School population expected to remain at its present level

By JANICE ADLER

Student enrollment in the borough's public schools is expected to stay at about its present level into the 1980s, according to a report given Tuesday night to about 10 members of the public at a meeting of the Mountainside Board of Education.

Walter H. Rupp, in giving the report, said that the borough is nearing its saturation point of 2,600 homes. The borough's birth rate is "drastically falling," he said. The school board should look for a slow rise, but nothing drastic, he added.

He added that the kindergarten rate is not dropping despite the drop in Mountainside's birth rate. This has been caused by people moving in since 1955. The borough's birth rate is about six per 1,000 population as compared with 18 per 1,000 nation-wide, Rupp said.

The kindergarten through eighth grade population reached its peak in 1960. At the present it is about what it was in the 1950s. As of now the present population in the schools is about 1,242. The projected enrollment figure for 1978 is 1,166 pupils in the borough's schools.

Rupp concluded that the new predictions will allow school space to be balanced. "We can concentrate on quality rather than expansion."

THE BOARD APPROVED sending sixth grade students to the Conservation and Environmental Studies Center at Brown's Mills during May. The youngsters will be divided into two groups. Each will spend two-and-a-half days at the center at a cost of $25 to each student plus transportation.

Board member Mrs. Grace Gutman and Dr. Levin Hanigan, superintendent of schools, went to the center Monday to check on the facilities. Mrs. Gutman showed slides of what the center offers. In addition, Hanigan made a survey to see if parents and students would be interested in going.

Nine replied that they would not go. About 105 said they would participate. Youngsters will not be obligated to attend. Those who stay behind will have a special program in the schools, Hanigan said.

In her report, Mrs. Gutman said that the program begins and ends in the classroom so that the students can get as much as possible out of the program. The youngsters will evaluate what they learned and will do follow-up studies.

Activities to be offered include soil studies, plant studies, studying animals and their homes, social studies, using weather instruments and learning map and compass skills. Recreation, including folk dancing, volleyball and films, is included.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, Alan Dehls, head of the board's contract negotiating committee, reported on talks for the 1971-72 teachers' contracts. He said that negotiations within the past few weeks have been meaningful and that the talks look hopeful. "I feel we are moving towards a settlement and hope to have more information in the near future," he added.

John McDonough, the board secretary, reminded voters who expect to be out of town for the board election on Feb. 9 to apply for their absentee ballots by 4 p.m. on Feb. 1. Anyone who expects to be out of state or elsewhere within the state with valid reasons can get an absentee ballot.

Reasons given for obtaining absentee ballots are illness or physical disability, observing a religious holiday, attending a resident school, college or university, or being unable to cast a

Teen drivers needed for March of Dimes

Teenage drivers are needed on either Jan. 16 or 17 to deliver materials to each block in town for the March of Dimes drive, according to Mrs. David M. Hart, chairman for the drive.

She said that the request is for the teens to work two hours on either day. Anyone who is interested can call Mrs. Hart at 233-4036.

Mrs. Hart tells of work done by Dimes drive

Mrs. David M. Hart, chairman of the Mountainside March of Dimes, this week outlined the work that is being done by the national foundation.

She said: "The National Foundation of the March of Dimes estimates that birth defects cost this nation about $80 billion annually in lost lifetime earnings. Some 15 million Americans suffer from birth defects that are serious enough to affect their daily lives. These include about three million mentally retarded, four million diabetics, one million with congenital bone, muscle or joint disease, 500,000 totally or partially blind, 750,000 with impaired hearing, 350,000 with congenital heart or circulatory defects, and 100,000 with severe speech problems.

"I would like to remind people that while these statistics might seem to make the problem insurmountable, that's what people once said about polio. Yet in a brief 23 years the March of Dimes led a successful assault on this scourge and eliminated it as a health problem in this country. New vaccines are reducing the toll of congenital rubella and RH blood disease.

"Some of the people convinced that many kinds of defects can be controlled include scientists of the March-of-Dimes Salk Institute, directors and staffs of more than 100 birth defects centers and embryologists, cellular biologists, geneticists and other members of the medical profession who are working with the support of grants from the March of Dimes."

Regional school budget up for hearing Tuesday

A tentative 1971-72 budget that shows a lower rate of increase than the current budget will be aired at a public hearing Tuesday by the Union County Regional High School District.

The budget totals $8,854,822, an increase of $584,878, or 7.1 percent. This compares to a 9.7 percent increase in the 1970-71 budget, and 13.4 percent in 1969-70.

The public hearing will be held at 8 p.m. in Halsey Hall at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, Mountain Avenue, Springfield.

The amount to be raised by local taxation is $7,409,393, an increase of $479,614 over the current budget.

A board spokesman said, however, this rate of increase has also declined. He noted that the amount to be raised from local taxation increased $975,529 in 1969-70, and $578,150 in the 1970-71 budget.

Registered voters in the six constituent districts will cast their ballots for the current expense and capital outlay portions of the budget in a special election to be held from 2 to 9 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 2.

Total current expense in the tentative budget is $8,142,246, an increase of $599,489. Capital outlay totals $105,282, a decrease of $2,153.

The debt service portion of the budget, which is not voted on, totals $607,294, a decrease of $12,458.

THE MAJOR INCREASE in current expense is for instruction, which includes teacher, supervisory and guidance personnel salaries, and the cost of all instructional supplies.

Totalling $5,536,230, the instruction portion of the budget would increase $560,775. Of this amount, almost $508,000 is for salaries, including contemplated wage hikes and hiring

Speth withdraws as board candidate

Reuben Charles Speth Jr. has withdrawn as a candidate for the Mountainside Board of Education. His name will not appear on the Feb. 9 ballot because he withdrew his name by the Jan. 8, 4 p.m. deadline.

He explained, "I am withdrawing my name as a candidate for the one open two-year term on the Mountainside Board of Education. My reasons for seeking the opening to fill the unexpired term of Frank A. Lombard were to promote ideas of efficiency and economy and to eliminate extravagance which seems to pervade the budget.

"Mrs. Pat Knodel seems to share these same goals and my withdrawal is in deference to her candidacy for the same seat on the board."

ALL PREPARED — Leonard B. Zucker, Springfield residential campaign chairman for the fund drive of the United Cerebral Palsy Association, shows an official kit of the type being carried by the 500 volunteers now calling on local families.

Zucker residential chairman in Cerebral Palsy campaign

Leonard B. Zucker has been named residential campaign chairman for the United Cerebral Palsy Association's annual fund raising campaign in Springfield. He urged Springfield residents and volunteers to strive for completion of the drive by this Monday.

Commenting on the importance of the house-to-house march, Zucker declared, "Not to provide the services that multihandicapped persons require is contributing to a serious health problem but not to its solution."

He said, "Therapy, developmental and educational programs can help multihandicapped children grow into relatively independent adults who are able to care for their own needs. Some may even become wage earners."

Zucker noted that it costs "about one-fourth as much to provide services for cerebral palsied clients within the local area as it does to provide them in an institutional setting. The benefits of having the child at home living with his family cannot be translated into dollars and cents. The home experiences and family relationships are what count most, and it simply cannot be duplicated in an institution no matter how dedicated and devoted the staff may be, UCP helps to make the home and family experiences as fulfilling as possible."

UCP provides medical, therapeutic, educational and developmental recreational and vocational programs for 200 cerebral palsy victims in the Union County area.

Zucker is an attorney with the firm of Zucker, Goldberg, Weiss. He is an attorney for the board of trustees of the Springfield Public Library. He is vice-president of the Springfield Republican Club and a member of the Cornell Club of Union County.

Vote-at-18 gets mixed reviews at UC

Students question its effect, legality and value

The recent decision by the United States Supreme Court ruling it legal for 18-year-olds to vote in federal elections has not been endorsed wholeheartedly by the younger voters as many people expected, according to an informal poll of student opinions and interviews.

Union College students -- liberals, moderates, and conservatives -- expressed criticism of the measure as passed and their reasons are as varied and numerous as Washington politicians themselves.

Some say the measure doesn't go far enough, while others say it's too much for a young person to handle. Others do not believe 18-year-olds should have the right to vote at all. Still others frown on the method by which the provision was enacted.

The one question Union College students did agree on was whether the new voters will have any impact on voting patterns in this country. "No, they won't," said Steven Carbone of Cranford, a sophomore who freely admits being an avid follower of the John Birch Society. In summing up the general attitude of the group, Carbone stated, "Eighteen-year-olds will vote more or less just like their parents -- no differences. While Eastern college students appear more liberal, there are those attending college in the South and Midwest, along with those who are members of the working class, who all tend to be more conservative. I don't expect any major upheavals in our country's direction."

THOMAS DUDDY of 150 Park place, Irvington, a staff member of the "Union Commuter," weekly student newspaper, said, "I've seen firsthand apathy in student government and unfortunately, I think our whole society is built the same way. Maybe now, we'll see a big rush to the polls, but once the novelty wears off, young people will vote along the same lines and in the same numbers as their parents -- which means usually a low turnout."

The new voting measure did generate some hope, however, among the students that the frustrations of the young might now find a constructive outlet.

"Youth can now express its views and channel its efforts into the system and by seeing some resultant action have faith restored in the system," said Miss Linda Sikora of 434 Fernwood Ter., Linden, secretary of the Union College Day Session Student Council.

Miss Maxine Holland of Elizabeth, who is involved in community and college social work, held a slightly different view. "Those seriously a part of campus movements -- who know why and what they want to change in our society, will still be involved. It's the outer fringe radicalism that may be gone, because all those members have complained about that they had no voice. Now, they do," she said.

ALTHOUGH BY 1972, most of today's college students will be eligible to vote anyway, all the students expressed hope that a future referendum will permit eighteen year olds to vote in state and local elections.

"It's absurd," stated Miss Holland, "that we could vote for President and senator, and not for township mayor or committeeman. Most of us are in closer contact with our community leaders than with the federal government, and if we elected our local officials, we might see results to our problems quicker and our efforts would be more rewarding."

Daddy echoed the same opinion as Miss Holland, saying he felt more power rested with the state and local governments rather than with the federal. However, Miss Sikora expressed some doubt that eighteen year olds would obtain this right.

"Although state officials are trying to get the voting referendum on New Jersey ballots again this November through a technicality, I doubt it would be passed by voters. Too many adults believe newspaper headlines religiously," Miss Sikora said.

SEVERAL UNION COLLEGE students do not approve the way Congress passed the voting rights act. They believe it was in violation of the constitution.

Carbone is utterly confused by the act and the recent Supreme Court decision.

"It states explicitly in the Constitution that one must be twenty-one years old to vote and it also says voting requirements shall be set by the states. I'll register, but I think we should have a constitutional amendment to raise it to twenty-one."

Ronald Thatcher of Westfield, a Vietnam veteran who has been voting for years, explained that he thinks the states rights provision will cause delay in granting national suffrage to eighteen year olds. "While I would like to see the younger voters participate in all elections, there's no doubt that the power to grant that right belongs to the states, not Congress or the Supreme Court."

PRESIDENT RICHARD NIXON didn't win any popularity contest with the new young voters either by supporting the measure. "It's all part of Mr. Nixon's strategy," believes Miss Holland. "Now, he can say I did something, so support me." He has been known to alienate some younger segments, and he's trying to appease those groups.

Daddy also holds the opinion the President tried to win support by approving the voting measure. "Until Nixon does something about the war and the economy and the cities and education, young people will not support him. We're not so blind as to accept the right to vote in place of real solutions to our problems."

To Publicity Chairmen:

Would you like some help in preparing newspaper releases? Write to this newspaper and ask for our "Tips on Submitting News Releases."

The President does care what the younger voters have to say though, maintains Carbone. "If you've noticed, since the Supreme Court made the decision, Agnew hasn't made any speeches," he quipped.

AT LEAST TWO Union College students disapprove of the entire voting issue completely. Miss Dyanne Partryka of Somerville, editor-in-chief of "The Paper," daily student publication, adamantly believes 18-year-olds should not vote at all.

"I think on the whole, the age group is too young and inexperienced to make such an important decision. I don't intend to register until I'm 21."

Miss Joy Aiello of Elizabeth, chairman of the Union College Gray Committee, a group dedicated to improving race relations, explained her attitude. "While today's students are more informed on current issues, an eighteen year old in high school or recently graduated does not have the practical experience needed to make a voting decision. At that age, peer pressure is still too influential."

"Twenty-one isn't really much better, but at least there are three more years of living in and understanding our world," stated Miss Aiello.

Newark State's EVE has help for bored housewives

The holidays are over, the children back in school, and mothers begin to think about their own lives. Help is available for women considering finding a job or going back to school or just wondering what to do at EVE's office at Newark State College in Union. EVE (Education, Volunteer, Employment Opportunities for Women) is a guidance and information center for women. Anyone wishing to talk over her vocational plans may call EVE's office at 289-4912 for an appointment. There is no charge for this public service of Newark State College's Division of Services.

During the fall, a number of teachers who no longer wish to teach contacted EVE seeking other outlets for their talents. In an attempt to help these people and others with a teaching background who are no longer interested in classroom work, EVE is organizing a former teachers group. Together these teachers will explore their mutual problems and interests. Sharing information may open up new possibilities.

The first meeting of the group will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 20, at 8 p.m. at Newark State College, Union. Anyone wishing to join may call 289-4500 or write to EVE, Newark State College, Union 07083 for a registration form.

Elizabeth Gas is moving into travel agency business

Elizabethtown Gas Co., which serves more than 180,000 gas customers in central and western New Jersey, is expanding into the travel agency field through the acquisition of Carol Travel, Inc., a long-established Plainfield travel agency.

According to Walter C. Money of Springfield, who will be president of the travel operation, Elizabethtown Gas plans to offer full travel services through many of its commercial offices and to establish a round-the-clock reservations and ticketing facility.

The new name for Carol will be E'town Travel and the main headquarters will continue to be at 200 W. 7th st., Plainfield. The agency is one of the largest in the state and has 16 employees.

Money said that John C. Appgar, the former president of Carol, will remain with the agency on a consulting basis. Gordon B. Marsh, who has been an officer of Carol for 14 years, will continue as vice-president and general manager. All other officers and employees will remain with the agency.

Money said entry of Elizabethtown Gas into the travel agency business has been under study since 1968 as part of the gas company's efforts to maximize the use of its commercial offices in Westfield, Elizabeth, Rahway, Metuchen, Perty, Amboy, Phillipsburg, Flemington, Newton, Washington and Bedminster.

"We hope to be able to have our offices in Westfield, Elizabeth and Bedminster providing complete travel services by March 1," Money said.

"We believe our gas customers recognize Elizabethtown for its reliable, prompt service, and we think E'town Travel can provide equally reliable, prompt service to the general public in the travel field," Money said.

Among the plans for E'town Travel are special group travel packages for New Jersey residents.

The initial program includes a series of ski trips to Vermont with departures from Westfield, Union and Ramsey. Both weekend and week-long trips are available under the plan.

Money, who is also vice-president of Elizabethtown Gas, has been associated with airline operations and has previously been active in group tour packaging.

Michael J. Magnolia, general chairman of the non-partisan committee for the Walter G. Halpin testimonial dinner to be held at the Winfield Scott Hotel, Elizabeth, on Friday, Jan. 22, said this week that arrangements have been completed for the affair.

Ticket chairman Wilbert Miles reported the paid sale of 410 tickets to date. Catherine Pearson, committee treasurer, urged those who desire to reserve tables of 10 to contact Vincent Festa, arrangements chairman.

UC dramatists present Albee, Genet 1-act plays

Two one-act plays by contemporary authors are slated for production in February by the Union County Dramatic Society under the direction of Donald H. Julian, a member of the English Department and playwright.

"The Death of Bessie Smith," by Edward Albee, the young alienated writer cynical of modern society, and "The Maids," a short play by Jean Genet, also an avant-garde playwright will be enacted by the Dramatic Society.

Eight performances, all open to the public, are scheduled beginning Wednesday, Feb. 10, at the Campus Center Theatre on the Cranford campus of Union College. The other performances will be held on Thursday, Feb. 11; Friday, Feb. 12; Sunday, Feb. 14 (two performances); Wednesday, Feb. 17; Thursday, Feb. 18; and Saturday, Feb. 20.

Julian will serve as director for the two plays. Three of his own plays have been produced at the Skyloft Theatre in Chicago and Cafe La Mama in New York City and two have been published. His play, "A Coffee Ground Among the Tea Leaves," is scheduled for publication this year. A graduate of De Paul University with a master's degree in fine arts, Julian is working on a history of movies and theatre for children.

March 31 is the last date to sign up for Medicare

"An important date is coming up for many persons age 65 and over who have not joined the supplemental medical insurance part of Medicare," said Ralph W. Jones, district manager of the Elizabeth Social Security office, said this week.

"March 31 is the day to remember, because it represents the final chance to sign up for those people born between Oct. 2, 1902, and Sept. 30, 1903 and gives another chance to enroll for others who have not done so," Jones said.

"The present three month period, January, February and March, is considered to be a general enrollment opportunity for those eligible elderly persons who previously failed to have this valuable protection against medical expenses," Jones stated. "The following guidelines should be closely checked to see if the March 31 deadline applies to you."

1. Age 65 from October 1967 through September 1968 -- last chance.
2. Persons who had the insurance but let it end in 1968 -- last chance.
3. Age 65 from October 1968 through September 1969 -- one more chance.
4. Persons who had the insurance but let it end in 1969 -- one more chance.

Jones noted that people who never signed up and were age 65 before October 1967, cannot do so now as their cut-off date was last year. The present closing date applies only to those persons reaching age 65, since then, and are not covered by the supplemental medical insurance.

"The district manager said financial hardships usually accompany sickness, especially with our senior citizens. This burden is eased by belonging to the medical part of Medicare because it helps pay doctor bills and many other expensive medical services.

"New members as well as those now enrolled, are required to pay a monthly charge. Your coverage will begin in July if you sign up now, he continued. Do not pass it up, if this is your last chance."

Further information about this Social Security medical insurance program may be obtained from the Social Security district office, 268 N. Broad st., Elizabeth. Office hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. The telephone number is 351-3200.

Exams scheduled for substitute posts in area post offices

Tests for substitute clerk-carrier positions in most post offices in Union County will be held every Friday evening at 6 in the Elizabeth main post office, according to Michael Steffan, examiner-in-charge for the U. S. Civil Service Board of Examiners.

Steffan said there is no residence requirement for the positions, which have a starting pay of $3.51 an hour. Applicants who qualify will be considered for employment according to the rating attained in the examination.

The examination is open to men and women. "Absolutely no experience will be required," said Steffan, "what skills you will need will be cultivated on the job."

Steffan's office also has available information on a wide variety of non-postal government positions. Applications for both postal and non-postal jobs are available at the office located on the second floor of the Elizabeth post building (room 301) at 310 N. Broad st. Steffan's said information may also be obtained by calling him at 352-8400, ext. 24.

Students volunteer for Palsy Telethon

The Union College Service Club and Alpha Phi Omega national service fraternity have volunteered their memberships to serve as volunteers for the 20th annual United Cerebral Palsy Telethon to be seen on Channel 9, WOR-TV, the weekend of Jan. 30 and 31.

The volunteers will serve in four-hour shifts from 10 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 30, to about 6 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 31 at the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark. They will take telephone calls, record pledges, process pledges and, in the words of Mrs. Sylvia Hirschorn, executive director of the United Cerebral Palsy Association of New Jersey, Inc., "do all the myriad jobs that are needed to make the Telethon a success."

Dennis James will be master of ceremonies and Steve Lawrence and Edie Gorme will act as host and hostess.

Union College students have been serving as volunteers for the Cerebral Palsy Telethon since 1959 when the Union County Cerebral Palsy Association took over Union College's former home in Cranford for its Cerebral Palsy Center.

FOR THE BIRDS

By FARRIS S. SWACKHAMER, professor, Union College

On the last day of 1970 two champions of conservation in New Jersey retired -- Frank W. McLaughlin as executive director and Doris G. McLaughlin as office manager of the New Jersey Audubon Society. Although they will be absent from the headquarters of the society in Franklin Lakes, Frank will continue as second vice-president and Doris as secretary and treasurer. Somehow I can't visualize their retiring from conservation, however. Now they'll have time to do the things they want to do and I'm sure these things will have to do with wildlife.

From his early boyhood in rural southern New Jersey Frank has been interested in and fascinated by the outdoors. Long hours of field work, careful observation of wildlife going about its day-to-day chores and studying and reading have made him an outstanding authority on the natural history of his state.

Frank has been the society's executive director for 20 years. Prior to his tenure he was associated with the Sanctuary Department of the National Audubon Society and later with the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia.

Recounting Frank's many accomplishments would take far more than the space allotted me in this column. One of his many activities concerned black-necked stilts. They nested regularly in the state up to 1810. Then for some reason they disappeared. In 1952 a project involving placing stilt eggs in the nests of willets began with Frank's help. The eggs came from Florida. The success of the transplant is still in doubt but the birds have been sighted, on Long Island, in Massachusetts and in Rumson in recent years.

A LITTLE BOOKLET that ought to be in the library or better still, the pocket of every birder in the state is the "Check List for Birds of New Jersey." After much checking and cross-checking, this thin volume, which lists 307 species, was designed and compiled by Frank and published by the New Jersey Department of Conservation and Economic Development.

In early 1959, Frank organized a five-year investigation attempting to determine the cause of the decimation of the bald eagle population in our state. As a result of this study, it appeared that DDT was at the root of the trouble. Based partly on this work, Frank testified before the New Jersey Pesticide Council on a variety of insecticides and their effects on the avian population of the state.

During Frank's tenure, areas in the state set aside as sanctuary for birds, animals, and plants grew to 171 acres. These include the Lucine L. Lorrimer Sanctuary in Franklin Lakes, and others in Bernardsville, Middle Township, Erma and Upper Montclair.

I hope "New Jersey Nature Notes" won't mind if I repeat their wish --

"May the road rise to meet you,
"May the wind be always at your back
"May the sun shine warm upon your face,
"And the rains fall soft upon your fields,
"And, until we meet again,
"May God hold you in the palm of His hand."

Kiehn introduces resolution urging U.S. welfare role

A resolution introduced in the state legislature by Assemblyman Herbert H. Kiehn of District 9-C asks the federal government to assume the entire cost and administration of welfare and relief programs which now are under the jurisdiction of state, county and municipal governments.

Assemblyman Kiehn, noting that the resolution is being considered by a committee for action in the 1971 legislature, suggested that citizens who favor having the federal government take the burden of welfare costs from the state and local taxpayers write to him. The assemblyman said the letters from citizens would be presented to the committee for its consideration.

The resolution was introduced, Kiehn said, because he believes that if the federal government assumes the costs of welfare and the administration of relief programs, the benefits to all worthy welfare recipients would be uniform throughout the country. The establishment of a federally-operated welfare program would discourage migration by welfare recipients from one area to another where the benefits would be greater.

Kiehn said the resolution declares that "the federal government alone has sufficient jurisdiction and economic resources to provide a uniform, effective and equitable system of welfare and relief laws."

The Union County assemblyman noted that the number of relief recipients in this state has increased by 40 percent in the past 12 months and that this increase has placed more of a burden on the state's taxpayers. To meet the added cost, he said, New Jersey's appropriation for welfare will have to be increased by 50 percent. Gov. William T. Cahill has warned that the state is confronted with a welfare crisis, the assemblyman stated.

Winners selected in speech contest

"Christmas Readings" was the theme of the 15th annual speech contest which was held on Jan. 6 in the Deerfield Middle School, Mountain Side. Nine contestants, representatives of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, read stories of their own choice.

Also participating in the contest were: Ben Getzler, narrator; Laurie Danielczyk, "The Little Match Girl"; "Patti Liberman, "The Gift of the Magi"; Randi Sacharow, "Editha's Christmas Burglar"; Peter Witmer, "Christmas Carol"; Robin Anderson, "The Voyage of the Wee Red Cap," and Joan Ragno, "Christmas."

Highlanders lack the scoring thrust needed to reverse basketball results

BY BILL LOVETT
If the Gov. Livingston basketball team has proven anything this season, it is that they are consistent. Unfortunately, that consistency has not been a positive factor: Regional has yet to get their offense out of the 40-45 point range, which is not enough to win ball games. Ironically, this was vividly demonstrated last week when the Highlanders lost to Hillside and Cranford by identical 57-45 scores.

Both games, as the scores show, were remarkably similar. The patterns of each contest were identical, with Gov. Livingston playing evenly except for a few brief lapses which cost them both games. Regional's offense has yet to get untracked, having scored more than 50 points only twice in nine games this year.

This, as such as anything, points out how much the graduation of Jeff Burdette has hurt Regional. Last season, almost every game Gov. Livingston was able to break 50, and once six additional teachers to meet increased enrollments.

The rest of the increase in instruction will pay for all instructional supplies, everything from paper clip and textbooks (up about $1 per student), to increased costs for computer services.

The mathematics department plans to expand its instructional computer program to involve more students. Also, the guidance departments would expand their computer service, which now gives students help in selecting colleges, to include vocational and scholarship aid. The system, which would be expanded to the David Breauley Regional High School, will give students at all four high schools the opportunity to use the computerized selection system, whether they are college bound or not.

Also, there is a $73,664 increase in fixed charges, which will pay for increases in Social Security, property and liability insurance, employee health insurance, tuition and the renting of the portable classrooms now in use at three of the four schools.

The tentative budget is open for public inspection at the office of the school board secretary at the Dayton building during regular office hours until the public hearing. The Regional District comprises Berkeley Heights, Clark, Cranford, Kenton, Mountain Side and Springfield, and operates four high schools.

guards were appointed for one-year terms. They are special police, George Novaks, Robert Mullin, Robert Arterburn, James J. Debie, Woodrow Owens, Fred Hirtle, Robert Hanawald and Patrick Fredrico and crossing guards, Erwin W. Groner, Frank Sieder, Elsie Lorber, John Redale, Mary Roche and John Pischcheda. Officers for the fire department were approved. They are chief, Bruce Geiger; first assistant chief, Henry Potter; and second assistant chief, George Heitmann.

The interest rate on delinquent taxes and assessments that are owed to the borough was set at eight percent on the first $1,000 due. Any amount in excess of $1,000 will be at 12 percent. Interest will not be charged on payments made within 10 days from the date they are due.

In addition, Hoffarth, Judge Bauer and all employees handling funds for the borough were bonded. Temporary appropriations for wages, salaries and other expenses were made to carry over until the municipal budget is approved.

scored 92. Without Burdette, the Highlanders have appeared confused, and unable to blend together, looking very disjointed on offense. Burdette had a remarkable talent of being able to fuse Regional together, and his ability to penetrate offensively set his teammates up for shots. More importantly, Gov. Livingston is unable to fastbreak effectively this year, a method which the Highlanders used to score a good share of their points in the Burdette era.

As of this writing, Coach Frank Petruza has yet to settle on a pair of guards that will move the offense. He is using junior Curt Mohns, who should end up high scorer on the team, and alternating three seniors, Richie Weils, Kevin Corcoran, and Chuck Rundlet at the other spot.

Hillside, which had beaten Regional earlier this year, 59-40, cruised again after a tough first quarter. Behind some fine shooting by Mohns, the Highlanders trailed by only a point, 11-10, at the end of the opening quarter. The Comets went on an 8-0 tear at the beginning of the second period, and were never headed, as regional could not get their offense moving. Mohns had a good game, scoring 19 points, his high for the season, while Don Reynolds had 16.

IT WAS ALSO dismal week for Regional's wrestling team, which dropped a tough 25-15 decision to Scotch Plains. It was a tough loss for the Highlanders, whose record dropped to 1-1. They were close until the final match.

Winners for Gov. Livingston were Stu Brown, Dana Sommers, Kevin Keyes, Mike Hart, and Bob Zetterstrom, who nearly pulled out an upset from the Watching Conference favorites. Zetterstrom's victory pulled his team within five, and Regional could have salvaged a tie with a pin in the final match. The pin came, but it was the Highlander's Kevin Dowling who fell victim to Tim Smith, the Raider's fine heavyweight.

Second ski trip planned Jan. 23

The Mountain Side Recreation Department will hold its second ski trip to Vernon Valley on Saturday, Jan. 23. The trip is for boys and girls in grades 8 through 12.

Registration will be held this Saturday morning from 9:30 to noon in the Deerfield School lobby. Cost of the trip including transportation and all ski lifts will be $9.50, payable at time of registration.

The Recreation Department will sponsor a youth swim party at the Garden State Pool, Berkeley Heights, on Friday night, Jan. 22, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. The cost of the trip including transportation and swimming will be $2 per person.

Registration will be held this Saturday morning from 9:30 to noon in the Deerfield School lobby. The Recreation Department said it may cancel this trip if registration is insufficient.

Ginsbergs to recite

Poetry readings by Louis Ginsberg and his son, Allen, the only father-son poetry team making the college campus circuit, will be broadcast over Upsala College's FM radio station, WEMU, on Jan. 26 at 6 p.m.

The readings were taped at Montclair State College last month for the one-hour special broadcast.

The poetry of the Ginsbergs is of wide contrast. The 75-year-old father offers more conventional readings while his 45-year old son is an avant garde poet specializing in experimental works.

Allen is best known as having been one of the founders of the "Beat Movement in America" in the late 50's. He has published eight books and has appeared at over 100 colleges and universities throughout the world.

MODERNIZATION WITH IMAGINATION

25 years in the making.
We'd like to thank the makers of the other new economy cars for giving us such a nice head start. It gave us time to develop an inspection system, so rigorously scrupulous that it expects every VW to pass 16,000 examinations.
It allowed us to find out (at a reasonably scientific pace) how we could double our horsepower without doubling the cost of your horsepower. (The VW still gets about 26 miles to the gallon and requests only a smidgen of oil.)
It permitted us to work on things that didn't even have to do with the actual making of the car. Medi-car, the Volkswagen Diagnosis System, for example. Electronic equipment that can spot trouble in a car before it gets to be trouble. When you buy a new VW, you get 4 free Medi-car checkups.
Of course, it took great fortitude to resist squandering our time onphony styling improvements.
The beetle looks just as good (or bad) as it did 25 years ago.

2 injured in accident

Two persons were slightly injured Monday when a car driven by Dr. Frank Burstein of Springfield collided with a car driven by Manuel N. Fortunato of Union on Rt. 22 East near the Springfield line, according to Mountain Side police. The Union County Park Police took Fortunato and Conale Fortunato of Union, a passenger in his car, to Overlook Hospital, Summit, where they were treated and discharged. Police said Fortunato was traveling east on the highway in the right lane. As his car approached the Tower Steak House Burstein's car began to pull out of the restaurant's parking lot and cross the highway to pull onto Mountain Avenue.

CANTOR NORMAN SUMMERS

Springfield temples plan two lectures on Jewish music

Cantor Norman Summers of Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, Short Hills, will deliver two lectures on Jewish music at Temple Shalom, Springfield, this Tuesday and Feb. 2 at 8:30 p.m. Cantor Summers is the second speaker in the twice-monthly lecture-discussion series on Jewish cultural subjects jointly sponsored by Temple Shalom and Temple Beth Ahm.

This Tuesday, Cantor Summers will discuss "Jewish Music - from Antiquity to 1600." Two weeks later, on Feb. 2, the cantor will lecture on "Jewish Music - 1600 to Today."

Cantor Summers recently completed 15 years of service in the cantorate and 10 years with B'nai Jeshurun. Born in Toronto, Cantor Summers was a soloist with the largest reform congregation in Canada at the age of 17. He went on to study at the University of Toronto Royal Conservatory of Music and graduated from the Hebrew Union College-School of Sacred Music in New York. He made his debut at Carnegie Hall after winning several grants and awards. He has appeared with leading symphony orchestras.

A member of the faculty of the Hebrew Union College-School of Sacred Music, Cantor Summers also serves as president of the American Conference of Cantors. He has composed two cantatas, an oratorio and a Sabbath eve service.

University Women plan fashion show, luncheon program

The Mountainside branch of the American Association of University Women will hold its annual luncheon-fashion show on Feb. 3 at noon at the Chanticleer in Millburn. Mrs. Howard Rhodes, this year's chairman, has announced her committee included the following members: Mrs. Freeman Miller, decorations; Mrs. Nicholas Bradshaw, door prizes; Mrs. Alan Lowe, souvenir program, and Mrs. David Hart, publicity.

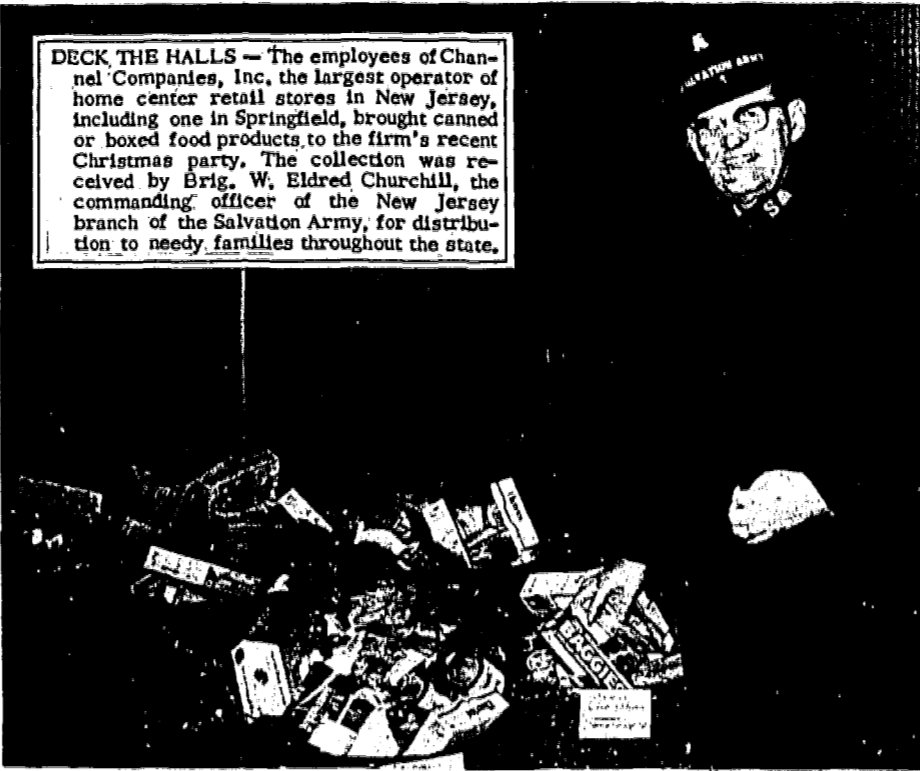

Professional models from B. Altman and Co. will display the spring line of new fashions. Two new features have been added to the club's plans this year. There will be a central baby-sitting service available at a small charge for young mothers who would otherwise not be able to attend. Recognizing that many senior citizens do not wish to drive in inclement weather, the club will provide transportation for those desiring it. The entire proceeds from the luncheon-fashion show each year have helped provide college scholarships for local girls.

For information on tickets, readers may call Mrs. Rhodes at 233-3005.

Souders will manage Lafayette alumni fund

EASTON, Pa. -- H. Richard Souders of 1533 Long Meadow, Mountainside, N.J., is serving as a class fund manager for the 1970-71 Lafayette College annual alumni fund.

As fund manager for the Class of 1959, Souders will be seeking funds from his classmates throughout the United States to help meet the annual fund goal of $225,000.

DECK THE HALLS -- The employees of Channel Companies, Inc. the largest operator of home center retail stores in New Jersey, including one in Springfield, brought canned or boxed food products to the firm's recent Christmas party. Richard T. Brown of Rumson was convicted on two charges Monday by Judge Max Sherman in Springfield Municipal Court. He was fined $65 for leaving the scene of an accident. He also was fined $40 for hitting a parked car.

Michael Hydock of 1 Shunpike rd., Springfield, was fined $40 for manifesting the symptoms of being under the influence of a depressant while in the back seat of a car. He also was placed on six months' probation.

Andy D. Slobodien of West Orange paid $10 for discharging a BB gun on the property between the Thelma Sandmeier and Edward Walton Schools.

Other convictions and fines: Phillip L. Myer of North Plainfield, $30 for going 70 miles per hour in a 50-mile zone on Rt. 22; Ollie V. Colson Jr. of Summit, $35 for going 50 mph in a 25-mile zone on Milltown road; Stephen M. Kotz of Pompton Lakes, $25 for passing a red light, and Charles Hayes of Newark, a 10-day suspended jail sentence for driving while on the revoked list.

Legawiec's music will be performed

"Fun For Five," a suite of three musical sketches for string quintet by Walter Legawiec, of Mountainside, will be performed by five members of the Roosevelt Junior High School orchestra in Westfield at their winter concert tomorrow at 8 p.m.

The sketches are called "Pastels," "Dancers" and "Helter Skelter." The members of the performing group are Dianne Prebluda, first violin; John Flounoy, second violin; Karen Piat, viola; Neil Rutter, cello, and Cathy Rowe, bass.

Legawiec's First Piano Sonata and Five Mazurkas were recently performed in New York at the Kosciuszko Foundation by the young American pianist, Ian Shapinsky.

Thought for food

The simplest combination of salad greens becomes a glamour gal when dressed with a tangy blend of buttermilk and Roquefort cheese. Stir 1 cup buttermilk into 1 cup mayonnaise until smooth and thoroughly blended. Fold in 3 ounces Roquefort cheese, crumbled. Cover and refrigerate until ready to use.

Give your beef patties the kidglove treatment-pat but don't spank. And don't overcook.

Remove only the bacon strips you plan to cook for breakfast; then pop the package right back in the refrigerator. Plastic or rubber spatulas are great for separating bacon slices.

Excellent with a meat entree is Zucchini Medley. In a frying pan, cook thin-sliced zucchini in very small amount of water until tender crisp. Drain. Add tomato slices and a little Parmesan; season with butter or margarine, dried basil and salt.

United Fund hits two-thirds of goal with $5,000 to go

Harvey A. Schramm, general chairman of the Springfield United Fund, this week stated that the fund-raising campaign has resulted in attaining two-thirds of the $15,000 goal. About $10,000 has been raised.

Schramm reminded Springfield residents who have not yet returned their pledges to the fund "to please do so as soon as possible so that the current campaign may be terminated."

Schramm stated: "The response to our solicitation which was made solely through the mails without door-to-door requests, has been marvelous. I would like to express my sincere appreciation for the cooperation of the residents of Springfield in response to this type of solicitation."

The chairman added that the participating agencies "are in dire need for the funds collected and allocation cannot be made until all pledges have been received."

Mrs. Rosencrantz; had antique shop

Private services were held Monday for Mrs. Jane Vreeland Rosencrantz of 1260 Rt. 22, Mountainside, who died Saturday at home. She was 98.

Mrs. Rosencrantz was born in Jersey City and moved to Cranford in 1882. She moved to Mountainside 36 years ago. Her father, the late Cornelius Vreeland, had been the civil engineer in Westfield for many years. She and her daughter, Miss Walda Rosencrantz, with whom she lived, had operated the Dutch Even Antiques Shop at their residence for more than 30 years.

She is also survived by a son, Charick, and another daughter, Mrs. Richard L. Tomlinson, both of Cranford; three grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Wizards to work basketball 'magic'

The Harlem Wizards are back and the faculty men from Gov. Livingston are ready for the challenge when they meet for a basketball game at the Regional High School gym on Wednesday at 8 p.m.

The game is sponsored by the Varsity Club, and proceeds from an evening of unconventional sport will go toward the club's scholarship fund.

The Harlem Wizards are an offshoot of the Globetrotters and have been entertaining audiences with their basketball prowess and antics in Globetrotter style for many years. This will be their third appearance on the Gov. Livingston court. Admission will be $1.50, with tickets available from any member of the Varsity Club or through the high school athletic office.

United Cerebral Palsy drive is entering its second week

The 1971 United Cerebral Palsy fund drive is in its second week. Mountainside's general campaign chairman, Mrs. Arthur Vennert, said that her hopes for the drive's success have been bolstered by the efforts of 200 volunteers who are carrying the official kit from home to home.

She expressed her appreciation to the men and women of Mountainside for their loyalty and dedication to the cerebral palsy cause. The campaign chairman also noted that the response of local citizens underscored their belief in and support for what cerebral palsy is doing for the handicapped here.

It is a tribute to Mountainside's faith that these children and adults with multiple disabilities will continue to have the opportunity to grow and learn, to develop and to achieve as much as their limitations will permit, she said.

Mrs. Vennert has asked Mountainside residents who were away when volunteers called to mail their contributions to the organization in the special gift envelope volunteers left at their door. Monday has been designated as the completion date for the drive.

Income from the cerebral palsy campaign is used to provide medical, therapeutic, educational, developmental, recreational and vocational programs for about 200 cerebral palsy victims in the Union County area. In addition to providing local services to victims of the debilitating condition, the cerebral palsy group gives 25 percent of its income to support a national research program to discover the means for preventing the disorder.

UCP supported scientific studies are now stressing problems in obstetrical care and delivery, premature birth, viral diseases during pregnancy, and hyperbilirubinemia, a condition believed to be responsible for jaundice in the newborn. Babies with high bilirubin levels in their blood are especially prone to nervous system abnormalities, Mrs. Vennert concluded.

Mountainside man is chosen trustee of Y in Westfield

Robert J. Lincoln of 1555 Coles ave., Mountainside, has been elected to the Westfield YMCA board of trustees. The election of Lincoln, which took place at the December meeting of the board of directors, was announced this week by Robert E. Ohaus, president of the board.

Lincoln, who retired in 1963 as eastern regional manager of the Square D Company, has long been active in civic work. President of the YMCA from 1963 to 1966, he served as co-chairman of the future development and endowment fund in 1967.

Recalling that Lincoln spearheaded the development fund drive with R. R. Barrett Jr., Dr. Edward G. Bourne, president of the Y board of trustees, said:

"Our success sprang in large part from his leadership. We welcome a return of his administrative ability, his productivity, his fund of ideas. I am sure he will make an excellent addition."

Lincoln retired last year as chairman of the board of Overlook Hospital, a post he held for two years, having previously been a hospital trustee for the preceding six years.

A former general chairman of the United Fund, he is a member of the Presbyterian Church where he has served as treasurer and as an usher. He is a member of the board of directors of Computone Systems, Inc., of Atlas Masonic Lodge and of the Echo Lake Country Club.

He and his wife, Linda, have two children: Mrs. R. S. Klein, the wife of a Denver physician, and Jim Lincoln, a pilot with Reading Aviation. They have two grandchildren.

Y aide will lead phys ed society

Harry L. Leshner Jr., director of physical education services for the Westfield YMCA, has been elected a regional officer of the Physical Directors Society. Leshner, 34, will assume the duties of second vice-president of the Middle Atlantic Region of the society when he attends its conference January 20 at Penn State.

A major assignment during his three-year term will be to help clarify goals and set guidelines for the society and its members. A 1960 physical education graduate of Lock Haven State College, Lock Haven, Pa., Leshner did postgraduate work toward certification as a YMCA senior director at Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., Sir George Williams College, Toronto, and Ursanis, Collegeville, Pa.

THIS WEEK'S HEALTH NEWS

By FRED GREENBERG, R.P.

An "instant" artificial skin that can be worn for months or years has been developed. The synthetic material, which has the soft look and feel of velvet, was developed as a covering for denuded areas in the event of severe life-threatening burns. Like human skin, it is made of three layers. An advantage is function. Where normal skin would take several months to grow back, an instant prosthetic skin would permit early motion in the hands, for example. Eventually it would be replaced by transplanted human skin, but this would come at a time physiologically right for the patient.

Antenna twisting will bring in state's TV station

With New Jersey's own television stations coming on the air in 1971, viewers should think of getting improved antenna systems if they do not already get crisp UHF reception.

John Wilner, director of engineering at the new TV facility, said anyone living within 35 miles of Trenton should be able to pick up a good color picture from the first station to be in operation in March, WNJT-TV, Channel 52.

Wilner, formerly of Linden and one of the leading television engineering authorities in the country, has recruited one of the top engineering staffs available to operate the technical end of the new venture by the New Jersey Public Broadcasting Authority.

The authority, which will operate four full color UHF stations, has the finest RCA color equipment available, said Wilner. It's picture quality will be as crisp and clear as any station now being received in the state, he said.

But Wilner reminded citizens that they should make some checks to determine if they are getting good color UHF signals from the other UHF stations in their areas.

WILNER SAID THE best way to check is with the little loop UHF antenna which usually comes with the color TV set. If a good picture is being received on that small antenna, there should be little or no difficulty in receiving the state station in the area.

If an outside roof antenna is needed, then the following should be considered:

— See if a good color picture can be received: Tune the VHF tuner (the one with the numbers 2-13 to the (U) position, (for TV sets sold after 1965). Then slowly rotate the UHF tuning knob (numbers 14-83) to the approximate location of the channel desired. When tuning Channel 52, turn just past 48 and bring in the best picture and sound level with the fine tuning knob.

— If you receive service from either Pennsylvania or New York UHF stations, your problems are not over if you have an outside antenna. You may have to point your antenna in an entirely different direction from that required for either Pennsylvania or New York. With Channel 52, a transmitter in Trenton, the antenna must naturally point to the Trenton station for good clear reception.

Wilner recommended the purchase of a small inexpensive (about $15) UHF antenna to be mounted below your normal antenna and connected to your present lead-in and pointed toward the new Trenton station. (This can be done by slowly rotating the antenna while someone watches the TV set, signaling when the picture has the best quality).

In some cases, it will be necessary to run a separate lead-in from the UHF antenna to the TV set. A small switch should be used to direct the new antenna signal to the UHF tuner, Wilner added.

WILNER FEELS THE best answer is a rotator for the entire antenna, but this is more expensive. Either method will bring crisp, clear reception in most every part of the WNJT service area, he said.

The engineer pointed out that an external antenna will not be needed at all in most situations. "The small loop antenna that comes with all new sets will work fine," he stated.

Since there will be four UHF stations located throughout the state, there will be overlapping signals, enabling many state citizens to receive one or more of the stations. Since most of the programming will be the same, one need only select the channel that delivers the best signal.

-Thursday, January 14, 1971.

There will be times, however, when all of the stations will have periodic local programs such as football games, governmental hearings and features.

A native of Linden, Wilner is regarded as one of the top television engineers in the country.

Insurance institute is expanded

Upsala College's Institute of Insurance Education will offer three new courses, starting in late January.

The schedule for the 13-week courses follows: General principles of insurance, starting Jan. 26 and held each subsequent Tuesday from 6 to 8 p.m. in Puder Hall (Room 204); principles of fire, marine and allied lines insurance, starting Jan. 27 and held each subsequent Wednesday from 6 to 8 p.m. in Beck Hall (Room 203); principles of casualty insurance and security bonding, starting Jan. 28 and held each subsequent Thursday in Puder Hall (Room 207).

Registration will take place on the first night of class at the classroom location.

The Institute of Insurance Education was inaugurated last Sept. 15 by Upsala College, East Orange, in cooperation with major insurance companies. The courses are open to individuals with some insurance experience who are working for insurance corporations, agencies and insurance departments of other organizations and schools. It is designed to advance their professional knowledge of insurance principles and concepts.

Upsala Professor Kallin Tuan is director of the institute which is offering the courses preparatory for examinations by the Insurance Institute of America and the Life Office Management Association.

NEA, NJEA oppose open negotiations

Organizational leaders at the state and national level have advised teachers to avoid negotiations with their school board that are open to the public.

"Public negotiations would tend to prolong debate and hinder agreement," said Dr. Frederick L. Hipp, executive secretary of the 66,000-member New Jersey Education Association.

NJEA specifically decried a decision by the Somerville Board of Education to let a local taxpayers' group attend its negotiating sessions with the Somerville Federated Teachers Association.

Said Rudolph A. Lawton of Trenton, East Coast regional representative for the National Education Association: "Throughout the nation, teachers and school boards understand the term negotiations to mean private talks."

The public interest is best served when school boards do their deliberating in private, Dr. Hipp said. A parent would not want to discuss his child's school problems in front of an audience. Nor could the school board satisfactorily interview a prospective superintendent of schools in public.

"By their very nature," Dr. Hipp said, "negotiations are private. The presence of spectators would inhibit the free exchange of ideas. A public presence might polarize the negotiations, forcing both sides into inflexible positions."

Judge picked for program

The National Science Foundation has designated Harlan J. Perlis of Teaneck as a judge for the recently created NSF student-initiated research program.

Dr. Perlis, a professor of electrical engineering at Newark College of Engineering, will travel to Washington, D.C. later this month to review proposals by students for research on environmental and socio-economic problems. A biologist, a physicist, a sociologist and a student comprise the remainder of the judging panel.

Student-initiated research grants will be awarded by the National Science Foundation to college students as a means of involving undergraduates directly in the quest for solutions to problems of the environment.

Rutgers prof plans 'recreation' for rats

Experiments in Prague to study heart health

Although he's not particularly fond of rats, James J. McGrath of the Rutgers College of Agriculture and Environmental Science takes them mountain climbing and swimming. Developing a recreational program for rats is not what's on his mind — he's interested in their hearts, and your health.

Dr. McGrath, an assistant professor of physiology, specializes in environmental physiology, and specifically those factors in the environment which affect the heart by weakening it or strengthening it. Late this month he will be sent by the National Academy of Sciences to spend six months with the Czech Academy of Science in Prague. There he'll continue work on his current project, the effect of long-term hypoxia on hearts.

Hypoxia is the scientific term for what happens when an animal gets less than the normal amount of oxygen. Exercise results in mild hypoxia. The "thin" air at high altitudes produces it too.

"I'm trying to find out if long-term hypoxia has a beneficial effect on the heart," Dr. McGrath explains. "One way he can determine if a heart has benefited by becoming stronger is to see how it reacts to an experimental heart attack."

HEART ATTACKS, simply put, occur when an area of the heart is deprived of blood. When this deprivation occurs, the tissue dies. Scar tissue then forms to replace the dead tissue and if the damage is not too severe, the heart keeps functioning.

So, Dr. McGrath reasoned, a rat with a heart strengthened by long-term hypoxic exposure will show less scarring than a heart not strengthened in this way.

Dr. McGrath set out to produce long-term hypoxia in rats. He put a group of rats in special chambers that approximated oxygen levels at altitudes of 18,200 feet. As a basis of comparison, Mt. Everest has an altitude of 29,000 feet; New York City, 55.

He kept the rats in the chamber for three weeks, with "breathers" in our normal atmosphere for 30 minutes every two days while their cages were cleaned and more food and water was put in. At the end of the three weeks he injected a drug that induces a "heart attack" into both the high altitude rats and a twin group of rats that had been living at sea level conditions.

"Interestingly enough, the animals exposed to high altitude are more resistant to the effects of a heart attack than the control group," Dr. McGrath says. "The hearts of the control animals showed massive scarring, whereas the high altitude animals had much less severe heart attacks."

THE NEXT PHASE of his research will involve swimming tests for rats.

Dr. McGrath has discovered in preliminary experiments that their first swimming lesson usually lasts only 90 seconds, at the end of which they are exhausted and he must rescue them. The next day they'll swim for one and three-quarters to two minutes. Eventually they can swim for 45 minutes to an hour.

"This is a tricky business, making rats swim," he says. "They have the tendency to float, so you have to tie weights to their tails to make them swim."

The third phase of the research will involve experiments in "altered environments," such as environments that contain a high amount of carbon monoxide.

His studies in Czechoslovakia will concentrate on the underlying changes that take place in heart muscle as animals are subjected to moderate hypoxia over a period of time.

"I'd like to know more about what accounts for this increased resistance to heart attack," he says.

"One thing is for sure, though — as the heart becomes stronger through long term exposure to hypoxia, it's less prone to heart attack."

This will be followed by a panel discussion on "Resource Users in Conflict?" moderated by Grant P. Walton, chairman, Department of Environmental Resources, Rutgers College of Agriculture and Environmental Science.

Etienne van de Walle, research demographer, Office of Population Research, Princeton University, will comment on population and resource needs. "The Case for Preservation" will be presented by Gary A. Soucie, conservation director, Friends of the Earth, New York, N.Y. The multiple use concept will be discussed by Dr. T. C. 15 religious sculptures in Bible House exhibit

Fifteen religious sculptures by artist Moissaye Marans will be displayed in the gallery of Bible House, headquarters of the American Bible Society, 1865 Broadway, New York City, through March 1.

One work to be on display, "Swords into Ploughshares," a dramatic interpretation of Isaiah 2:4, is a smaller model of the bronze sculpture at the Community Church of New York City. This piece was selected by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission as the official emblem for its Ploughshares Program.

Former Columbia prexy to be speaker at Rider

Dr. Andrew W. Cordier, former Columbia University president and high-ranking United Nations official, will be the principal speaker during Rider College's winter commencement exercises Sunday in Trenton.

Also Dean of the School of International Affairs at Columbia for the past eight years, Dr. Cordier will receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Rider during ceremonies for some 150 graduating seniors and graduate students.

Dr. Cordier served as acting president of Columbia after the retirement of Dr. Grayson Kirk in mid-1968 and became the university's 15th president a year later. He was appointed president emeritus and trustee emeritus last September.

Dr. Cordier, whose appearance at Rider is in line with a year-long series of speakers in connection with the 25th anniversary of the UN, will base his talk on the college's current academic theme: "Change: Progress or Decay."

TOMORROW YOU CAN WASH YOUR CLOTHES WITHOUT POLLUTING A RIVER

When you are finished with the sudsy water that gets your clothes "whiter than white" and "cleaner than clean" it goes on to suffocate fish, corrode your plumbing, poison your drinking water, and to make rivers into smelly swamps and bogs.

The chief offenders are phosphates and, more recently, a nitrogen compound called NTA. We've eliminated them, along with enzymes (they can cause skin irritations), and created a new laundry detergent called ECOLOG.

ECOLOG gives you clean, fresh smelling clothes without harming fish, corroding your plumbing, poisoning drinking water or killing rivers. And because it's bio-degradable, it doesn't go on making suds after it leaves your washer.

If you'd like to do a little something to save the earth, ECOLOG is one little way. But don't stop there.

- No phosphates.
- No NTA (Nitrilotriacetate).
- No enzymes.

Parkway sets traffic record but accident, injury rates fall

The Garden State Parkway carried a record volume of more than 158 million vehicles during 1970, but traffic accidents and injuries dropped in the same period to a level below the year before. Chairman John P. Gallagher of the New Jersey Highway Authority, which operates the Parkway, said this week in a year-end report that all categories of traffic and travel on the toll road were up over 1969 while its safety record showed generally reduced totals and ratios of accidents. The 158,702,000 vehicles which used the Parkway in 1970 represented an increase of 3.75 percent from the previous year's volume and traveled on the road for an aggregate distance of some 2 billion, 276 thousand miles.

The latter total was also up by some 6 per cent over the year before.

The 173-mile Parkway had a numerical and rate (per 100 million travel miles) decreases in total accidents, injury accidents and personal injuries. The reduced numbers ranged all the way up to a 10.6 percent drop for injury mishaps.

Exception to the downward trend among traffic casualties was in fatal accidents where 27 deaths resulted from 25 mishaps as compared to 24 fatalities from 21 collisions the year before.

The fatality rate of 1.19 per 100 million miles of travel for 1970 still left the Parkway close to its nationally low toll road mark in 1969. The Parkway has been a perennial safety leader among toll roads of the nation, with a top rating in nine of the previous 13 years. The final rates for all the superhighways last year are due in March.

Seton Hall gets grant

The National Science Foundation has awarded Seton Hall University an institutional grant of $14,905, according to John A. Cole, assistant to the president for financial affairs.

Cole said that such grants are designed to help maintain a strong academic base for United States sciences by assisting institutions of higher education to follow their own plans and priorities.

Seton Hall will be able to use the funds for direct cost of its science activities in keeping with the philosophy of the National Science Foundation in aiding colleges and universities in developing and maintaining strong, well-balanced programs of research and science education.

Space sold out for boating show

Show director Jerry Gasque reported this week that exhibit space is sold out for the 18th annual Jersey Coast Boat Show in Convention Hall, Asbury Park, from Feb. 13 to 21.

"It is obvious," Gasque said, "that boating industry firms have confidence in the New Jersey market and sales potential for 1971, as indicated by their total subscription to advertise and show their boats and equipment here."

A 'mobility crisis' among aged declared by Senate committee

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Senate Special Committee on Aging declared this week that transportation — or mobility — problems of older Americans have reached the crisis stage.

Furthermore, said the committee in a report, there is "a genuine possibility that today's problems are likely to be worsened by living patterns already far different from those which existed when today's elderly were young."

Senator Williams urges 'reasonable' solutions of issues

MIAMI BEACH — U.S. Senator Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D-N.J.) said this week that "this is no time for high-powered political gamesmanship," and urged that Congress and the Administration work together to develop "reasonable solutions" to the nation's problems.

His comments came in remarks at the annual convention of the National Association for Non-Profit Retirement Housing at the Seville Hotel, Miami Beach.

"The Executive Branch and the Congress have a heavy responsibility during the next two years," Williams said. "We have many big issues to talk out; we have many overriding social issues. We have a population of Americans who are worried about inflation and recession at one and the same time.

"This is no time for high-powered political gamesmanship," he declared. "This is no time for ducking of issues and calling of names. This is no time for distorting facts about the needs of Americans and pulling the props out from under programs that are meant to help them. And this is certainly no time for doing nothing because we cannot do it all.

"What we need instead," Williams declared, "are reasonable solutions to problems that can be made manageable if we keep our heads and, when necessary, listen to our hearts."

Such an approach, he said, should be followed in an effort to strengthen programs of housing for the elderly.

Issued at what the committee describes as a "crucial moment," the report recommends steps to be taken in 1971 in conjunction with the implementation of the Urban Mass Transportation Assistance Act of 1970, and with preparations for a White House Conference on Aging scheduled for November-December 1971.

The report also asks the Social Security Administration to provide cost estimates for providing Medicare coverage for some forms of transportation related to health care.

Senator Harrison Williams, (D-N.J.) committee chairman, said in a foreword to the report that many aged Americans live in bitter isolation, whether they are in rural areas, in the midst of cities, or "on the 'Elm streets' or 'Ridgecrest Lanes' of supposedly comfortable suburbs."

Recalling one witness who said that many elderly persons live under a form of "solitary confinement," Williams added:

"... many elderly couples or single persons have told us they live almost entirely within their own walls, overwhelmed by illness, despair, or fear of crime.

"This report has been prepared partially to sound an alarm about social isolation among the elderly.

"But more fundamentally, its purpose is to document the fact that transportation inadequacies are intensifying many other difficult problems faced by the elderly in the United States today. . . . Without mobility, they are jettied much else."

Williams, author of the mass transportation bill signed into law last October, said that the special needs of the elderly should receive due consideration by designers of new facilities.

"Here again," he said, "the Congress has a responsibility. It must make certain that all citizens are served, and served well, by the development of new transit lines."

Much the same conclusion is reached in the report, which resists "the concept that entirely separate transportation systems should be designed, and put into operation for the elderly and the handicapped." Instead, the committee states, "The most feasible form of assistance to the elderly will be that which is also of assistance to all other Americans."

As a "wedge" or a force for the "webbing" of services, improved transportation for the elderly can also provide impetus for improved services to other age groups, (its "multiplier effect" . . . could well spill over to help the younger people of today."

Howard reports record increases

The Howard Savings Institution, New Jersey's first billion dollar bank, this week reported a record deposit growth for 1970 of $121,693,950. This was $107,238,480 over last year's figure. The deposit growth was the greatest for any one year of the Howard's 113 years of business, according to John W. Kress, chairman of the board. Total assets reached $1,030,254,277 during the bank's most eventful year, up $122,010,057.

Howard depositors received over $49,138,775 in dividends during 1970, which was $10,846,903 more than they received in 1969. Total dividends paid since the institution was founded in 1857 reached $444,753,001 at year-end.

The Howard opened three new branches — in East Orange, North Arlington and Nutley — during 1970 and relocated its Snyvesant Village Branch in Irvington.

There were 401,320 depositors as of Dec. 31, representing an increase of more than 33,400 over the previous year. The mortgage portfolio of 41,944 loans consisted of 18,204 conventional, 13,174 Veterans Administration and 10,566 F.H.A. loans. Mortgage loans totaled $648,697,043 at the year-end.

Lab institute for juniors

Chemistry research can be exciting for high school students and Rider College's chemistry department hopes to demonstrate this during a novel six-week institute next summer.

A National Science Foundation grant of $9,506 — one of two received recently by the college — will enable 16 selected high school juniors to take part in a series of experiments in the Rider chemistry labs on the Trenton campus.

"Too many high school students are subject to short lab periods with limited facilities," says Dr. John E. Sheats, associate professor of chemistry and director of the new program. "They dismiss chemistry as a possible career before they've given it a fair chance."

"Our program is designed to show students that preparation of colorful compounds with unusual structures can be exciting and challenging."

The program which begins June 21, will be open to any exceptional junior with strong science orientation who has had two years of math and a single year of chemistry.

Aliens in U.S. must register

The United States Immigration and Naturalization Service reminded all aliens in New Jersey this week that only a few weeks remain in which non-citizens must file their annual address reports as required by law.

Dominick F. Rinaldi, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service for New Jersey, pointed out that address reports are available at all post offices for the convenience of non-citizens required to report their address.

Rinaldi urged all aliens to report their address before the end of January, "willful failure to do so may lead to serious penalties," he said.

Rinaldi also said that "while our non-citizens enjoy the benefits of our society, they are expected to abide by all laws and regulations." The director stated that aliens who are convicted of crimes involving moral turpitude or narcotics violations may become subject to deportation.

SUNDAY'S SERMON
DON'T QUIT
In the locker room of a small college there hangs this sign: "We cannot always win - but we shall never cease to try." It's a pretty fair motto. It is a fine attitude. It could be a way of life. We cannot always win. Such is not the way of life. But we can always try. To try is the great virtue. So long as we try, whatever the odds, we are accomplishing something. Sometimes we may snatch an unexpected victory; sometimes we settle with the mere satisfaction of having finished the race on our feet while others were falling by the wayside.
When reason tells us that a cause is hopeless, we can easily quit and rest by the side of the road. Or, we can go on, pushing forward with the idea there is some merit in finishing that which you started.
Whatever the game, whatever the task, compete to the best of your ability. And, don't let yourself believe that it wasn't worthwhile if you didn't win it all.

State bond plan under fire from taxpayer group

Citing the "latest example" of "backdoor financing" in state government circumventing the constitutional requirement that state debt proposals be subjected to voter approval, the New Jersey Taxpayers Association this week called upon the 1971 state legislature to improve capital planning and procedures to avoid crisis financing and to halt the shifting of state responsibility to local units of government.

In an information bulletin, NJTA pointed out that the 1970 legislature authorized counties to sell up to $40 million of county bonds to raise money for the state's share of county college construction costs, rather than appropriate funds from current receipts or authorize additional state bonds subject to voter approval. The act promises that the state will reimburse the counties in future years for payment of principal and interest on the bonds.

Starting in 1964 the state met its share of county college construction costs from current revenue, the bulletin showed. Then the state shifted from pay-as-you-go by allocating $47 million from a state bond program approved by voters in 1968. Now, to meet increased costs of county college construction plus additional projects, the legislature has transferred borrowing responsibility to the counties and promised state repayment of principal and interest on up to $40 million of county bonds. This avoids need for voter approval of a state bond issue and postpones a decision on new current revenue for the purpose.

THE PROCEDURE, the association said, follows "other techniques of constitutional circumvention" recently employed to avoid State borrowing subject to public referendum. Previous examples were listed as: (1) Construction of state office buildings by state pension funds with costs to be repaid, with interest, by the state; (2) Long-term lease of privately constructed office buildings to be paid through annual state appropriations; and (3) Creation of independent state authorities to issue bonds for construction of capital facilities.

Questioning "the wisdom of continued backdoor financing" for capital purposes, the association noted effects of such procedures. It also called for reform of "numerous weaknesses" in the legislative process including failure to utilize legislative committees; absence of a procedure to refer legislation with cost impact to the Joint Legislative Appropriations Committee, and enactment of such legislation under emergency rules disregarding normal legislative safeguards.

"New Jersey greatly needs a well organized and functioning capital planning and budgeting procedure," the association declared. "For over a decade, NJTA has called for a strong executive capital planning process with adequate staff linked to the governor's office and operating in close cooperation with the legislative agencies and committees. As long as adequate planning and review of capital needs are neglected, emergencies will continue to arise forcing the state to consider constitutional circumvention or large bond issues as the only financing alternatives."

The statement concluded that "citizens can no longer be expected to tolerate waste and inefficiency in our state government resulting from hasty, inadequate planning and decision."

AFGHANISTAN REVISITED
Afghanistan revisited is a surprise. The changes in six years in just the capital area alone is amazing, let alone what must be in the back country.

It was in 1964 that I first saw Afghanistan and it was the highlight of a round-the-world trip, with all the excitement of a frontier. This year I saw it again and while it was marvelous to be there again it had lost its wildness and had become tame. Tourism had arrived in force and the Kabul Intercontinental reigned on high.

Perhaps the best way to tell the difference is to tell it now it was that time and then to tell it how it was this time.

AFGHANISTAN IN 1964 felt like the middle of nowhere. We had traveled for approximately 200 miles all day through lonely bleak territory and arrived in the capital city of Kabul in a blinding snowstorm. We were surprised to find steam heat in the hotel. Camel caravans passed the front entrance. It was like nothing else.

We WERE in the middle of nowhere. Afghanistan is bordered on the east by China, Kashmir and West Pakistan, known in part as the "Northwest Frontier" consisting mainly of the Pakhtun and Baluch tribal areas; on the south it is bordered by West Pakistan also; on the west by Iran; on the north by the USSR with the cities of Samarkand and Tashkent just over the border; and running right down the middle of the country is the overpowering, mighty Hindu Kush mountain range, and that's a lot of no-where, believe me.

But it was such an adventure! In the year 1964 our study mission group of about 15 traveled westward out of Peshawar, West Pakistan. We did not take a plane as usual from one country to another, but the "low" road—and that meant going through the famous Khyber Pass, the dangerous Northwest Frontier, the "Thieves Market" and a handful of other surprises.

Our schedule called for a trip overland by car from Peshawar, Pakistan, to Kabul, Afghanistan, a total distance of about 200 miles and an entire day's journey; it was about 80 degrees when we left Peshawar and it was snowing at 6:30 when we arrived in Kabul. It was quite a trip.

THE FIRST THRILL was the pass itself which begins 11 miles out of Peshawar, and then in the middle of the pass, some 30 miles from the city in a desolate section of country, was the "thieves market."

We called it the "thieves market" although the Pakistanis call it the market town of Landi Kotal, but by any name it would be as unbelievable. It is pure Hollywood Thieves-of-Baghdad stuff and I'm not sure that I believe it even yet.

It is a market filled with swathed tribesmen and a little bit-of-all kinds of "undeclared" merchandise.

There in the middle of stark, raving, empty country, on the outskirts of Pakistan, near the border of Afghanistan, in the middle of Asia, you can buy "hot" oranges, watches, cameras, furs, materials, nail polish, gadgets, or -- souvenir Statues of Liberty!

The souvenir Statues of Liberty sort of threw us, but we got used to them after the first hundred.

The cashbah-looking market is built on the side of a ragged brown hill and consists of narrow "streets" with broad steps winding up and down through it. Small, boothtype shops squeezed against each other are all over it. It has so many different turns and alleys, you never know if you've covered it all or not. There's so much "atmosphere" you can cut it with a knife. We roamed for almost an hour, but no one bought a souvenir Statue of Liberty.

AFTER THIS WILD market, the next adventure was the border.

In traveling from Pakistan to Afghanistan by car, a 1964, one had to change from Pakistan-owned cars to Afghanistan-owned cars at the wild, isolated border of the two countries. The only trouble was the border was in the wilderness and not where cars "lived," so one had to rely on messages to get them there, and it all had a way of feeling like relying on tom-toms.

Yet when our Study Mission Group arrived at the border, the cars actually were waiting there as arranged, and we were not marooned in the wilds of the Northwest Frontier after all.

The cars came from Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan, and were not Chevrolets or Fords or Buicks, as they had been from Peshawar, Pakistan, to the border, but Volgas made in Russia. They were small, four-door cars which sat two in the back quite comfortably and three uncomfortably, and used Pennsylvania motor oil. Adding on to that, we traveled over a road that was American paved Russian bedded, Afghanistan labored and British engineered. Altogether it was admirable, and it was an admirable road all the long approximately 160 miles, except for a gap of about 15 miles. But even this was being constructed and near completion.

Before we started this "international" run, however, we had to go through customs, and so, while our passports were being given The Treatment, we ate lunch at the border and stared at the scenes around us.

THE LUNCH was a box lunch that the hotel in Peshawar had prepared for us, for there were no eating places along the way, and its contents were dull: hardboiled egg, dry slices of chicken, dry bologna and dry bread. But we were lucky to have that, and the border was anything but dull. We ate outside, standing up and wandering about, for things were too interesting to miss.

Although it seemed in the middle of the wilderness, the border was teeming with tribesmen and trucks. There were whole fields of them, and they were "growing" all over the place. The border was not a narrow, well-defined kind of border with a gate that said this side is one country, and that side another. It was much hazier. A sort of a no-man's land broad area -- with trucks. Oh, there were check-points up the road in Afghanistan alright, and up the road in Pakistan, so you had to pass your customs well; or else. But in-between it was the happy hunting ground.

Buildings were scattered through it for administrative personnel and the military, but there seemed to be no houses. There were no streets either except the highway. Added altogether it made the settlement of "Torkham." I suppose it really was a village or a town -- but it looked more like a full-blown gypsy camp.

And the biggest gypsies were the trucks. You never saw such flamboyantly painted giddy trucks in all your life, nor so many all in one place.

GOING THROUGH CUSTOMS is always a peculiar feeling, and on the edges of Pakistan and Afghanistan with nothing but painted wagons and pointed mountains around -- it was even more of a feeling. But I will admit, we had no trouble, and the men were very adept. It took about two hours all told; lunch looking, art show and all.

After the Khyber Pass and the border, the terrain became wilder and higher and even rougher. Peshawar had been 1,000 feet above sea level, the Khyber 3,500 and now Kabul, the capital city of Afghanistan, loomed ahead of us at 6,200. The weather loomed worse at each turn too. There was only one town on the long mountainous run, and that was small. There were no gas stations, no signs, no houses, no trees, no nothing.

And so we came to the Kabul gorge pass which lies just before Kabul. There was nothing here either "save" rock, but it was breathtaking. It put the Khyber Pass to shame for height and spectacle. The road was etched -- and I mean etched -- out of the side of a mountain and that was all. It made us gasp. We climbed through it for about ten miles and never did come down out of it for at its end we took one last swing UPWARD -- and we were in Kabul.

Kabul, pronounced Cobble, is situated atop a mesa-type mountain, with, believe it or not, mountains still on top of that, and when we got onto the top of this mesa, we ran into a snow storm. It was like suddenly jamming your head into a cloud. One minute we had the whole view of the rocks and gorge below us, and the next we could scarcely see before us. The falling snow was so dense we could only see the road for about 20 feet and the buildings directly on the street.

So there, in Kabul, after a long, exciting journey, and with the Hindu Kush towering -- we got snowbound.

Arts Center's sale of gift coupon books runs ahead of '70

The Garden State Arts Center reported this week that its sales of gift coupon books for 1971 summer season admissions are running well ahead of any previous year and still going strong.

Chairman John P. Gallagher of the New Jersey Highway Authority, which operates the Arts Center on the Garden State Parkway, said some 215 coupon books in $15 and $25 amounts have been sold since the 1971 issue started in November. Receipts from such advance sales exceed $4,100.

Each coupon in a book of 15 or 25 designed for gift-giving is worth $1 toward the purchase of Arts Center admission tickets to any performances next summer or even 1971 season subscriptions. No extra cost over the face value of the coupons is involved in the order or later exchange for tickets.

At this time a year ago, the gift coupon sales for the 1970 season were approximately $3,400. Total sales for all of last season were $4,390. The coupon books can be ordered by mail to Garden State Arts Center, Box 116, Holmdel 07733, or requests telephoned to 264-9200.

The gift recipient redeems the coupons as desired. They are valid for exchange by mail to the Arts Center or at its box office in Holmdel (when the sale of admissions begins later) through the 1971 summer season.

The program schedule for the fourth season in the Arts Center amphitheater at the Parkway's Telegraph Hill Park is to be set and announced by this spring. Meanwhile, gift recipients are added to its mailing list.

If the purchasing gift-giver wishes, the Arts Center coupon book or books will be forwarded for any occasion with a card in his name enclosed.

Rubinstein to play at Symphony Hall

Pianist Artur Rubinstein will give a recital at Symphony Hall, Newark, on Sunday, Jan. 24, at 3 p.m.

Rubinstein, whose visits to Symphony Hall draw sellout crowds annually, has been playing before the public for 70 years. He made his debut in Berlin in 1900, playing the Mozart Concerto in A Major.

Born in Lodz, Poland, in 1889, Rubinstein displayed musical talent at the age of three. As a boy, he was given musical guidance by Joseph Joachim, the renowned violinist. It was Joachim who conducted the orchestra at Rubinstein's Berlin debut.

By the time he was 15, young Rubinstein had spread his talents to encompass most of Germany and Poland.

Rubinstein made his American debut at 16, playing Chopin's E Minor Concerto with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He gave no concerts for several years after leaving America, but returned to the concert stage with great success in 1910.

Health care must go beyond hospitals' walls, warns official

CHICAGO -- The nation's health care system must switch its emphasis from the treatment of illness to the perpetuation of wellness in all citizens if it is to meet its responsibilities, says Stephen Morris, president-elect of the American Hospital Association.

In an interview in Hospitals, Journal of the American Hospital Association, Morris states that the health care system must begin immediately to focus its attentions outward from the traditional four hospital walls into the entire community.

"The hospital is a place for sophisticated treatment of the acutely ill person the episodic sort of care," says Morris. "But it is only one element of the community health system and I think we have overemphasized it. This is what led us to think in terms of illness rather than wellness."

In November, the American Hospital Association's Special Committee on the Provision of Health Services made public its recommendations for the reorganization of our entire health care delivery system, not merely its financing, in order that all Americans can receive better health care at a reasonable cost. Morris was a member of the committee.

The study, called the Perloff report after committee chairman Earl Perloff, recommends the establishment of health care corporations throughout the country which would assume the responsibility and accountability for providing health care to all persons in a defined community.

"I think we must recognize that the poor people, the indigents, are being taken care of under a dual system," said Morris. They should enter the same system as everyone else, he said.

Under the provisions of the Perloff plan, the government would buy into the same program for the poor, the near poor, and the aged. If an applicant were financially marginal, he would pay a portion of the cost of the package and the government would pay the rest.

"The important point is that everyone would buy into the same system and have the same access to the same care, whether he lives in Biltmore Estates or in the inner city," says Morris.

"The Perloff report, I believe, gives us an opportunity to maintain a pluralistic and voluntary health care system. It may sound like a cliché, but it is nevertheless true that the alternative is a monolithic system created in

Teacher accountability advocated by educator

A new national mood is making itself felt in demands for accountability in all areas of public life, including education, says Robert R. Ruffing, head of the English department at Wayne Valley High School and member of the co-adjutant faculty at Paterson State College.

Writing in School Board Notes, official journal of the New Jersey School Boards Association, Ruffing sees "rising (teacher) salaries as the flame under the kettle of accountability, a flame that will get hotter and higher and brighter with each new contract."

But, wonders Ruffing, "Why are even good teachers apparently unwilling to accept the idea of accountability," especially when "they are, in overwhelming numbers, more than competent?"

Ruffing feels that although teachers do raise some legiitimate questions in regard to procedures for performance evaluation, they must, nevertheless, "accept the responsibility of negotiating fair and workable accountability agreements with local school boards" if they want to forestall radical change in the public school system.

State sets rules on smoke from diesel vehicles

The state's anti-pollution arsenal has acquired additional ammunition with the promulgation by the Department of Environmental Protection of regulations concerning smoke from diesel-powered motor vehicles. Commissioner Richard J. Sullivan said the regulations, constituting Chapter 14 of the State Air Pollution Control Code, will become effective June 19.

Chapter 14 prohibits any person from operating or allowing to be operated on New Jersey's highways any diesel-powered motor vehicle which he owns which, when in motion, emits visible smoke in the proximity of the exhaust outlet, for a period of more than five seconds.

The diesel code also sets inspection standards for diesel-powered trucks and buses subject to on-the-premises inspection by the State Division of Motor Vehicles or the Public Utilities Commission, and spells out the procedures to be followed in carrying out such inspections.

When the owners' or lessee's business premises are equipped with necessary facilities, the State Division of Motor Vehicles will inspect trucks on a chassis dynamometer. A dynamometer is a device constructed to simulate highway driving conditions on a vehicle driven onto it and run in place. Trucks placed on the dynamometer will undergo tests involving simulated load by power absorption.

With the engine's revolutions per minute reduced by such loading to 80 percent of the truck's governed speed, the peak smoke opacity measured over a period of five to 10 seconds shall be considered the engine's standard smoke opacity. This smoke opacity must not exceed 20 percent.

When a dynamometer is not available, Motor Vehicles inspectors will use an alternate test method in which a truck will actually be driven in low gear with the load simulated by braking action. Here, too, the standard smoke opacity shall be the peak opacity measured over a period of five to ten seconds, and this opacity must not exceed 20 percent.

College rolls rise 14 percent in N.J. second year in row

New Jersey has registered a 14 percent increase in public and private college enrollment for the second year in a row.

The gains in three categories of enrollment at the state's public colleges are even higher, Chancellor Ralph A. Dungan announced this week.

Full-time undergraduate enrollment at public institutions, for instance, rose by 18 percent over the fall of 1969. Part-time undergraduate enrollment at the public colleges is up 20 percent and full-time graduate enrollment increased by a third.

The newly-released figures on fall 1970 enrollment at both private and public colleges show that 27,000 more students are attending college in the state than were doing so last year, for a current total of 218,000.

Last year's accounting showed a 24,000-student increase over the previous year.

The state still exports more students than it takes care of at home," noted Chancellor Dungan, "but the steady pace of increase demonstrates that we are making significant progress."

Of all students at New Jersey colleges, 70 percent are attending public colleges, where enrollment climbed by 26,000 students, or 20 percent, to a current total of 152,000.

Private college enrollment increased by 3,000 students to new totals of 51,000 undergraduates at private four-year institutions, 11,500 in graduate programs and 3,000 in two-year colleges.

IN THE PUBLIC COLLEGES, enrollment grew faster at the community college and graduate level than in the four-year institutions.

The community colleges show a 22 percent increase of 8,400 students to a new total of 46,400. Last year's more dramatic increase of 74 percent reflected the fact that several community colleges were able, by reason of new facilities, to accommodate larger classes.

Full and part-time graduate enrollment at all colleges, public and private, also grew at a 22 percent rate.

The six state colleges experienced a slightly lower growth rate on the four-year level of 16 percent, adding 7,500 students for a new total of 50,000. Rutgers' undergraduate enrollment rose from 22,800 to 27,300 students, for an increase of 18 percent.

Independent four-year colleges, on the other hand, registered a decrease of almost 500 students.

COLLEGE 'GIFT' -- Seton Hall University's financial development program started the New Year off on the right foot with Rev. Thomas G. Fahy, president, accepting unrestricted gift from Robert W. Rigby, representing American Airlines.

NJEA proposes regular evaluation of teachers

Every teacher should be evaluated "constructively" and regularly, according to a new policy statement adopted by the New Jersey Education Association. The emphasis should be on personal development and the goal to improve classroom instruction.

"The sole defensible purpose of any school activity -- including evaluation -- is to upgrade the quality of education being offered to the pupils," says the NJEA report, developed by the association's Working Conditions Committee and adopted by its policy-making Delegate Assembly.

At present, NJEA says, most evaluation is done by administrators responsible for hiring, dismissing, promoting and demoting teachers. "The very nature of the arrangement discourages voluntary teacher requests for classroom help. This is the opposite of what should be. Instead, NJEA wants school districts to separate evaluation of teachers into its two separate functions: (1) making personnel decisions, and (2) developing staff competence. NJEA further recommends that every school district have "helping teachers" whose job is to increase the effectiveness of the instructional staff.

This development operation, says the NJEA report, should be completely separated from evaluations done for job-rating purposes.

"The surest way to increase the effectiveness of any professional," says the report, "is to surround him with productive peers, expose him to new ideas, and stimulate him into constructive analysis of his own performance."

Industry spends considerable amounts to upgrade the performance of professional, technical, and middle-management personnel, NJEA notes, and teachers may also require "constant career development."

Career development should "stimulate a teacher to branch out; encourage him to experiment with new ideas and techniques; and prepare him for changes in the student body, the educational process, or the course content."

The new NJEA policy statement urges special attention to the problems experienced by beginning teachers. The school district should be staffed to "detect deficiencies" early and "give prompt help," says the report, adding: "If supervisory first aid fails, the effort at least should guarantee that the beginning teacher's pupils receive necessary instruction during the crisis period."

"Where the beginner's deficiencies are so widespread or so deep as to be uncorrectable, the administration must see that this individual is replaced by a competent practitioner at the earliest moment."

If implemented, the provisions in the new report would benefit the entire school staff, says NJEA. School administrators would have "a fair basis for recommending dismissal, retention, reassignment, or promotion."

Teachers would get the chance to improve the skills and abilities they need for successful classroom careers.

NJEA is disseminating its new report on teacher evaluation among the educational community and its 65,000 active members.

Executive director named by colleges to full-time position

The appointment of Dr. Alfred D. Donovan, vice-president for student personnel services of Seton Hall University, South Orange, as the first full-time executive director of the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in New Jersey was announced this week by John Pepin, vice-president of Drew University and association president.

Dr. Donovan will make his headquarters at Union College, Cranford.

Dr. Donovan, who is on sabbatical leave from Seton Hall University, will succeed Dr. Albert E. Meder, Jr. of Westfield, dean-emeritus of the university of Rutgers University, who served for the past two years as the association's part-time executive associate.

The Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in New Jersey is comprised of New Jersey's 16 independent accredited institutions of higher education. They are: Bloomfield College; Caldwell College; Centenary College for Women, Hackettstown; The College of Saint Elizabeth, Convent Station; Drew University, Madison; Fairleigh Dickinson University, Rutherford, Teaneck, Madison, Hackensack and Wayne; Georgian Court College, Lakewood; Monmouth College, West Long Branch; Princeton University; Rider College, Trenton; Saint Peter's College, Jersey City; Seton Hall University; Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken; Union College, Cranford, Elizabeth and Plainfield; Upsala College, East Orange, and Westminster Choir College, Princeton.

"It has been a real pleasure to serve the association as its part-time executive for the past 28 months," Dr. Meder said. "The only reason for my resignation is that I feel it imperative for the association to have a full-time executive, and I am personally unwilling to take on so time-consuming a commitment. There is no one I would rather have succeeded me than Dr. Donovan and I bespeak for him the same cordial cooperation association members have given me. I have assured

Master plan recommends expansion of university system in New Jersey

A draft of the second phase of New Jersey's Master Plan for Higher Education has been released by Chancellor of Higher Education Ralph A. Dungan.

The proposal, which covers the role and mission of the state's public higher education institutions, their enrollment targets and indicated expansion of the system was released to stimulate discussion, the chancellor said.

The plan's proposals incorporate recommendations from the institutions, counsel from outside experts commissioned by the Department of Higher Education, and extensive research undertaken within the department. Chancellor Dungan invited reaction to and comment on the plan's proposal from members of the academic community and the public.

A far-reaching plan which covers the development of New Jersey's higher education system through the year 1985, the draft offers a number of major recommendations, for expanding educational opportunity on every level of higher education.

These are: -- The creation of a new university, the Graduate University of New Jersey, The Graduate University would be a collaborative effort operating all public graduate education programs except those at the Rutgers New Brunswick campus and medical and dental education. It would draw upon the best scholars and researchers both inside and outside the academic community and be located at campuses or off-campus sites throughout the state.

-- The creation of four new state colleges in the northern half of the state and the growth of the state college system to 12 institutions with a total enrollment of 90,000.

-- The expansion of the community college system to accommodate 75,000 students.

-- The creation of two new undergraduate colleges at the New Brunswick campus of Rutgers, giving that campus five daytime undergraduate colleges and a full-time graduate/undergraduate enrollment of between 25,000 and 30,000 students.

-- The creation of an "open college" which permit students to take undergraduate programs without formal attendance at a college or university campus.

-- The projection of some growth at private colleges and a recognition of their need for financial assistance.

-- The emergence of the Newark public college/university complex as the state's second major university center, under some kind of administrative arrangement, still to be determined.

-- No estimate of the cost of implementing the proposals will be made until the final version of phase two of the Master Plan is adopted.

The plan was developed for the department by Dr. Bruce Robertson, director of master planning, in collaboration with Assistant Chancellor Steffen Plehn.

The Old Times

VA education help offered to Viet vets

Since May 1968, there have been 63,665 letters sent by the New Jersey Veterans Administration to Vietnam era veterans, alerting them to benefits available under provisions of the G.I. Bill.

Nationally, a total of 2,180,269 such letters have gone to Vietnam era veterans, numbering among them 336,474 high school dropouts, according to Paul M. Nugent, director of the New Jersey VA Regional Office, Newark, who also reported that 9,129 -- 14.3 percent of these area veterans have not finished high school. The national average for Vietnam era veterans is 15.4 percent.

Nothing makes one place farther from another than a taxi meter.

...probing... american dream in thought & literature

...the counter culture economics of investment accounting for non-accountants advanced painting

...searching... analysis of violence

Nugent explained that veterans can get monthly payments while completing high school under the GI Bill, without having their payments charged against the education and training benefits for which they may be eligible.

He also pointed out that while the VA helps all veterans, it makes a special effort to assist those without a high school education.

First, Nugent said, a letter is sent to every new veteran, telling him about the GI Bill (including on-the-job training), VA medical and dental care, and other VA benefits, as well as offering him assistance in finding a job.

Veterans who have completed high school receive one type of letter; another type goes to those who have not. Also, if the veteran's military discharge indicates a possible service disability, the letter tells the veteran how he can file a claim with the VA. Names of veterans living beyond commuting distance of the Newark VA Regional office who have not finished high school are turned over to nearby service organizations for further contact. Such veterans living within commuting distance, Mr. Nugent said, are sent a follow-up letter setting up a specific appointment with a VA official at the United States Veterans Assistance Center, (USVAC), Federal Building, 970 Broad St., Newark.

If the veteran does not answer the invitation, the VA sends a third letter, Nugent said, and the veteran is given a form and a self-addressed envelope to use to set up a meeting at his convenience with a VA official at the Newark USVAC office, at the veteran's home, or elsewhere, even on a Saturday.

Veterans who are without a high school diploma living either within or beyond the commuting area of the Newark VA Regional Office who have not responded, are sent another letter which provides further information, renews the offer of assistance, and includes a form on which the veteran can simply check his needs or interests. Again, a self-addressed franked envelope is enclosed for his convenience.

The veteran is told, "We can help you get started in a trade, go back to school, and pay you while you do. If you are looking for a job, we may be able to refer you to one which is just what you want."

If the veteran is not interested in education or training, the VA office places him in contact with the state employment agency at 1 Clinton St., Newark.

Nugent said that of the 63,665 letters sent to veterans in New Jersey area, 2,216 were mailed in October 1970.

TOUGH FIGHT—James Earl Jones takes a beating in a Havana boxing match in scene from "The Great White Hope," continuing at the Rialto Theater in Westfield.

Station Breaks

The shortest distance between 30,000 air miles and your living room is a sight line to your television screen.

For the eighth year, Chrysler Corp. is involving itself in Bob Hope's Christmas activities, highlights of which will be shown Jan. 14 within that sight line over NBC, from 8:30 to 10 p.m.

The 90-minute telecast will be an odyssey of Hope's 20th overseas trip with his troupe to entertain American servicemen.

The 16-day junket, covering 30,000 air miles, is co-sponsored by the USO and the Department of Defense. It will include appearances in England, West Germany, at the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, Thailand, Vietnam and Korea. On the return home, there will be a stop-over at Alaska.

Among the artists who'll be seen on TV with Hope are Lola Falana, Bobbi Martin, Gloria Loring, the Goldiggers, Miss World 1961, actress Ursula Anders, and Johnny Bench, Cincinnati Reds catcher selected Most Valuable Player of the Year in the National League.

SINGER TONY BENNETT has been invited personally by England's Princess Alexandra to be her guest during British Week, a salute to England to be held in San Francisco next spring. The invitation was extended when Bennett met the Princess, who is the daughter of the Dutchess of Kent, at dinner at Buckingham Palace after he had performed at a concert to aid the National Playing Fields Association, a favorite charity of Prince Philip. The singer was fulfilling an engagement at the London Palladium at the time.

Baby is signed for role in 'Needle Park' film

HOLLYWOOD---Shan Colorado Finnerty, seven months old, has been signed by producer Dominick Dunne to play "the baby" in a scene in "The Panic in Needle Park" for 20th Century-Fox. He got the part when his mother brought him to the set one day to watch his father, actor Warren Finnerty, at work.

Shan hails from a film family: Oboe-winner Warren Finnerty whose movies include "The Last Movie," "Cool Hand Luke" and "The Pawnbroker." Mr. and Mrs. Finnerty (Tita's a Mayan Indian) played the rancher and his wife in "Easy Rider."

He has been honored by the city of San Francisco and is an honorary citizen because of the tremendous impact of his famous trademark hit "I Left My Heart in San Francisco." The song is a favorite of Princess Alexandra's and helped prompt her to invite Bennett to appear at the event.

IN STAGE COMEDY—Eddie Bracken and Barbara Baxley play Sam and Karen Nash, respectively, a middle-aged couple, in Neil Simon's latest laugh-a-rama, "Plaza Suite," currently playing at the Paper Mill Playhouse in Millburn. The show will run through Feb. 7 and there will be two performances Saturday at 6 and 9:30 p.m.

Van Johnson set at Meadowbrook Comedy lampoon on local screens

Van Johnson will star in "There's A Girl in My Soup" at the Meadowbrook Theater Restaurant, Cedar Grove beginning Thursday, Jan. 28 and ending Feb. 28.

The Terence Frisby comedy that became a smash hit in London and on Broadway, concerns an American gourmet writer and connoisseur of women, gastronomy and seduction.

Buddy Rich on his "slingerland drums" will appear at the Meadowbrook Jan. 22 and 23 with his 16-man orchestra.

The Art Cinema in Irvington Center has announced that it will present a kiddie matinee show Saturday and Sunday afternoon. Following a cartoon featurette, "Seven Dwarfs to the Rescue," a full-length feature, will be shown. Evening shows on Saturday and Sunday, plus weekdays will be "Sexual Freedom in Denmark," adult X-rated film for patrons over 21 years of age.

Danny Kaye and effects man shine in dull Noah's ark play

By TRUDINA HOWARD
"Sticks and stones may break my bones But names will never hurt me."

This chants Danny Kaye in a scene in his new musical on Broadway — and — well — maybe so. But in the opinion of this viewer, there are a few names that could hurt the play by the name of "Two by Two."

The best part of the show, at least on the night of the benefit for the United Nations' Children's Fund (UNICEF), came after the final curtain when Mr. Kaye did a little stint in honor of UNICEF's 24th birthday in December. The world-wide agency, which has done such glorious deeds for children everywhere, is one of Danny Kaye's pet projects and the December evening's performance was in its honor.

The play seemed to give little chance for DK to hit his stride, but the ode to UNICEF did — or at least offered more. A group of children of many nations came on stage after the finale and since children are also Danny Kaye's love, he was, of course, delightful with them. But the most amusing bit was the impressive demonstration of control which DK exercised over the audience when he "conducted" a Danny-Kayed version of "Happy Birthday To You" in a sing-along.

It was endearing and it was fun. And it was done in style and grace.

THE PLAY, HOWEVER, left something to be desired even in that area. It is, as perhaps is known, supposed to be concerned with Noah and the ark — but in actuality it seems to be more concerned with a Jewish father and his ordinary family problems. Yet even these points are not strongly made.

One of the players was notable and on occasion almost outshone Danny Kaye. She was Madeline Kahn, who gave a lusty, believable performance as "Goldie," one of the son's wives. How's that for a Biblical name! But perhaps the most notable of all was the sound-effects-and-visual-aids man who, in a way, played God, and who, as such, surely was a co-star.

In this play about Noah and the ark, there is not one animal nor one drop of water. It is the sound-effects-and-visual-aids man who gives the impression of them, with giant pictures on backstage and rousing sounds through the theater. Even when Noah talks to God and God answers, it is the sound-effects-visual-aids man who thunders and flashes back.

What the name is of the man handling the controls on any given night with such admirable timing is not listed, but scenery credits go to David Hays and lighting credits to John Gleason.

So, in this show you have a giant demonstration of visual-aids technique and a rousing demonstration of sound-effects, but not much more.

So thank goodness for Danny Kaye. He is wonderful no matter what names are used or who is who or what play is playing.

Two thousand years ago God may have given Noah the ark, but 2,000 years later he gave Danny Kaye to UNICEF.

And that's a Great Performance, anytime.

Elmora features suspense picture

"The Bird With the Crystal Plumage," and "Tell Them Willie Boy Was Here," came to the Elmora Theater in Elizabeth on a double featured bill yesterday.

"The Bird," a suspense film about a killer who goes about slashing women, stars Suzy Kendall, Tony Musante and Eva Renzi. Filmed in color, the picture was directed by Dario Argento.

"Willie Boy," starring Robert Redford, Robert Blake, Katherine Ross and Susan Clark, and directed by Abraham Polonsky, concerns America's genocidal treatment of the Indian in the early 1900s. The picture was photographed in color.

The matinee film offering for Saturday will be "The Day the World Ended" and three cartoons.

Teamed for first time

HOLLYWOOD --- For the first time in their careers, Sidney Poitier and Harry Belafonte will be teamed for a motion picture in "Buck and the Preacher," for Columbia Pictures.
