrested on bank fraud

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

The Secret Service and the U.S. Immigration Service are helping police investigate a possible link between a Newark man they arrested March 8 on bank fraud charges, which cost area banks in excess of $20,000, and residents in the suspect's native country of Nigeria, Springfield police said.

Springfield and Maplewood police arrested Raphael Usunomon, 33, of Newark, at the Summit Bank in Maplewood. The bank called police and alerted them that Usunomon was on his way to the bank to pick up an automatic teller machine card for one of the accounts he allegedly opened using a false identification, police said.

Springfield police said Usunomon used fake identification to open accounts at two branches of Crestmont Savings Bank on Mountain and Morris avenues in Springfield. After the accounts were opened, he deposited worthless checks into them and withdrew cash from the same accounts, according to reports.

Report still projects herd increase despite deer hunt

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

A four-day deer hunt in the Watchung Reservation reduced the white-tailed herd by an estimated 169, but the deer population is still expected to increase by 96 in 1994, according to a summary and evaluation report of the hunt.

The report, which was submitted by the County Division of Parks and Recreation to the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders for review, indicated that the hunt cost taxpayers $54,751.77 in overtime and expenditures and also recommended the establishment of a blue ribbon committee before continuing with the existing deer management program.

Eighty-eight deer were killed during the four-day hunt in January in the Watchung Reservation, 82 of which were antlerless and 67 does, as a part of the deer management program for the Watchung Reservation.

The New Jersey Division of Fish, Game and Wildlife removed and examined the reproductive tracts of the female deer killed during the hunt. The study revealed that 52 of the female deer, or 77.6 percent, were pregnant with one to three embryos each. The total number of embryos removed was 81. The report concluded that "coupled with the 88 deer removed directly by the hunt, there will now be 169 less deer in the Watchung Reservation in the summer of 1994 than there would have been without the four-day hunt."

A scenario posed in the report concluded there will be a total of 96 deer births in 1994, but without the hunt, births would have totaled an estimated 174. There is an estimated 50/50 male/female ratio of deer in the reservation. Prior to the hunt, there was an estimated 150 deer in the reservation, and that total was reduced by 67, leaving 83 females after the hunt. Of the 83 females, 64 of them are expected to be pregnant with approximately 1.5 embryos each, which would bring the total herd number to 308 by July.

If the hunt had not occurred, according to statistics, there were 150 does and 77.6 percent of them, or 116 females, would have been pregnant, carrying 1.5 viable embryos which would have increased the population with 174 new births.

"The deer in the reservation were generally in poorer condition than those hunted in other deer management zones," according to the report, because of a diminished range area and food supply.

Recommendations

A Watchung Reservation Management Committee was recommended to include county staff, nature clubs, citizens and municipal representatives to further evaluate the hunt, make recommendations for deer population control and explore the feasibility of new control methods as technology makes them available.

A fence is scheduled to be constructed near the Trailside Nature and Science Center to prevent deer from entering the area and determine the effects the deer had on the ecology, according to the report.

Volunteers are being solicited to remove the exotic plant species in the reservation, so the natural plants can regenerate themselves as well as other plants being grown at area nurseries, the report explained.

Hunt opinions

Daniel Hernier, chief of the bureau parks operation, said he viewed the hunt as a success and now it is only a

1895 the publisher of the New York Social Register, Louis Keller, who was already the owner of 100 acres in Springfield, hadn't bought an additional 500 acres. He hired Englishman David Hunter to design a nine-hole course for "society's" new sport, golf, and thus started a golf club. By 1898, Hunter had added another nine holes to his 2,372-yard early layout and had a complete 18 holes. Keller, after learning of the farmer's famous murder on his property, had christened it Baltusrol.

A full membership of people paid the $10 dues and, in 1901, the first of 14 U.S. Golf Association championships was held at the club. Genevieve Hecker won that first U.S. Women's Amateur played at Baltusrol, and she went on to take the 1902 Amateur title as well.

Baltusrol's first professional, Willie Anderson, a Scotsman, won the first of seven U.S. Opens played at the club with a 72-hole score of 307 in 1903. On March 27, 1909, a blessing in disguise befelled the club with the burning of its clubhouse. Although the original was lost for good, a new clubhouse was erected the same year. The $100,000 — a preposterous sum then — construction job yielded one of the finest clubhouses in the world in the style of an English manor. Only the Royal and Ancient Golf Club in St. Andrew's, Scotland, outranked it in a 1909 golfing magazine poll.

Eleven years later, Hunter's golf course design, the site of two U.S. Opens, was plowed under for the design of two Albert W. Tillinghast courses, known as the Upper and Lower courses which appeared in 1922 on the original land plus an additionally purchased 172 acres.

The Lower Course, the site of the 1993 U.S. Open, has been modified by Robert Trent Jones and his son Rees Jones by increasing the length to the current total of 7,152 yards and by altering certain bunker placements.

Only Merion Golf Club in Merion, Pa., has held more national championships — 15 more than Baltusrol. Jack Nicklaus won the Open in 1967 and 1980 at Baltusrol. His 272, 36-hole score was a course record until Lee Janzen tied it during his victory last June.

Course records will be secondary to the ball's guests, who will celebrate the town and the food, not the course.

"I urge you to bring your friends and neighbors to this once-in-a-lifetime gala event," Gras said, "because we have seating arrangements for groups, couples and singles."

This semi-formal dinner-dance will start at 6:30 p.m. with the serving of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres. A sit-down dinner will follow at 8 featuring gourmet dining courses specially prepared under the supervision of Baltusrol's master chef, Gerard Gasparini.

Gasparini is creating a special Bicentennial dessert, the ingredients of which will remain a secret until Monday. Roast filet of beef Bordelaise and broiled red snapper a la endive will be the featured entrees. Live music until midnight will be played by the Charles Anthony Orchestra.

A few tickets are still available, and may be bought by calling Kathleen Wisniewski during the day at (201) 912-2202, or in the evening at (201) 379-3260.

Police arrest fraud suspect

Unstinson was remanded to the Union County Jail on $30,000 bail and faces theft by deception, forgery, and the use of bad checks charges, police said.

Detectective Judd Leverson of the Springfield Police, the Secret Service and the U.S. Postal Services are continuing an investigation on either bank fraud attempts and a possible fraud ring, of which Unstinson is believed to be a member.

was happening before it happened."

Robert Michaels of Keller and Kirkpatrick Inc. was voted the interim planner at a rate of $85 per hour after the committee officially fired David Zimmerman. Michaels is a licensed planner who works with Township Engineer Robert Kirkpatrick.

Kirkpatrick said members of the committee asked him last week if he had any available planners to work for the township while a decision was being made regarding Zimmerman's employment status with Springfield. Kirkpatrick said he recommended Michaels because they work as engineer and planner, respectively, in Florham Park without any conflicts. The firm has not collectively began to work on any projects for the township, he said.

Division releases deer report

matter of time before the freeholders make their decision on the recommendations outlined in the report.

"It was successful and within our projections," he said.

Mountainside Mayor Robert Viglianti said he was interested in the opportunity costs involved in the hunt and its preparation.

The report indicated $54,751.77 was "direct costs incurred by the county to conduct the four-day hunt." The figure included $36,313.05 for Union County Police overtime, $130 for printing of signs, $12,774.59 for Department of Public Works overtime, $3,300 for message board rental, $1,480 for sign material, $150 for drafting supplies, $287 for printing of signs, tags and applications, $200 for entrails disposal, $41.23 for telephone and $75 for target orientation.

There was not a study done to cover all of the hunt costs or opportunity costs because there was a fine line between how much time was spent on the hunt and how much time was job related, he said.

Bernier said it would be difficult to compute how much time was spent by county law enforcement officers testifying in court and working in the field. Their presence in court is not seen as a hunt-related cost, he said, adding that although some people would view it that way, it was not necessary for the county to be sued for the hunt.

The county counsel, freeholders and employees of the Division of Parks and Recreation were doing their jobs, he said, and working on reducing the deer herd was just another facet.

"It's all part of our jobs. We don't punch a clock anytime we start and stop working on the deer problem. It would be very difficult to quantify any time spent just working on the deer," he said.

Stuart Chaifetz, a member of the New Jersey Animal Rights Alliance who was involved in several anti-hunt demonstrations, said the numbers just seemed too perfect.

District eliminates special programs

By Joseph Niedzielski
Staff Writer

The Union County Regional School District has eliminated the trainable mentally retarded program, currently taught at Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School in Clark, for the 1994-95 school year.

According to Thomas Long, a spokesperson for the regional district, five students are enrolled in the district's trainable mentally retarded program, four of whom reside within one of the six towns which comprise the regional district.

Of those four, Long said, one student will be graduating in June, which would leave three potential students if the program were to be offered in the upcoming year.

As well, said Long, the district has not identified any other potential students in any of the seventh- or eighth-grade classes in the constituent districts K-8 operations. "So, therefore, the board has taken the position that to employ a full-time teacher for a part-time aid, which is necessary in this type of program, for three district students would not be cost effective," said Long.

Long said Frank Kenney, director of Pupil Personnel Services for the district and who also oversees special education, recommended to the cost containment committee of the board that the trainable mentally retarded program in the regional district be eliminated after the current school year due to low enrollment.

In the meantime, Long said the district is planning for the students' needs in the upcoming school year. "We are assisting the parents in placing their youngsters in quality programs provided in the Union County area for trainable mentally retarded students. We expect that these students will be enrolled as full-time students in one of those available programs starting next September and, of course, as is the case with any special education placement, the regional district would pay the tuition for the students and provide transportation," said Long.

Currently in Union County, the Westfield and Union school districts provide a trainable mentally retarded program.

Deerfield prepares 'birdies'

The sixth-, seventh- and eighth-grade students of Deerfield School in Mountainside are busy putting the final touches on this year's musical "Bye Bye Birdie." Under the direction of Jenny Lucas, the instrumental music teacher at Deerfield, 41 students have been rehearsing after school and on vacation days for the past two months to prepare for opening night. In addition to Lucas, William Magalio and Angie Markos have been working with all the students on music and choreography.

"Bye Bye Birdie," one of the first of the great rock musicals, ran for 607 successful performances on Broadway in 1960. It won the Tony that year as "best musical" and yielded a huge hit with the song "Put On A Happy Face." The creators, Michael Stewart and Charles Strouse, wrote the musical to portray the gap that has always existed between generations.

As the musical begins, viewers find Albert Peterson, played by eighth-grader Matthew Farrington, faced with a loss of revenues. Rose, portrayed by eighth-grader Michelle Nicastro, has two things in mind — marry Albert and become a partner in his business. She comes up with the idea of Albert writing a special farewell song for Conrad Birdie. The song was to be performed on the Ed Sullivan Show, guaranteeing that it would become an instant hit. To make this performance special, the song "One Last Kiss" would be performed to a young girl who will represent all of Conrad Birdie's adoring fans. Conrad Birdie is played by eighth-grader Adam Perle, who tries to bestow his last kiss on Kim MacAfee, played by sixth-grader Liz Klebaur.

Other students involved in the play are eighth graders Adam Benninger, Jason Grunberg, Amanda Wlahyka, and Jennifer De Angelis; seventh-graders Anne Trimmer, Tracey-Ellen Saladino, Tina Waffin, Jessica Bennitger, Scott Adams, Amelia Brown, Jessica Orenczak, Kelly Toner, Vicki Russell, Jean Carpelli, Courtney Kardos, Emily Weiner and Joanna Caffesty. Sixth-graders include Cindy Fisher, Robyn Jubs, Gina De Castro, Jason Onticlicpietro, Nicole Kress, Mary Burbach, Josh Zawislak, Joyce Nicastro, Matthew Grent, Alclo Hreczny, Jessica De Angelis, Keri Ciasulli, Liz Chesler, Erin Watson, Lauren De Augustine, Marisa Riviccolo, Courtney Grillot, Danielle Demoy, Joyce Nicastro and Matt Strenczak.

Performances will be in the gym of Deerfield School on Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday at 1:30 p.m. Tickets are $5 for adults, $4 for students and senior citizens and will be available at the door.

Regional board releases $37.6 million budget

By Dennis McCarthy
Staff Writer

The Union County Regional High School Board of Education adopted a tentative 1994-95 budget of $37,881,692 Tuesday at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield.

The tentative budget is composed of a $37,617,317 general fund and a $264,375 debt service. The total figure of $37,881,692 is an increase of $838,838 over the 1993-94 revised total budget of $37,042,854. This represents a 2.26 percent increase for the next school year.

The regional board is working under a 5.01 percent tax cap, but at the time of the meeting anticipated this figure to drop to approximately 4 percent as per the breakdown of Gov. Christine Whitman's proposed tax cut.

"We will adopt a tentative budget, which doesn't mean a heck of a lot," Board Secretary/Business Administrator Harold Burdge said at the start of Tuesday's meeting, referring to the governor's potential cut in state aid and the tight timeline set by the county.

Burdge stressed that this is not a "proposed" budget. There will be a public hearing on April 7, but the regional board must submit the budget to the county superintendent by March 31. "We're under serious, serious time constraints here," Burdge said.

The board trimmed $89,000 from Burdge's presented budget to arrive at the $37,881,692 figure.

Board member Michael Rogers of Berkeley Heights expressed concerns early on as to how the budget was arrived at. "A budget is really just a blueprint dealing with prior years' history to give us a handle on where we are this year," board President Burton Zitomer said. Burdge confirmed that it is built on "historical experience."

Board member Joan Toth of Garwood said that the projected cost of utilities such as air-conditioning and heating for the unoperational David Brearley Regional High School seemed unjustifiably high. Her concerns were largely responsible for a $20,000 decrease in funds appropriated for overall electrical costs.

The board also agreed to reduce presented appropriations for fuel oil by $10,000, maintenance department materials for building repair by $10,000, telephone charges by $24,000, and contingency funds by a total of $25,000.

The reduction in contingency money, which was spearhead by Rogers, breaks down to $10,000 for roof repairs at Brearley, and $15,000 in general building repair.

Students participate in exchange

By Andrew Stewart
Staff Writer

It's a long way from Saint Quentin, France, but for the rest of the week, at least, a group of French exchange students will call Union County home.

Twelve students from France have spent the last 10 days with families of students at Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School as part of an exchange program. They arrived in New York City on Feb. 27 and are getting their first real taste of American family life, said Annie Coulson, the English teacher from Saint Quentin who came with her students.

"They're really discovering a new way of life," she said.

"It seems that it's very different from France. I prefer it here," student Laetitia Murail said through an interpreter.

The group will stay until Sunday, when they fly back to France and wait for their new American friends to come to them.

Having a foreign student stay in their homes for two weeks has been a learning experience for the American students as well. Lani Clark, who is hosting Murail, said they were able to communicate with each other after a few days.

"I love it. I've learned more in the last few weeks than I have in class," Clark said.

There is an adjustment to hosting a student from another country, but it is a positive experience, said Johnson Regional student Kara Thompson.

"It's a good adjustment. We learn more from having a student with us than we do in class," she said.

Conversations have been in a mixture of French and English, with students from each country having to substitute words from their native tongue for words they don't know in their second language, she said.

"It's amusing," Thompson said.

The program was organized by Viviane Levy, a French language teacher at Arthur Johnson and Jonathan Dayton regional high schools, and Aldo Collura, the regional district supervisor of foreign language.

The host families have taken the students from Saint Quentin right into their homes, Levy said. Some of them have gone skiing, shopping and even to Broadway shows and Philadelphia with their students, she said.

The students' activities during their stay have included a volleyball tournament, a visit to the Liberty Science Museum in Jersey City, and an overnight trip to Washington D.C., Coulson said. The group, which also includes two students at Dayton Regional and one, Coulson's daughter, at Governor Livingston Regional High School, spent their first two days in America in Manhattan, she said.

Walking around the Big Apple and taking in all of the sights was a confusing and tiring experience for them, she said.

"I'm sure they were quite lost in Manhattan," Coulson said. "They were quite exhausted," she said.

Touring New York City was an eye opener in another way as well, Murail said.

Governor Livingston Sophomore Heidi Pascuitti of Mountainside, right, enjoys a conversation with Marie Colson, one of the 15 French exchange students who visited the Union County Regional High School District this month.

Communication rut

The Springfield Township Committee is in a communication rut. And the residents, property owners and merchants are suffering because of it.

The Township Committee this week fired Planner David Zimmerman because its members said he did not fulfill a contractual obligation concerning an application for community development funds. Apparently, the committee does not realize that it fired a man who did the job he was hired to do — more apparently, to shift the blame away from its members.

Zimmerman was hired in the fall, at a fee not to exceed $10,000, to complete a $350,000 Community Development Block Grant application. The funding would be directed toward the township's Special Improvement District. The committee was required to pass an ordinance on March 8 in order to be eligible to receive any funding for the district.

Under the recommendation of a representative of the Union County Revenue Sharing Committee, the application was reduced from a one-year total of $350,000 to $52,000 a year spread over the next several years. The Township Committee approved the application and the process moved forward.

When the committee learned that it would receive only $18,000 of the $52,000 for which it applied, suddenly committee members knew nothing of the reduction in the amount presented on the application, an application they approved. Not only have they received less in funding, they are also faced with the dilemma of justifying paying the planner $9,000, which is half the amount the township will receive in funding this year.

The next, most logical step, according to the committee, was to blame the planner for the shortfall in funding. Committee members said they were never informed of changes in the amount of the grant and charged that the planner made a unilateral decision. Committee members said they did not realize the $52,000 grant application was the same as the original $350,000 grant when they passed the resolution in November.

Committee members said Zimmerman should reimburse the township a portion of the fee based on the smaller amount of the grant. In other words, the planner should pay for the committee's mistake.

We disagree. He should not have to pay financially or with the loss of his job.

The bottom line is that committee members should have known what they were voting on before they cast their votes.

Not only has it cost them in the amount of the grant they will receive, it will also mean another setback for the creation of the Special Improvement District.

The Township Committee must rectify the situation with the businesses that expected to benefit from a Special Improvement District. Hopefully, merchants and property owners will have more luck with the committee than the governing body has with each other and the former planner.

Save rail link plan

The Newark-Elizabeth rail link, part of the Urban Core project, is in jeopardy from a proposed $146 million cut in federal subsidies for New Jersey Transit.

The $845 million rail link projects — which include connections between Elizabeth, Newark, Newark International Airport and western Union County — is necessary to help meet the requirements of the 1990 federal Clean Air Act.

We Americans love our cars. We love the freedom, the independence and the convenience they offer. Mass transit projects that provide the same convenience to our jobs, shopping, recreation and transportation centers, without the hassles of traffic, potholes, accidents, repair and insurance costs, could coax us out of our polluting metal boxes.

Purely in economic terms, mass transit investment is a good deal. If the state fails to cut auto emission by the end of the decade, it will be subject to fines for noncompliance. New Jersey must find ways to cut the amount of vehicular traffic and still meet the transportation needs of our populous metropolitan region.

The rail link projects would make this the nation's foremost region in mass transit. We should not let this leadership role slip away.

Citizens should contact New Jersey's representatives and senators in Congress and urge them to fight to preserve this funding. Spending for highways is yesterday. Investing in mass transit is the future.

"The rights of free speech and assembly, while fundamental in our democratic society, still do not mean that everyone with opinions or beliefs to express may address a group at any public place and at any time."
—Arthur J. Goldberg

Lines of communication must be opened

On The Record

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

1994 began in Springfield with the new Democratic majority taking the reins of the Township Committee, and new Mayor Marcia Forman pledging to open the lines of communication between the governing body and the residents it serves. Forman's dream was to have more residents attend committee meetings and follow local government to ensure a system of checks and balances.

Apparently, that message wasn't intended to be heard by the press.

The Leader attends virtually every Township Committee meeting and acts as the eyes and ears of the citizens. Its goal is in harmony with the mayor's wish — to inform the citizenry and watch government.

It was admirable, but far reaching, for the mayor to call for more open lines of communication. Her plan went awry when government wanted to control the flow of information and not allow information or the news to be disseminated freely by the press.

At one point she said she wanted to create a nonpartisan newsletter to keep the public up to date on the township.

The trouble here is not that the township said it wanted to start a newsletter. They don't want a free flow of information to an established media, which dedicates its life to informing the public "without fear or favor." Instead, they try to stifle information when they feel they are able. When the news would benefit them, it is "for the record," but when they consider it not so favorable, the media is told they use poor judgment in reporting.

For example, after the first few committee meetings of 1994, Forman praised committee members for their cooperation, and all appeared hopeful to make her pledge of open communication become a reality in Springfield. Members said they would work together on projects in a bipartisan manner to make the township operate more efficiently and break down the political stereotypes which had been plaguing Springfield.

Those words were conveyed, through the newspaper, to the public. Several days later, calls came into the Springfield Leader's office thanking the editor for the "good press." Funny, there is no such thing as good press or bad press. Either way, it's news. Sometimes people like the news and other times they don't, but the press doesn't create the news, it reports it.

Well as the year's business continued, the goal to open the lines of communication began to thin and seem more like an unattainable dream.

The day-to-day business and some of the fighting was reported. The remarks were written without commenting on the exchange of dirty looks between committee members or concentration on the raising of voices, or the endless cries from the mayor to get back to the agenda after countless interruptions. For the most part, it was nonsense.

Here are some events which generated angry calls from government officials:

While some members of the committee seemed to get along better than before, new conflicts developed. Committee members divert their attention away from the agenda during meetings, which causes voices to rise and emotions to swell and very often the same old business appears for several weeks in a row without any action being taken. Old business is a sign of inefficient government and the need to be noticed.

Although meetings could be considered more efficient than at the end of last year, they're also more frequent, yet just as confusing. It seems as if there is a great deal of waiting at meetings — waiting for members to form opinions, gather information or just get organized before they decide how to vote on matters on the agenda. Waiting can be beneficial; other times it inhibits progress.

The proposed, postponed, rescinded, reintroduced, postponed again and finally withdrawn Special Improvement District ordinance is an example of how the committee faces a barrier in the way of efficiency and communication. No one could decide on what should be done, so they decided to do nothing at all and blame someone else for their own miscommunications.

The mayor said she wanted a system of checks and balances. The message evidently never was communicated to the other members of the Township Committee because they continually try to "kill the messenger" — the press. The degree of suppression grows and becomes more evident as time moves on and more committee blunders are detected.

At last Monday's executive meeting, the committee discussed what should be done about the SID and payment for filling out a grant application as the township planner. Although different issues, the SID and the grants overlap because one could not exist without the other. Discussion overlapped from one issue to another as did committee members' opinions of the planner. At one point, members were talking about firing the planner and without voting the ordinance, both of which came true by the end of the week. Yet during the open public meeting, the press was told if the discussion was printed, it would be "in poor judgment." Criticism continued on the press at the same committee member shouted, "Is she writing that? Take her pen away." The ironic part was that the comments were made in poor judgment, not by reporting them. Perhaps that committee member forgot that she was a part of an open meeting.

The same committee member wanted to pinch lines of information to the public even harder.

As I entered town hall Friday to attend an emergency committee meeting for which notice was served two hours earlier, I was greeted with, "Oh, who called you?" When I gave no response, the committee member continued, "I did not mean anything by that. I just wanted to know who called you."

By law, notice had to be served and since members decided, after they convened, that it was not an emergency, it is possible the committee violated the 48-hour notice requirement under the Sunshine Law.

During the meeting, I was asked to do my job. "Don't call the planner and tell him he was fired until the township serves him notice. Someone from the township will call you after he has been notified, so then you can call him. OK? Will you wait? Do you understand why?"

Let's make sure that was understood. I was told not to report what happened during a public meeting, at which the committee did not want the press but was required to have there, until the government gives its OK.

Something's wrong in Springfield.

The lines of communication are not open, but must be because the public needs and has the right to know what is happening in their government. Committee members must learn that if they do their job properly, they won't have anything to hide from the public. It would also make the press' obligation to inform the citizenry more beneficial. Let's open the lines so the press can keep them open.

Committee hopes for progress

To the Editor:

After two and a half years of effort, the Downtown Redevelopment Plan has been abandoned. However pure the intentions, it was an illusion that collapsed under the weight of its flawed concept and of the legal and financial problems it created. Faced with the reality of actually trying to make the plan work — rather than toying with words — neither the planner nor the Township Committee could see a practical course of action.

As a last gasp effort, the planner proposed to apply for a revenue sharing grant of $350,000. Upon presenting this to county officials, reality intruded again. There was no way a request of this size could be considered. The application was reduced to $52,000.

In sub-committee, where our request competed for limited funds with about 35 others from throughout the county, we were awarded $18,100, the use of which was specifically limited to sidewalk replacement. At the moment all other improvements were rejected, the "plan" died.

While struggling to figure out how to use this meager sum of money, reality knocked a final time. The program under which this grant was made has legal requirements which put our tax rolls at risk, an insight which was not revealed to the Township Committee until after the award. This risk, the committee has concluded, is not acceptable and so the request has been withdrawn.

Last fall, this newspaper published my negative views of the Downtown Redevelopment Plan and my caution on the need for strong control of consultants. It is no satisfaction to find my fears justified. However, I was not alone. Other members of the community regularly exposed the deficiencies of the plan at meetings of the Township Committee, but their voices were few and ineffective.

There is a clear message in this experience. Sitting up on the dais doesn't impart any special wisdom. Many citizens have knowledge and experience which could be shared to advantage. This is a representative government, but without the presence of those who are represented, the Township Committee operates in a vacuum.

A final thought. The "plan" is dead; downtown renewal needn't be. We have learned what cannot be done but have not exploited the possibilities of what can be done. This time, however, a groundswell of effort is required. The initiative will have to come from the merchants and the property owners. The Township Committee will encourage and cooperate as it can.

Township Committeeman Herb Slote

Republicans should unite

To the Editor:

Editor's note: The following is an open letter to Louis Santagata of Hillside.

I have decided not to seek the Republican nomination for freeholder this year and I would urge you to join me in ensuring a united Republican Party in 1994.

It really is my hope that the party does not split itself apart as it selects candidates. The real possibility exists that one or both sitting freeholders could lose their spot on the ticket. Without doubt, there are many who are not pleased with various positions taken by either of them, however, I am sure that you do not want to be part of any movement to replace another incumbent. I clearly do not, and, party unity is much too important in 1994.

Ed Force of Cranford is seeking the nomination and I believe with his background in government, he will be an asset to the ticket. I also believe that he will help Freeholders Keefe and Lee to persuade bring back the many Republican voters who left our ranks due to some of their unilateral moves on the freeholder board that were not in concert with the wishes of the party.

In any event, Lou, I will respect your decision to seek the nomination should you opt to do so, and be assured that I will support the decision of the convention. I must point out that last year, several within our party played on your emotions for you to run in a primary. Not only could they not deliver, they gave you lip service, which they are famous for. What they succeeded in doing was to split the party and expose themselves.

There will be another opportunity in the future to seek a freeholder nomination. This year, we must put our differences aside and work for the party to ensure Republican control of the Board of Freeholders. The Democrats want it back so they can bring back "business as usual" and put Union County government back into the dark ages. We must not allow this to happen.

Economic health depends on environmental health

State We're In

By David F. Moore

"Sustainable" is a word pervading eco-talk these days. It's a reaction to society's panic at realizing that people are using our plant's resources faster than they are replaced.

Assuming that we have not already passed some point of no return — which we can only learn by hindsight — "sustainable" generally means keeping agricultural and industrial demands in balance with ability of the land, air and water to meet our demands.

Political action following this discovery is producing results. The idea that saving energy is as good as producing it has now been incorporated into public utility operations all across the country.

A plantwide crisis needs to be dealt with in the same way it has happened: everybody doing his or her share — everywhere. New Jersey is an ideal example; a place of high demands due to population and industrial density; it needs to embrace the ethic of sustainability pronto.

Holland is a pioneering example. That nation has embarked on an environmental policy plan aiming at a sustainable economy and resource base. In and other western European countries, have a big advantage over New Jersey, in that they are much more efficient in resource use than we are to start with.

We use nearly double the energy they do per capita, and more than twice the number of gallons of water per capita. Person for person, we drive more than twice as far too. Yet we are virtually the same in gross national product, slightly behind Denmark and about the same as West Germany.

One sustainable development idea does not fit all; different strategies are needed for different things. Obviously, iron mining at anywhere near current levels can't be kept up forever. Iron is not reborn in the same places as found today, so substitutes and recycling are in order.

Agriculture is a different story. Given soil and water conservation, with nutrients replaced as used, and air and water quality and quantity protected, crops can be brown for a long, long time. Management is the key to success for farming.

For resources like air and water, sustainability means maintaining status quo after we clean things up; how much pollution can be introduced without fouling usefulness?

We're far from sustainable management of natural resources in this state we're in, but at least we've started thinking about it. Our pollution control laws are not orchestrated to harmonize, nor to encourage, environmental stability. Sustainability was an unborn concept when those laws were framed.

Indeed, about the only laws taking a shot at long-term goals are the federal Clean Water and Clean Air Acts. In the former, we set the goal of having fishable and swimmable waters across the nation. The trouble is, we've put off the deadline for decades.

The realization that our economic health is dependent upon our environmental health is dawning on corporate leaders. Let's hope it won't be too long now before these we elect to office catch on.

David F. Moore is executive director of the New Jersey Conservation Foundation.

Thanks to jurors who made court

To the Editor:

The first two months of 1994 were particularly difficult for all of those citizens summoned for grand jury and petit jury duty because of the ice and snow storms we experienced. Despite the safety and travel concerns presented by this unusual weather, the courts of this county were able to remain open and function without interruption. This in large measure was due to the wonderful cooperation we received from our jurors and their willingness to accept this civic duty in a most responsible fashion.

Now that winter is over, I would be remiss if I did not extend our thanks and appreciation to all of these individuals on behalf of the judiciary of Union County.

We're still out there

To the Editor:

This is just a reminder to the freeholders and politicians who support hunting.

We taxpaying, deer-loving, anti-hunt property-owning voters are still out there. Don't come around election day saying you're my friend. You're either my friend now and forever, or never and ever.

Legislature fulfilling pledge to the governor

Be Our Guest

By Donald DiFrancesco

Editor's note: Senate President Donald T. DiFrancesco delivered the following remarks March 3 on the floor of the Senate Chamber concerning the Senate's consideration of the five-bill package touching the income tax, eliminating the corporate business tax and appropriating corresponding budget reductions:

In January, I stood before you as we organized for the first time as the 206th Legislature and told you that there would be no greater priority for the entire Senate than to work with Governor Whitman to achieve a plan of tax cuts and government savings.

Today we fulfill our pledge to the governor.

We have a unique opportunity to build on the progress we have already made in trimming state government and providing residents with tax relief by approving the five bills that make up the Senate Fiscal Responsibility Plan.

I ask you to join me today in voting in favor of these bills because our governor has asked us to do our part. The New Jersey public is struggling under the burden of the state's high income taxes. Governor Whitman wants to provide New Jerseyans with tax relief and she deserves our full support.

I ask you to join me today in voting in favor of these bills because tax reduction is the right prescription for what ails New Jersey, namely high taxes and a slow recovering economy. New Jersey has become an expensive state to live in and to operate a business in, and the time is now to send a message, an economically sound message, that we care about the financial welfare of our residents and the future of our business community.

Finally, I ask you to join me today in voting in favor of the Senate Fiscal Responsibility Plan because this package constitutes responsible governing.

I do not say that lightly. After all, it was I who asked the governor to move cautiously and deliberatively in lowering taxes. I said publicly the tax reduction plan had to be meaningful to the taxpayers, but not menacing to our fiscal outlook.

Governor Whitman's proposal meets this requirement. In addition to the exemption from taxes for certain income levels and the elimination of the corporate business tax surcharge, the governor has proposed a 5 percent income tax reduction.

Five percent is the number on the table for consideration today, and 5 percent is a percentage New Jersey can afford.

We know we can afford it because we have taken out the guesswork. We know exactly where the money for these tax cuts will come from.

Senate bills 4 and 5 clearly identify the sources that can be used to offset the loss in tax revenue. These are real numbers and are viable sources of funding.

On Tuesday, I sent a letter to every mayor in New Jersey saying that the bills we're about to pass will not increase property taxes or school taxes.

There is no threat now to municipal aid or education aid. This Senate will not allow that to happen and under the plan we consider today, it will not happen. Our commitment to New Jersey's property taxpayers remains steadfast.

As a legislator who has voted in favor of taxes and against taxes, I know full well that taxes are a "necessary evil." They serve a very real purpose. But there is a limit.

When taxes begin to hamper our economy, hurt our job-producing opportunities and threaten the financial security of our residents, the Legislature must take action. These tax reduction measures take decisive action in a way that will immediately benefit New Jerseyans, but will not affect those state programs and services of importance in our state.

Simply put, this plan is tax relief done responsibly.

I urge you to vote yes for S-1, S-2, S-3, S-4 and S-5.

Senate President Donald DiFrancesco represents the 22nd Legislative District in Union County.

Reform needed on special interest money

Screening New Jersey

By Steve Adubato Jr.

"There are two Americas. One which influences government — and the other which must live with the results." The words of author William Greider could just as easily have been used to describe the state of affairs in Trenton.

Today, while political action committees pump obscene amounts of money into legislative campaigns — I know as a former legislator, I aggressively sought these dollars — at least, they're more discreet than were earlier lobbyists.

"I believe with $200,000, I can pass our bill. I do not think we can get any legislation this session for land grants — unless we pay more for it than it's worth." — Collis Huntington, president of Southern Pacific Railroad, in a letter to railroad magnates in 1877.

No, today's special interests aren't that crass.

But according to a report released last week by the Center for Analysis of Public Issues, New Jersey's campaign finance "reform" of 1993 that intended to put the brakes on exorbitant campaign spending and huge contributions from PACS left a "gaping loophole."

The center's president, Neil Upmeyer, said last year's law limiting PAC contributions to legislators at $5,000 and individuals, corporations and unions at $1,500 was, in part, a good thing. Before the law, contributions were unlimited. Still, Upmeyer said, "Powerful special interests led by lawyers, the health care industry, developers and labor unions tightened their grip on state government in 1993, doling out millions in campaign contributions to highly centralized PACs controlled by legislative leaders who funneled cash to candidates."

How did this happen?

Easy. You see, last year's "reform" set a different, more dangerous limit for legislative leaders like the Senate president, Assembly speaker and minority party leaders who were allowed to accept a whopping $25,000 from single donors.

At the time, Sen. William Schluter, R-Morris, who has fought for real campaign reform for years, said, "Legislative leaders will be able to attract more PAC money than political parties — because they can get greater and more direct results. This law will give inordinate power to four individuals."

Think about it. With so much power and money in the hands of these few legislative leaders, it can only stifle honest debate on important policy issues. As I rhetorically asked in a previous column: If you were a legislator, how willing would you be to challenge publicly these leaders of your ability to deliver vital programs and get valuable PAC money depended on your relationship with them?

How powerful are legislative leaders?

They decide what bills — among the hundreds introduced — get voted on; they decide which committee — and in turn, which friendly or unfriendly committee chair — will hear a bill, and they make committee assignments. That's just the beginning.

The Legislature made a big mistake last year. The "reform" law has made it easier for the special interests to get the biggest bang for their bucks. Just give money to the Senate president or the speaker and let them give it to the "right" members.

Let's not wait until another near scandal in Trenton forces the obligatory and always much-publicized campaign finance "reform." While it won't totally clean up the system — no one has could do that — the Legislature should do now what they didn't do last year: make every legislator, including the leaders, live by the same contribution limit.

Upmeyer said the key to that happening is Senate President Donald DiFrancesco, who sat on the Rosenthal Commission that recommended last year's reform and whose influence was enhanced by the law itself. I agree. DiFrancesco is the key to righting last year's wrong, especially with Assembly Speaker Chuck Hayretian preoccupied with other things.

The Senate president told me recently he was open to a "change" in the law, saying, "Maybe $25,000 is too high." In defending the law, DiFrancesco said, "The goal was to prevent individual legislators, particularly committee chairs, from receiving huge amounts directly — then releasing bills from committee. Before the law, there was a perception they could be bought." He added that even if the law was changed, "special interest money is still going to be there."

DiFrancesco is right. Special interest money will always be there. But the key is to limit it where you can and make it as difficult as possible for that money to affect the process directly.

DiFrancesco is a fair politician who is smart enough and has enough integrity to take the leadership on the issue. If he does, and says he will live by the same PAC contribution standard required of his own colleagues, who can argue? Legislative leaders can be very powerful.

Exhibits coming home as part of county show

The Union County Home Show is returning to the National Guard Armory in Westfield on March 25 with more than 100 exhibits, homeowners' seminars and more.

This year's home show, which will run for three days through March 27, will feature exhibits from national manufacturers and area companies, giving Union County homeowners the opportunity to see and purchase everything they may need for their home under one roof, according to Michael Lewis, president of Expositions East, the show's producer.

"We know that while many homeowners no longer have the time or inclination to shop from store to store or business to business in search of the ideal products and services for their home, they still demand quality and value," Lewis said. "That's why the Union County Home Show has become so popular with those looking to improve their homes."

According to Lewis, the expo gives homeowners the opportunity to see and purchase the very latest products from the nation's leading manufacturers, as well as meet with representatives of some of the area's most reputable home improvement businesses.

The Union County Home Show will feature a complete range of supplies and products including greenhouses, swimming pools, spas, kitchen cabinets, bathroom fixtures, home security systems, building products, heating and air conditioning products, decks, doors and windows, home furnishings — and even art and unique home decor, such as one-of-a-kind pieces of animation art featured by All American Collectibles, Inc.

The Union County Home Show also will feature a host of seminars and special events for homeowners and their families. Public Service Electric and Gas Company's mobile energy conservation exhibit, known as the "Energy Conservation Show," will be available for touring, offering energy-saving tips and money-saving conservation programs designed with today's homeowners in mind.

For those who want a new look for their home, but need some inspiration and tips from the professionals, Fanwood-based Decorating Den will host a series of seminars on interior and exterior design. The Health Craft Cooking Show, hosted by Roger Nadalin, also will be one of the highlights of the show, offering health-conscious families tips on new ways to cook their favorite foods.

Don't leave the kids at home for the Union County Home Show. Ed Richman and his "loved" trained cockatoos, macaws and other exotic birds will delight the young and young-at-heart with several performances daily. Saturday and Sunday, Richman's birds have starred on television shows such as "Magnum P.I.," "The Tonight Show" and "America's Funniest People" and have entertained audiences from coast to coast.

Want to improve your home, but you're a little short on cash? Maybe you'll find the extra money you need at Midlantic National Bank's booth at the show. The bank will be giving on-the-spot home improvement loans to qualified homeowners during the expo's entire run.

The Union County Home Show will be open March 25 from 4 to 10 p.m.; on March 26 from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.; and March 27 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is $6 for adults. Children will be admitted free. Discount coupons will be available in local newspapers. Free on-site parking at the National Guard Armory, 500 Rahway Ave., opposite Westfield High School, will be available.

For more information on the Union County Home Show, or for directions to the show, call Expositions East at (908) 536-5765.

Wine and cheese party to benefit cancer research

The annual wine and cheese party, sponsored by the Union Township Cancer Committee, will be held April 8 at the Boys & Girls Club.

Proceeds will benefit the Union County chapter of the American Cancer Society. The party will begin at 7 p.m. To purchase tickets call Anthony Russo, 688-3232, or event co-chairman Bob Milan at 688-0565.

Volunteers honored for service

Rutgers Cooperative Extension of Union County recently held its fifth annual volunteer awards ceremony at the Vocational-Technical Schools in Scotch Plains.

"The theme of this year's ceremony was 'Volunteers are Special People,' and they certainly are," said Union County Freeholder Frank Lehr. "Without them, we wouldn't have so many wonderful programs from the extension, such as 4-H Youth Development, home economics, agriculture and much more."

Freeholder Linda Di Giovanni praised the extension's more than 350 volunteers, calling them the "unsung heroes we couldn't do without. They deserve this moment in the sun."

Freeholder Linda Lee Kelly said the volunteers "do a tremendous service for our residents without any fanfare. We salute them."

Kean talk to focus on conflicts

"Multiculturalism? Multiethnicity? Yes/No...A Search for Common Ground" will be the topic of a lecture by Henry R. Huttenbach at Kean College Wednesday from 3:30 to 5 p.m. in the college's Green Lane facility, Multi-Purpose Room 1.

The program is part of Kean's Multicultural Colloquium Series sponsored by the college's Office of Academic Affairs. The series is designed to enable the campus community to explore different scholarly perspectives on the roots of racism and discrimination.

A professor of Russian and Eastern European history at The City College of New York, Huttenbach is the Ida E. King Distinguished Visiting Scholar of Holocaust Studies at Stockton State College — the first endowed chair of Holocaust Studies in the nation. He is also a research associate at Columbia University's The Harriman Institute.

A frequent lecturer at international conferences, Huttenbach has written numerous chapters, articles and scholarly papers on Russian/Soviet history. He is the author of "World Communism in Review" and co-recently "Soviet Nationality Policies." Since 1987, he has served as editor in chief of "Nationalities Papers," an international journal on ethnic conflicts in Eastern Europe.

Huttenbach received his doctorate from the University of Washington and has done post-doctoral work at Moscow State University, The Hebrew University in Israel and Indiana University.

Police advise against unwanted solicitation

The Springfield Police Department Crime Prevention Unit submitted the crime prevention tips for solicitations:

Recently there have been numerous complaints from local residents and merchants concerning persons soliciting over the telephone for donations and advertising. These solicitations are being made in the name of local organizations. Some of these solicitations are completely fraudulent while others are valid organizations, but callers may imply they represent these organizations to obtain donations from persons who are falsely led to believe that they are supporting these local organizations.

Residents and merchants are asked to be aware of these tactics and call the organization if they have questions about their solicitation practice.

Any person receiving such a telephone solicitation is urged to immediately contact the Springfield Police Department at (201) 376-0400. Any person wishing further crime prevention information contact Patrolman Steven Siodki of the Springfield Police Department Crime Prevention Unit at (201) 912-2243.

Red Cross begins drive

The Westfield/Mountainside chapter of the American Red Cross began its March campaign for 1994 to help the chapter support various programs that are offered to the communities.

The Red Cross provides relief to victims of disasters and helps people prevent, prepare for and respond to emergencies. The chapter offers courses in disaster services training such as Introduction to Disaster and Disaster Health Services, and presentations to educate youth and all interested residents.

Last year, the chapter sponsored blood drives with a collection of 416 units in the area to help those who rely on the blood because of disease, accident and surgery. More than 1,500 people were certified through programs of CPR and standard first aid with 70 courses offered and a total of 43 water safety courses. The chapter also offers Babysitting for the Beginner to scout and school students. HIV/AIDS Education is taught by volunteer instructors in schools, workplace and community groups.

Senior volunteer groups create terry cloth bibs, knitted hats and gloves, lap robes for veterans at Lyons V.A. Medical Center. The scouts and school church groups make disposable placemats and nut cups for the holidays to brighten the veterans' holiday seasons.

The Westfield/Mountainside chapter offers 24-hour, 365-day coverage for social services to the military for worldwide emergency communication to relay information to families.

The chapter has sick room supplies which are donated, such as commodes, walkers, canes, shower benches and wheelchairs. Due to high demand, any donation of wheelchairs is appreciated.

Transportation Department through the Union County Paratransit provided 29,000 rides last year. The transportation supplies rides to Westfield, Mountainside, Garwood and Clark residents. For further information, call the office at (908) 232-7120.

Correction policy

It is the policy of this newspaper to correct all significant errors that are brought to the editor's attention. If you believe that we have made such an error, please write Tom Canavan, editor, 1291 Stuyvesant Ave., Union, 07083, or call him at 686-7700 weekdays before 5 p.m.

Volunteers low, emergencies up

Recent analysis of emergency calls over a period of a year by the Springfield Volunteer First Aid Squad has resulted in some important statistics.

Call volume between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. is relatively low as most people settle in for the night and go to sleep. At 7 a.m., emergency call volume rises dramatically and continues to rise each hour, finally peaking at noon. After noon, emergency calls fall off until dinner time and then peak again at 7 p.m., when another peak call volume is noted.

The squad's typical response distribution shows that most emergency calls occur between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m., just at the hours when the number of volunteers available is the lowest. In fact, almost 75 percent of all emergency calls happen in this 12-hour time period.

The First Aid Squad is seeking volunteers for day and night positions, but it is obvious from the historical information that there is an extra special need for members available for daytime responsibilities. No previous experience is necessary and the squad provides training, uniforms, equipment and insurance at no cost to the member.

Call (201) 376-0400 for more information.

The chart shows the volume of calls vs. the hour of day.

Governor declares 'Physical Difference Week'

A gubernatorial proclamation declared March 13-19 as "Physical Difference Week" and was presented March 7 by Acting Commissioner of Health Leonard Fishman during ceremonies at Children's Specialized Hospital in Mountainside.

According to Harry Gaynor, president of the National Burn Victim Foundation, thousands of children and adults are victims of trauma each year in New Jersey and many suffer disfiguring injuries. Since 1974, the foundation has been an advocate for these victims.

"It is extremely important," Gaynor said, "that the public understands the plight of these victims who look different, and the educational impact of Governor Christine Whitman's proclamation will serve the objective well."

Participating in the program at CSH were representatives of several organizations which have joined with the National Burn Foundation in this effort and which were singled out by the governor for their "dedication and services in this humanitarian cause."

The organizations cited by the governor include the Academy of Medicine of New Jersey; American College of Emergency Physicians - New Jersey Chapter; American Trauma Society - New Jersey Division; Children's Hopes and Dreams Foundation; Children's Specialized Hospital; Delaware Valley Burn Foundation; Kessler Institute; Medical Society of New Jersey; New Jersey Psychologist Association; The Phoenix Society; St. Lawrence Rehabilitation Center; and Central's Friends and Buddies Club.

Letter writers

For purposes of verification, all letters must include a name, address and daytime telephone number. Unsigned letters will not be published. Names may be withheld from print in certain circumstances upon the request of the writer and with approval of the editor. Address letters for consideration to: Letters to the editor, 1291 Stuyvesant Ave., P.O. Box 3109, Union, 07083. The deadline for letters is 9 a.m. Monday.

ALJ presents Sondheim musical

"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to The Forum," Stephen Sondheim's hilarious musical romp, will be presented by students of Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School in Clark on Friday and Saturday.

Set on a residential street in Ancient Rome, the story by Larry Gelbart and Bert Shevelove tells of a puckish Roman slave named Pseudolus, who is determined to win his freedom. Luckily for him, his master, the young Hero, son of Senex, has fallen in love with the courtesan next door, who happens to be a virgin, and desperately needs Pseudolus to help him save his bride-to-be from the Roman warrior to whom she has been sold, and who is coming for her.

In return for his help, Hero agrees to free Pseudolus from slavery. The resulting madcap misadventures of Pseudolus, with misunderstandings, mixed identities, and misdirection only increases the mayhem on stage and the merriment for the audience.

Arthur L. Johnson's production features a veteran student actor, Pete Gil, in the pivotal role of Pseudolus. His mousetrack master, Hero, is played by Brian Sweeney, and Hero's lady-love Philia is played by Jennifer Rogoshewski. Senex and Domina, Hero's parents, are played by Duane Lavalette and Andrea Saladino. The Roman neighbors, whose lives are thoroughly disrupted by Pseudolus' schemes are Lycus, the procurer of courtesans played by Todd Cohen and Erronious, played by Ryan Tracy.

The various courtesans are played by Grace Lee as Tintinnabula, Jamie Clark as Panacea, Sara Berkowitz as Vibrata, Carolyn Evans as Gymnasia, and Jennifer Evans and Kelli Isaakson as the Gemini. The all-purpose thespian Proteans are played by German Gomez, Will Chang and Troy Weissman. Hysterium, Senex's slave-in-chief is played by Joe Marchese.

The play is directed and choreographed by Fran Kleinfeld of New York City and the musical director and producer is Al Pendleton, vocal music teacher at the high school.

General admission tickets are $4 and are available at the door or from any cast member. Pre-school age children will be admitted free. For further information on the performances, call the high school main office at 382-0910.

Motorists beware

Health board offers services for female residents

The Roselle Park Board of Health, in cooperation with Union Hospital, will provide free pap smears for female residents over 19 years of age, living in Roselle Park, announced Vincent Accardi, president of the board. A breast examination will be conducted with the pap smears.

The screenings will take place April 13 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on April 20 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Participants must call for an appointment between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., Monday through Friday. The number is (908) 851-7014.

The pap smear is a simple, painless test for uterine cancer. In the test, cells that the body sheds from the uterus are collected on a cotton swab and examined under a microscope. If any abnormal or suspicious cells are found, further tests are conducted. Early detection of uterine cancer is very important. If left untreated, the abnormal cells multiply and spread to other parts of the body, eventually causing death.

April 15th Is Almost Here.

All-Area Girls' team a special unit

Gilliam, Johnson, Kukal, Tyler, Majchrzak, Kulick, Saunders, Freeman, DeLuca, Appello honored

By J.R. Parachini
and Peter Rosenthal

It was a very good year for some of the high school girls' basketball programs in the Worrall Community Newspapers' readership area and not so good for others.

However, all nine schools were well represented with talented players who distinguished themselves this season.

Those players are honored today for their efforts on our All-Area Girls' Basketball Team.

One area school, Linden, still has some unfinished business. The first-ever girls' three-peat Group 4 champions will play tomorrow night in the Tournament of Champions semifinals against last night's Delsea (Group 3 champs) vs. Middle Township (Group 2 champs) TOC first-round winner. Linden, the top-seed at 22-2, has never won the TOC.

Area teams Roselle Park (14-7), Dayton Regional (12-8) and Rahway (9-8) posted winning seasons and each made the state tournament in their respective sections.

Other records include Roselle Catholic (7-13), Hillside (5-10), Roselle (5-13), Johnson Regional (1-16) and Union (0-19).

The following high school girls' basketball teams covered by Worrall Community Newspapers include: Linden, Rahway, Roselle, Roselle Catholic, Johnson Regional, Union, Dayton Regional, Hillside and Roselle Park.

Worrall Community Newspapers include the: Linden Leader, Rahway Progress, Roselle Spectator, Clark Eagle, Union Leader, Springfield Leader, Mountainside Echo, Hillside Leader, Roselle Park Leader and Kenilworth Leader.

FIRST-TEAM

SIMONE GILLIAM, Linden: In leading the top-seeded Tigers to tomorrow night's Tournament of Champions semifinal round encounter, the senior guard had averages of 12 points, seven rebounds and eight assists. In the Group 4 championship game victory over Washington Township last Sunday, Gilliam scored 23 points to lead all scorers and once again showed why she is one of the state's premier players.

And she has been one of those premier players since first putting on a Linden uniform in 1990 according to her coach, Andy Eng.

"From the day Simone arrived at Linden we knew she was the one to lead us," Eng said.

And lead them she did. Gilliam's four-year varsity career consists of three consecutive Union County Tournament titles, four straight North Jersey, Section 2, Group 4 crowns and three consecutive Group 4 championships. Linden's 58-52 win over Washington Township assured it of becoming the first girls' team in state history to win three straight Group 4 titles.

The six-footer, who has signed a letter of intent to play for North Carolina next year, was a pre-season All-America selection and played to the billing. She was named the Group 4 Tournament MVP, a year after former teammate Tanecka Dixon won the same honor in her senior season before heading off to play at Kansas.

RAQIA JOHNSON, Linden: This senior guard-forward was also instrumental in the Tiger three-peat. She has been living in the shadow of both Dixon and Gilliam for her four years on varsity but anybody who has seen her play, ranks her as high as the other two.

Johnson, who has averaged 9.3 points a game to be best all-around player on the team, averages 14 points to go along with nine rebounds and five assists. As a swing player she split time between ball-handling, outside shooting and posting-up. It seemed no matter where she was when the ball was shot, she would always end up under the rim fighting for or getting the rebound.

"Her stats don't do her justice," Eng said. "She is the best kept secret in the state of New Jersey."

Johnson's versatility kept opposing defenses on their toes at all times. A team could not focus on Gilliam alone because if they did Johnson would be open for a jump shot. And if Johnson was not in shooting range she had the dribbling skills to find her way to the hoop or buy time for one of her teammates.

Her quickness and lean build, along with her stamina, made her ideal at almost any position. Johnson was just as happy playing defense and grabbing a key rebound as she was tickling the twine from 18 feet.

"She would start and be a major star on any team," Eng said. "But she's such a team player."

SHARON KUKAL, Linden: Being one of four girls at least 6-0 on a state championship basketball team, some might expect a player who averages 11 points and grabs six rebounds to get lost in the shuffle. But if anything separates this junior forward from the crowd, it's her hard work on the court.

A good example of her determination to be a winner occurred two weeks ago. Kukal came down hard on her ankle after taking a three-point shot near the end of the Tigers' North Jersey, Section 2, Group 4 victory over Livingston. She suffered a mild sprain and was listed as probable for the championship game with a small two nights later. Instead of sitting out and saving her ankle for the Group 4 final last Sunday, she played that Wednesday night and scored 10 points in the 75-53 victory over Ridgewood.

"Her game has improved every night, mainly through hard work and practice," Eng said.

Her persistence will have to continue next season as an even tougher job has been cut out for Kukal and the other underclassmen on the team. With Gilliam, Johnson and Wigfall graduating, each player must step up her performance two or three notches to have a chance at a fourth straight state title. The player with the least distance to travel to that next level, however, is Kukal. Her competitiveness and inside ability, along with her developing jump shot, should make the trip that much easier.

DETRIAH TYLER, Linden: The superlatives flow easily from Roselle coach Bob Giannotti's mouth when he talks about his senior guard. Tyler, a four-year varsity performer, is a 2-guard who can also play forward.

"She's a threat from outside and the fastest player on the team," Giannotti said. "She's the best defensive player and the team's toughest player."

Tyler scored 236 points this season for a 13.1 average, an improvement over her 10-point clip last season. She averaged 5.2 rebounds, 2.7 steals and 1.4 assists. The co-captain shot well from the line, hitting 35-of-67 chances for 52 percent accuracy.

Tyler's scoring average improved when she finished the season by scoring 25 and then 20 points in the team's final two contests.

RAQIA JOHNSON, Linden: This senior guard-forward was also instrumental in the Tiger three-peat. She has been living in the shadow of both Dixon and Gilliam for her four years on varsity but anybody who has seen her play, ranks her as high as the other two.

Johnson, who has averaged 9.3 points a game to be best all-around player on the team, averages 14 points to go along with nine rebounds and five assists. As a swing player she split time between ball-handling, outside shooting and posting-up. It seemed no matter where she was when the ball was shot, she would always end up under the rim fighting for or getting the rebound.

"Her stats don't do her justice," Eng said. "She is the best kept secret in the state of New Jersey."

Johnson's versatility kept opposing defenses on their toes at all times. A team could not focus on Gilliam alone because if they did Johnson would be open for a jump shot. And if Johnson was not in shooting range she had the dribbling skills to find her way to the hoop or buy time for one of her teammates.

Her quickness and lean build, along with her stamina, made her ideal at almost any position. Johnson was just as happy playing defense and grabbing a key rebound as she was tickling the twine from 18 feet.

"She would start and be a major star on any team," Eng said. "But she's such a team player."

SHARON KUKAL, Linden: Being one of four girls at least 6-0 on a state championship basketball team, some might expect a player who averages 11 points and grabs six rebounds to get lost in the shuffle. But if anything separates this junior forward from the crowd, it's her hard work on the court.

A good example of her determination to be a winner occurred two weeks ago. Kukal came down hard on her ankle after taking a three-point shot near the end of the Tigers' North Jersey, Section 2, Group 4 victory over Livingston. She suffered a mild sprain and was listed as probable for the championship game with a small two nights later. Instead of sitting out and saving her ankle for the Group 4 final last Sunday, she played that Wednesday night and scored 10 points in the 75-53 victory over Ridgewood.

"Her game has improved every night, mainly through hard work and practice," Eng said.

Her persistence will have to continue next season as an even tougher job has been cut out for Kukal and the other underclassmen on the team. With Gilliam, Johnson and Wigfall graduating, each player must step up her performance two or three notches to have a chance at a fourth straight state title. The player with the least distance to travel to that next level, however, is Kukal. Her competitiveness and inside ability, along with her developing jump shot, should make the trip that much easier.

DETRIAH TYLER, Linden: The superlatives flow easily from Roselle coach Bob Giannotti's mouth when he talks about his senior guard. Tyler, a four-year varsity performer, is a 2-guard who can also play forward.

"She's a threat from outside and the fastest player on the team," Giannotti said. "She's the best defensive player and the team's toughest player."

Tyler scored 236 points this season for a 13.1 average, an improvement over her 10-point clip last season. She averaged 5.2 rebounds, 2.7 steals and 1.4 assists. The co-captain shot well from the line, hitting 35-of-67 chances for 52 percent accuracy.

Tyler's scoring average improved when she finished the season by scoring 25 and then 20 points in the team's final two contests.

KELLY KULICK, Union: The junior guard, who is also an excellent bowler and softball player, paced Union in scoring and rebounding. She scored 224 points for a 12.5 average and had 133 rebounds for seven per game.

"Kelly is an outstanding player who does everything asked of her," Union coach Sue Gurwacke said. "She carries the team and is a real team-leader."

Kulick, a three-year varsity starter and team captain, hit on 54 percent of her shots from the field and 66 percent from the free throw line. She has led Union in scoring the past two seasons.

Kulick scored 18 points in Union's 51-35 loss to Dayton Regional in the UCT. In a 56-48 Watchung Conference loss at Scotch Plains, Kulick scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

"She's an excellent shooter and she can really take the ball to the basket," Gurwacke said. "Kelly has been a very strong player and for most of the year was playing out of position at point guard."

Kulick was an Honorable Mention All-Area selection her freshman and sophomore years.

MICHELE SAUNDERS, Dayton Regional: One of the best all around players in Union County, Saunders became the first girl or boy in Dayton Regional history this year to reach 1,000 points her junior year. The point guard scored 507 points this year, for a 25.4 average, and has 1,253 total. The school record, for boys and girls, was set by Mac Weinsteiman in 1968 with 1,037 — a record Saunders should break next year.

"She did most of her scoring against double and triple team defenses," Dayton Regional coach Art Krupp said. "She found out that she had to work harder at scoring because she wasn't going muscle up on anyone. It says a lot about her play and that she's still able to score the way she does."

Saunders reached the 1,000 point milestone by scoring 26 points in a loss to Governor Livingston, getting point 1,000 on a free throw. During one three-game stretch at the end of the season, Saunders scored 47, 30 and 30 points to help Dayton win two of three.

She began the year with a 45 point performance in a win over Johnson Regional. Saunders also averaged 5.8 steals and four rebounds a game.

Saunders, a three-year varsity starter, was a first-team All-Area selection last year as a sophomore and was second-team as a freshman. She has been named to the Union County Coaches Top 15 Team the past two seasons.

SHERRYTA FREEMAN, Hillside: The freshman guard played on the Hillside Community Center All-Star team when she was in 7th and 8th grade, the only girl playing on a boys team. So when she took over at point guard this year, Freeman was ready to go.

"I haven't seen any single athlete, in any sport, step into a varsity program as a freshman and be able to adapt and succeed at that level the way she has," Hillside coach Rob Porfido said. "When she's faced with a difficult situation, she not only has the skill to deal with it but also the heart of a lion."

With a great future ahead of her, the A student averaged a team high 24.5 points and scored 269 in 11 games. She also averaged 3.5 blocks per game and was selected to the Union County Coaches Top 15 team despite missing Hillside's final four games with a knee injury.

"When she gets hurt, she doesn't want to come out," Porfido said. "For a freshman, that shows real for of character and maturity. She has totally impressed me beyond words."

JESSICA DELUCA, Roselle Park: One of the most gifted three-sport athletes at Roselle Park, the senior forward had another excellent season on the court and even broke a school record she set last year. DeLuca connected on 33-three-point shots, one more than she had last season.

"There were times this year that teams felt they had to stop Jessica in order to beat us," Roselle Park coach Brian McNany said. "She's a very tough athlete."

DeLuca paced the team in scoring for the third time in four years and second straight season. She averaged 10 points and scored 212 for a career total of 722. DeLuca also averaged five rebounds and four assists.

"What more can you say about her ability?" McNany said. "She is also an excellent field hockey and softball player and is a very dedicated athlete."

DeLuca, a four-year varsity starter, was a first-team All-Area selection last year and honorable mention as a sophomore. She was named to the Union County Coaches Top 15 Team this year and last.

ADRIENNE APPELLO, Roselle Park: The talented senior guard was Roselle Park's second leading scorer with an 8.6 average and 182 points, 74 more than last year. Appello, a two-year starter and three-year varsity member, played the 2-guard mostly and filled in at the point.

"Adrienne is a very aggressive, hard working player," McNany said. "She comes to play every game and is willing to work hard on improving her game."

Appello also averaged five steals and four assists. In a key conference victory at home against New Providence, Appello sank two foul shots with four seconds left to give Roselle Park a 47-44 lead en route to a 47-46 victory. Appello, second-team All-Area last year, and DeLuca will be Roselle Park's representatives in the Union County Coaches All-Star Game.

Francesca, also a sophomore, lost in the Super Regions to finish his season at 20-6. His two-year record is 39-14.

Ron Bubnowski, a senior, made it the furthest of the four that qualified, reaching Saturday's wrestlebacks semifinals. He went 4-2 in the state tournament and finished the season at 26-3.

Giordano, a junior, was eliminated during Friday's wrestlebacks quarterfinals. He went 1-2 in the state tournament to finish the season at 27-5.

Barra, a senior, reached Saturday's wrestlebacks quarterfinals. He went 3-2 in the state tournament to finish the year 28-4. Barra was 1-1 in last year's state tournament, reaching the pre quarterfinal round en route to a 24-8 record.

Dave and Ron Bubnowski, Giordano and Barra all reached the Final 8 in the State in their weight classes by reaching the quarterfinals.

In the quarterfinals ...

Dave Bubnowski, seeded third at 103, had his first loss of the year to unseeded Aaron Taylor of Camden Catholic 4-0. Taylor lost in the semifinals and Ronnie Heszar of Kittatinny defeated Matt Tressler of Belvidere 7-4 in the final.

Ron Bubnowski, unseeded, fell to top-seeded Dave Hughes of Jefferson 4-2. Hughes went on to win the 145 title by defeating unseeded Mark Saul of Millville 10-2.

Giordano, unseeded, lost to top-seeded Tim Hakim of Randolph 18-11. Hakim, third in the state last year at 160, went on to win the 160 title by winning a 16-9 decision over Mark Bantis of Lyndhurst.

Barra, seeded sixth, was edged by Brian Brady of Madison Central 2-1. Brady, seeded third, went on to defeat Karl Haywood of Schalick 8-6 in overtime to win the 152 title. Brady won in the semifinals by disqualification over Todd Palmisano of Brick Memorial when the latter was ruled to have slammed Brady. Brady, with his arm in a sling after the match, managed to recover and win the championship. Palmisano, a heavy favorite to win the 152 weight class, finished second at 152 for the second consecutive season.

2 lookalikes? Actors are skeptical

By Bea Smith
Lifestyle Editor

Two actors, who are supposed to bear an amazing resemblance to each other, insist that they look nothing at all alike.

Yet — a theatergoer, who is watching a stage production of Charles Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities" at the Paper Mill Playhouse, can swear that Michael James Reed as Charles Darnay, and Christopher Innvar, who plays Sydney Carton, look like twins. Or at least brothers.

The plot of the Dickens' drama rests on the resemblance and similarity of these two people. Both actors aired their views on the subject during a recent conversation.

"I don't think Chris and I resemble each other exactly, although we have the same hair," Reed said. "What's working out though," he mused, "is that they're able to fix our wigs on perfectly, and it does make us look a little like each other."

"We really don't look alike," reiterated Innvar. "I'm much darker in coloring and I have dark eyes. James looks more Anglo. I have a more ethnic look."

The two actors share the same dressing room which suits them just fine, they said. Innvar explained that "we match our makeup together so we can get the same skin tone. We had to do different things to each other's faces to look alike. That's why it's important to share the same dressing room," he chuckled, "and the same mirror. We try to match our features. And of course, the wigs are similar."

Another big difference, they pointed out, was that Innvar has a dimple in his chin, and Reed does not. "We always put our heads together in the same mirror. I have to fill in a dimple in my chin. A couple of times I forgot to put my dimple in my chin," laughed Reed. "Chris has a really nice dimple, and I have to draw one in. At least, we both have high cheekbones. And I'm sure, an audience of 1,200 in the theater can be a little forgiving."

Still — the two look very much alike on stage.

"Actually," Reed said, "the Paper Mill people lucked out. Even though they didn't have it in real together, they did notice that we are the same height and we can bring our features close with the same makeup."

Both men had worked at the Paper Mill Playhouse at one time; Reed, two years ago, as Pip in "Great Expectations" and Innvar, recently, as Hubert Wilson in the musical workshop production of "The Red Badge of Courage."

Robert Johanson, who adapted "A Tale of Two Cities" to the stage and directed it, had been thinking about doing the Dickens production for a long time. "Actually," reminded Reed, "Robert said he had always wanted to do this adaptation and he always had me in mind for this role. They started with me — in a way. But the casting of Carton was difficult. He was the last to be cast."

Innvar added, "I had auditioned for 'Red Badge' in the fall. And the director of 'Red Badge,' Leland Ball, saw me in another play, and told Angelo Del Rossi, Angelo asked me if I could do an English accent. He thought I had all the qualities I needed to play Sydney Carton. Frankly, during 'Red Badge,' I had inquired if the role of Carton had been cast and was told it hadn't. So, when Angelo approached me about the role, I was ecstatic. At that point, the whole company was cast. When I got to the first rehearsal," he said, "I was disturbed by the fact that we don't look at all like each other, except for a physical similarity. But he's a great guy to work with."

"We're very little alike in real life," declared Innvar. "But we've become friends, and we get along well. Just before we go on stage, we look at each other in the mirror. We've gotten better at it — making ourselves look alike. Actually, one time backstage a friend of Michael's thought I was Michael."

Reed, who is fascinated by the Paper Mill, said "this theater is amazing, particularly the production values out there. It's nice to go back to a theater where you've worked before. And it's kind of nice to get to know some of the people. And I really like doing Dickens. I loved his books, and they're fun to bring to life.

"Robert," said Reed, "knows everything you need to know in terms of Dickens' writing, and descriptions. Robert just basically takes his words and puts them in a script. And it was just wonderful working with Michael Anania, the scenic designer, and Gregg Barnes, the costume designer. Gregg is always open to suggestions and he thinks of your comfort.

"You know," Reed said, "I would like to do other things at the Paper Mill. I don't do 'musicals,'" he explained, "so I'm kind of limited."

Innvar said he also finds it thrilling to work at the Paper Mill. "It's a wonderful theater. The people are terrific — a great staff — and their sincerity is monumental. Everything comes together so smoothly. I'd like to work at the Paper Mill again."

"And I," echoed Reed. "One day, I'll come back. It's a promise."

Christopher Innvar, left, who plays Sydney Carton, the dissolute Englishman, and Michael James Reed, who plays the exiled French nobleman, who are supposed to look like each other in 'A Tale of Two Cities' at the Paper Mill Playhouse, do not believe there is a real resemblance.

2 churches set musical

The stage musical, "Godspell," will be presented by the Open Door Theater at the Watchung Presbyterian Church, North Plainfield, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and at the First Presbyterian Church, Springfield, on March 25 and 26 at 8 p.m.

The Open Door Theater Inc., a non-profit community theater, has served the tri-county area for the past eight years. It was reported that six years ago, "Godspell" was originally staged at North Plainfield's Presbyterian Church by Liz Kendall, the director, and Ann Molinari, the music director. It was at that time that the two decided that they worked together so well, that they would form their own theater company.

The company, the Open Door Theater, was incorporated in 1988. The two have put together such shows as "Cinderella," "Rapunzel," "Little Red Riding Hood," "Little Red Hen," original plays, written by Kendall and friends of the company, such as Friendship I and Friendship II, children's concerts, and more recently, "Charlotte's Web."

Molinari was married in November 1993 to Matt Pitani, a member of the Open Door Theater.

Governor serves honorary 'chair'

Governor Christine Whitman will serve as honorary chairman of the Happiness Unlimited "Night at the Theater" fundraiser featuring the musical, "South Pacific" May 13 at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn. Proceeds from the event will go to benefit the organization's wish-fulfillment program which grants "wishes" to adult cancer patients at Union Hospital, Morristown Memorial Hospital and Overlook Hospital. All contributions are being matched, it was announced.

"We're very excited that Governor Whitman will serve as honorary chairman of this fund-raiser we're bringing to the community once again," Happiness Unlimited Co-founder Leigh Porges said. "Our last affair at the Paper Mill raised more than $100,000. These funds went to grant wishes, including trips to the Jersey Shore, a Broadway show, vacation cruises and even family reunions, for many cancer patients who otherwise, due to a lack of finances, would not have been able to afford such joyful experiences."

Anne DeLaney, also a Happiness co-founder, said in addition to raising funds for the organization, the event brings Happiness Unlimited supporters together. "This fund-raiser also serves as a pleasant and enjoyable way for all of our supporters to meet and share their common interest in making wishes come true for cancer patients," DeLaney said. "We really appreciate their devotion to this very worthy program."

Happiness Unlimited was established in late 1988 to alleviate the physical and emotional pain cancer patients experience by providing a joyful moment which they can cherish with friends and family. Believed to be the nation's first and only hospital-based wish-fulfillment program for adults, this not-for-profit organization operates under the auspices of the Union Hospital Foundation and is dedicated to providing the means to fulfill the longstanding wishes of selected adult cancer patients undergoing treatment. Happiness Unlimited provides full administrative coordination and assistance in the fulfillment of wishes.

"A wish granted by Happiness Unlimited can help cancer patients leave behind, even if for a short time, the mental anguish of their illness and given them an experience they will treasure with their loved ones," DeLaney said. The individual wishes are coordinated by a staff of volunteers, led by Porges and DeLaney. "The group coordinates all stages of the wish, from fund-raising to making travel plans," Porges said. "Our volunteers receive great satisfaction from the pleasure and surprise they bring to patients who are delighted to hear that their 'wishes' have been granted." To date, more than 400 wishes have been granted.

Various ticket packages and sponsorships are available for the Paper Mill Playhouse performance. For reservations and/or more information one can call the Union Hospital Foundation at (908) 687-1900, Ext. 2020 or the Morristown Memorial Hospital Foundation at (201) 971-7001.

'Annie' set in summer

The Linden Summer Playhouse has announced that its 1994 summer production will be "Annie." The musical will be directed by Marsha Watson, with musical direction by Ruby Robertson and choreography by Allison Dooley.

This year's production will be staged July 21, 22 and 23 at the Union County Arts Center, Rahway, due to the fact that the renovations to take place in Linden High School last summer are being done this summer instead.

Auditions for "Annie" will be held May 6 at 6 p.m. and May 7 at 11 a.m. Call backs will be on May 9 at 6 p.m. It was announced that all auditions will be held at the Reformed Church on Wood Avenue, Linden.

'Cinderella' musical staged in Rahway

A musical production of the "Cinderella" story will be presented on the stage of the 1,300-seat Union County Arts Center, Rahway, Sunday, in a one-time matinee performance. Though aimed mainly at children, the special Kean College production "promises something for the whole family." Curtain is at 3 p.m.

The show's 12-member cast includes Kean College students, freshmen through seniors, enrolled in a course on touring children's theater. Director Holly Logue, is an associate professor in Kean's Communication and Theater Department and a member of the county arts center's Board of Trustees.

The matinee, a benefit for the non-profit county arts center, is the first stop in a limited tour aimed at giving Kean theater students "a taste of the touring children's theater experience." The role of Cinderella will be played by Gretchen Nilsen. Scott Harrell of Union will be Prince Charming.

Scenery design is by Nadine Charlsen, and costumes by Dierdre Yates. Both are Kean faculty members.

Tickets are $6 and are available at the Arts Center box office weekdays during business hours, or can be reserved by phone at (908) 499-8226.

Bands are set

Kean College of New Jersey's concert and jazz bands will perform April 13 at 8 p.m. in the college's Wilkins Theater, Union. The program will be sponsored by the college's music department.

The Concert Band performs both traditional and familiar tunes, including Sousa marches and medleys from various Broadway shows. The Jazz Band brings the big band sound "to a wide spectrum of styles."

Admission is free, it was announced.

Further information can be obtained by calling the box office at 527-2337 or the music department at 527-2107/8.

horoscope

For week of March 20

ARIES — March 21 to April 20 Problems with relationships will be the cause of grief throughout the week. Keep hold of your temper or you'll make matters even worse. Things should cool off in time, so it's best to keep to yourself as much as possible. Resist the temptation to put off important work projects.

TAURUS — April 21 to May 21 Don't make a martyr of yourself this weekend. You can afford to take a break from work and have a good time for once. Single Taureans looking for love are bound to find it this week. A new relationship with a Libra is very possible. You can learn a lot from each other.

GEMINI — May 22 to June 21 A positive outlook on the week will make it that much more enjoyable. If you want a new place to live, this is the time to start the search. You could find that dream habitat you've always wanted. Watch what you say. You could hurt a friend's feelings without even knowing it.

CANCER — June 22 to July 22 Lending a friend a helping hand is a kind gesture, but be sure your good nature is not being taken advantage of. If you are involved in any type of creative work, success is certain. Your domestic nature will be appreciated by a loved one. Your knack for cooking impresses others.

LEO — July 23 to Aug. 23 Action is the key word in business this week. Something you've put to the side will need immediate attention. Avoid financial ventures that have not been thoroughly investigated. Love relationships will be the cause of confusion and grief. Your Leo pride may suffer.

VIRGO — Aug. 24 to Sept. 22 Your dedication and discipline is respected by others in your field. You may receive an award or honor in recognition of the work you've done. A family member will have important news on Wednesday. Be flexible when making weekend plans. Others have good ideas, too.

LIBRA — Sept. 23 to Oct. 23 A happy week in all areas. An opportunity for personal growth is likely to come your way. Your curious nature will make you jump at the chance to learn something new. A greater warmth will be present in a romantic relationship. You'll feel better about long-term plans. An Aquarian friend will have news.

SCORPIO — Oct. 24 to Nov. 22 Your partner or a close friend seems determined to misinterpret everything you say or do. This frustrating behavior could lead to difficulties at home. Use your sharp Scorpio tongue to put this person in his or her place. Encouraging news about a loan or mortgage will cheer you up.

SAGITTARIUS — Nov. 23 to Dec. 21 Do more listening than talking if you want to understand what's going on. This is especially important at home. If loved ones complain, "you never listen," take it seriously. It's probably true. A weekend getaway is likely. Be sure all details are in order before traveling anywhere.

CAPRICORN — Dec. 22 to Jan. 20 Confiding Capricorns will be caught in the act. This could lead to a very embarrassing scene, so it's best to steer clear of such conversations. Good news regarding finances is on the way. You may be able to make that special purchase. A friend will ask a special favor of you.

AQUARIUS — Jan. 21 to Feb. 18 Don't be shy when it comes to expressing feelings in a romantic relationship. They are welcome words to someone who's not quite sure of your intentions. Around midweek, your attention shifts to career concerns. Let the more tactful side of your personality prevail.

PISCES — Feb. 19 to March 20 An Aries associate is likely to disappoint you. You'll realize this person has a much different outlook on life than you do. You may decide to discontinue the friendship. A money-making venture turns out to be a waste of time. This may cause financial difficulties for you this week.

Benefit concert planned

"Where Is the Lady All in Pink?" a benefit concert of dances and other "amusements" for piano, organ, voice and chorus, will be presented Sunday at 4 p.m. in the First Unitarian Society of Plainfield, 724 Park Ave., Plainfield. Featured artists will be Victoria Griswold, piano, and Geoffrey Petersen, organ, with the choir of the First Unitarian Society.

"The King of Instruments," narrated by Timothy Moses, and dances for organ by William Albright, will be performed in honor of the composer's 50th birthday. Petersen also will present the premiere performance of "Dances Pastorale" for organ by Robert Paul. Both Albright and Paul are New Jersey composers.

Soloist Sally Beckwith will perform cabaret songs by Benjamin Britten and Will Auden, and the program will include Bulgarian dances by Bela Bartok.

The suggested donation to benefit The Friends of Music of the Society is $10, with $5 for seniors and students. For reservations and further information, one can call 722-8757 or 756-0750.

'Serenity' to exhibit at Malamut Gallery

"Serenity," an exhibit of color photos, paintings and weavings by Shirley R. Gray of Union, will be the next show at the Lee Malamut Gallery in the Union Public Library, Friberger Park, Morris Avenue.

The opening reception will be held April 10 from 2 to 4 p.m.. The exhibition will run through May 12. The public is invited, it was announced.

The theme is derived from Gray's feeling of the need to restore equilibrium in the chaos of daily living. "Beauty," she said, "is in the eye of the beholder. But too often the eye doesn't take time to behold. What we need is time to relax and truly see the beauty of our everyday lives."

She does her own photo developing and printing and prefers working in color to produce a natural setting as possible in the photos.

Gray has taught art privately and in the public and parochial school systems. In Metuchen, she taught art at the junior and senior high schools for nine years; in Linden, the gifted program for 19 years; in the Union Recreation Department for 25 years and in the Elizabeth Jewish Educational Program for two years, where she started the art program. She stimulated students to be original and creative by providing many innovative programs, it was reported.

Gray has won a Grand Prize, first place and second place for her photos in the Photography of Children contest in the Martin Luther King School in Plainfield. She also has exhibited in group shows in the Lee Malamut Gallery and Kean College of New Jersey, Union. Her weavings and paintings have also been exhibited at Coltsneck Gallery, Westfield Craft Show and Cherry Hill art shows. Many of her paintings and weavings are in private collection.

The Union Library's hours are Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Oldsmobile first to implement advanced navigation system

Oldsmobile will be the first automotive manufacturer in the United States to offer its customers the opportunity to use one of the most advanced navigation/information systems in the world.

The system, which will be available countrywide within the next two years, goes on sale in California this spring and will be offered in New York in the fall. It will, initially, be an option on Eighty Eight models.

An Oldsmobile exclusive, the all-new, high-tech navigation/information system offers motorists immediate, accurate route planning information, with easy-to-read graphics and clear audible instructions, in the comfort and security of their own vehicle.

The system combines state-of-the-art automotive electronics technology, high-quality satellite communications and a sophisticated roadway data base. It is the first production system in the United States to plan the most efficient route and then guide the driver to a given destination, using clear, concise graphics and "turn-by-turn" audible instructions.

A practical tool, which has applications both for business and pleasure, the system provides a definite enhancement both to effective time management and personal security.

Easy to operate, the Oldsmobile navigation/information system uses Global Positioning System satellites and advanced dead reckoning techniques, to determine a precise location. Utilizing information supplied by the driver, a sophisticated on-board computer calculates the most convenient route to a given destination.

The display unit, incorporating a four-inch active matrix color LCD screen, is attached to the instrument panel in a central location to allow both driver and front seat passenger access to the system and the information it provides.

The LCD screen displays information in color for ease of recognition, and the unit's fascia panel incorporates the seven input keys required to operate the system.

The unit can be quickly and easily removed and stowed for safe-keeping when not in use.

Operating simplicity was a major design criteria throughout the system's five-year development program.

Activating the navigation/information system requires the touch of a single key. The operator is then prompted, through a menu screen, to enter details of the desired destination. These details can either be a specific address, a road intersection, a place of public interest — tourist attraction, major business premises, hospitals, schools, service stations, etc — or even the destination of a previous journey held in the computer's memory.

The system will also permit the user to select a preferred routing method, utilizing expressways, for example, whenever possible.

By guiding the cursor and pressing an "enter" key, the operator pinpoints the required destination. The on-board computer, which is constantly aware of the vehicle's current location, calculates the most efficient route for the proposed journey in a matter of seconds.

The LCD screen will then display a map of the area with the proposed route highlighted in color. As the driver begins the journey, the distance to and direction of each turning manoeuvre is displayed on the screen is bold, easy-to-read graphics.

A unique feature of the Oldsmobile navigation/information system is a voice prompt which advises the driver as the designed turn approaches. This important feature ensures the driver's attention is not diverted from the road, allowing time to concentrate on signs and traffic conditions.

If a turn is missed, or cannot be taken, due to road construction work or traffic congestion, the system can re-route the journey at the touch of a single key.

The first application of the Oldsmobile navigation/information system — in a fleet of Eighty Eight models offered by Avis Rent-A-Car in San Jose, Calif. — has been so positive that the company intends to bring a total of 100 Oldsmobile Eighty Eight models into service in the San Francisco Bay area over the next few months.

John Forsythe, vice president — operations, talking about the pilot program, said, "The Oldsmobile navigation/information system has been well-received by our customers. Its ease of operation and uncomplicated routing instructions help create a much more relaxed environment. The system assists users to reach their destinations quickly and efficiently and that is an important consideration in our business."

"One of the major advantages of the system is its ability to pinpoint places which are of particular importance to newcomers to an area — tourist attractions, airports, retail stores, hotels, restaurants and gas stations — to name but a few — and, of course, the safety aspect of the system is critical," he said.

Forsythe said, "In today's highly competitive marketplace, we are setting ourselves apart by ensuring that our customers can count on having the opportunity to benefit from the use of the very latest technology."

The national introduction of the Oldsmobile navigation/information system will work in tandem with the expansion of the sophisticated roadway data base on which it depends. The entire United States will be mapped by the end of 1995.

John Rock, Oldsmobile's general manager, said, "The new Oldsmobile navigation/information system is an exciting application of the very latest navigation technology."

"We see the potential market for this device in both the business sector — realtors/traveling sales people, users the opportunity to enhance the driving experience with applications of technology which support today's lifestyles. We tend to travel greater distances and have all experienced the frustration of entering new cities and getting lost in a maze of streets and signs," he said.

Rock said, "The introduction and use of the system will help ensure that getting lost when driving in unfamiliar surroundings is very much a thing of the past. The ability to move directly from one place to another, without the need to spend time studying road maps, has a number of implications both in terms of efficiency and personal security. We are confident that the new Oldsmobile navigation/information system will quickly prove itself to be an invaluable tool, not only to the business community and the leisure industry, but to all those who have the opportunity to experience its capabilities."

Students ready play

By Dennis McCarthy
Staff Writer

There's still time to catch Florence M. Gaudineer School's presentation of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I," tonight and Friday night at 7:30 p.m.

The play, based on "Anna and the King of Siam" by Margaret Landon, features popular tunes such as "Getting to Know You," "I Whistle a Happy Tune" and "March of the Siamese Children."

"We are doing the full-length Broadway production," director Mark Majeski said Tuesday. Majeski is in his ninth year at Gaudineer, where he is the general/vocal music instructor. His other production credits include "The Pirates of Penzance," "Oliver," "Peter Pan" and "Cinderella."

"It's a really wonderful production," he said of "The King and I," "because it's a period piece. The play takes place in 1862 when Anna is hired by the King of Siam to teach in the royal palace. She becomes the King's influence in the King's life in terms of how to govern his kingdom. He's so in turmoil over the fact that his whole belief system has changed that he starves himself and finally dies of a broken heart."

The role of the King will be played by seventh-grader Evan Fischbein, who has also performed in "The Sound of Music" as a fifth grader and portrayed the Artful Dodger in "Oliver" last year.

Fischbein said he's no longer nervous performing in front of people. "I really have lost my fear of stages," he said. "When I was in fifth grade, I had really bad stage fright."

He plans to attend Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, where he said he "definitely wants to do plays." He added, "I have so much fun doing them."

Looking further into the future, he said, "I'm probably going to take acting classes in college. I want to become a lawyer. If I don't become a lawyer, that's what I want to be — an actor."

Twelve-year-old Jennifer Lisante said she's "getting a little nervous as the time draws near for her to assume

Board releases budget

By Dennis McCarthy
Staff Writer

The Board of Education approved a 1994-95 school budget of $10,943,110 Monday which represents an increase of 6.3 percent over the '93-94 revised budget of $10,874,823.

The tax cap for 1993-94 was 5.63 percent and has been reduced to 4.88 percent for '94-95.

"It's really a maintenance budget in terms of spending," Superintendent Gary L. Friedland said Tuesday. "It allows for the continuation of our program and it reallocates funds for the implementation of a new reading/language arts curriculum in four grade levels.

"It also provides for the development of an instructional library program at Walton School and allows for additional staff to accommodate the increased enrollment. Our enrollment has been going up by 4 percent per year," he said. It has increased by 400 students since 1986.

Friedland said the board has been able to balance the budget by allocating approximately $1 million in tuition and surplus revenue to provide for a minimum tax increase of approximately $67 for the average home owner.

The budget also calls for the implementation of the second year of the five-year facilities plan which allows for renovations such as the resurfacing of the Walton School playground and the addition of playground equipment there, a new gymnasium floor at Walton, asbestos abatement at James Caldwell School, replacement of the gymnasium ceiling and classroom intercom at Gaudineer, modifications at Thelma L. Sandmeier School to comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act, and the replacement of several floors in each school, he said.

"The brand has been working out the budget for five to six months," Friedland said. "They've dealt with a reverse of revisions in state aid and the adjustments that needed to be made because of that.

"Although we have not lost a substantial amount of money from state aid, the revenue is categorized quite differently than in prior years," he said. "Instead of receiving state aid, the district has received rebates from the state health benefit plan and projected pension savings, therefore the category has been assigned 'miscellaneous revenue' rather than state aid."

"What the state has done is not reduce our state aid in any dramatic way, but the assurances for the state aid are questionable in the future because of the way they are categorized as miscellaneous revenue. Much of it depends on legislation which has not yet passed," Friedland said. "There are some questions as to the appropriateness of accounting procedures."

Goldberg readies new version of 'Godspell'

By Heather MacGregor

It's the closest thing to a three-ring circus, and the part of P.T. Barnum is being played by musical director and producer Michal Goldberg.

Actually, it is not a circus at all. That was the way Goldberg summed up the action audiences will experience during an April performance of "Godspell" at Cranford High School.

There have been a lot of updates to the show, the five-year Springfield resident said during an interview in the middle of a Sunday evening rehearsal at the United Methodist Church, Cranford. The clowns have been eliminated, but the cast was expanded from 10 to 69 members, which range in age from 7 to 72, to better capture the characters and their environment. Originally when the play was on Broadway, 10 clowns made up the cast and dealt with emotion, but this version will deal with people, she explained.

Goldberg and some of the cast members took their dedication on the road to get a better understanding of the people they are about to portray. They joined a New Jersey-based volunteer organization and brought food and clothing to homeless people in New York.

It was an amazing experience that changed a lot of stereotypical views, Goldberg said, about some of the places and people she saw as she and her cast reunited their characters and cared for the homeless.

In the play, homeless people are the disciples of God and the theory that the meek shall inherit the earth is assumed, she said.

"It's very hard for people to understand. We did not want it to be 'Gidget Visits the Homeless.' We really wanted the pain to be there. We were going to start at a soup kitchen, but then we found Bridges," she said.

There were drugs, rats the size of cats and bridge walls full of graffiti. However, there was a certain beauty that developed from the pain. Under one of the bridges, she said, was a shrine to Jesus and the people were thankful for what was being done on their behalf.

Although she said she was scared at first, the inhibitions soon vanished as the fears subsided and the warm feeling of charity took hold.

"It was such an amazing experience. It was one of those experiences that changes your life. It was very special."

Since Goldberg was 5 years old, she has been involved in theater and production in some capacity. Her favorite part of her profession is working with people and making them work together for the mutual benefit of the group.

"It's like giving birth over and over again. You get so involved in a project

Instructors advocate art

By Dennis McCarthy
Staff Writer

Art instructors Janice Metzger, Paula Ehrich, Sand Hasselman and Bernard Buettner conducted a presentation on "What advocates can do for arts education" at last week's Union County Regional High School Board of Education meeting.

The presentation included a discussion concerning the importance of art education and slides of district students' art work with recorded comments from the students themselves on what art means to them.

The teachers expressed their goal to assemble a visual arts advocacy group which would meet four times a year to help support the visual arts program and seek grants and scholarships for students.

Paula Ehrich, art instructor at Governor Livingston Regional High School, said earlier this week, "Art is important for every child because it does teach creative problem solving and critical thinking skills.

"It also provides a change from a structured, teacher oriented class," she said, emphasizing the interactive aspect of art education for students.

Ehrich said the art advocates committee will serve to raise money for special programs and allow people in the community to be aware of what is taking place in the schools.

Jonathan Dayton Regional art instructor Janice Metzger said the art teachers are looking for "anyone with an interest in the arts, so that we can sound off ideas and set direction." She added that the art education program is growing and the instructors hope it will continue to do so.

As part of the growth and expansion of the regional district's art education program, an advanced placement course which requires two years of study will be implemented next year. Students participating in the program will prepare a portfolio consisting of 40 pieces of art work, 20 of which are mixed media such as drawings, pottery and three dimensional work, and 20 of which focus on a concentrated area of study with a specific theme.

The program differs from other Advanced Placement programs in that it takes two years to complete

Police seek carjackers

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

A 24-year-old New Providence woman's car was stolen Monday by three males who tried to run her car off Route 22 West as they forced her to change lanes and then hit the car with the one they were driving, police said.

The suspects, who have not been apprehended, allegedly came directly behind the woman flashing lights and beeping the horn, and when she changed lanes they pulled in front of her and slammed on the brakes. Her car then struck the suspect's car. When she went to a lighted parking lot to check for damage, the suspects pulled over, followed her and blocked in her car, police said.

When the woman entered the lot she tried to run for help, but noticed the suspects and went back to her car to lock the doors. Before she could get back into the car, one of the suspects got between her and the car door and
