Other officers elected were Harry Baron of Cranford. second vice-president, and Jules J. Lusardi of Garwood, third vicepresident.

Light turnout, no surprises in primary voting was extremely light in Mountainisde and elsewhere in the state. The focus of local interest in the election was in tallies for candidates for two three-year terms on the Borough Council-and on both sides of the ballot, candidates for those seats topped all

Republican incumbent Bruce Geiger led the field with a borough-wide total of 287 votes. while his running-mate, William Cullen, also an incumbent, was close behind with 277. Democratic hopeful Frank Gagliano outpolled his fellow party members, garnering 119 votes, only one ahead of his running mate for the governing body seat, Albert D'Amanda, who Matthew Rinaldo, seeking GOP backing for reelection to the House of Representatives, received a total of 267 votes, easily defeating his challenger for the GOP nod, Lloyd J. Sherley who had only 18 ballots.

Democratic congressional hopeful Adam K. Levin won the support of 95 borough voters, as opposed to 9 for his challenger, A. Howard

In unofficial congressional district results, Rinaldo outdistanced Sherk, 10,426-835, while Levin defeated Freund, 10,592-2270.

Democrats also were asked to select three delegates to the party's National Convention. In Mountainside the choices were Matilda McGowan, 37 votes; Richard I. Samuel, 33, and David Hull, 33, The Regular Organization Democrats—A. Charles Walano, Leslie P. Glick and Catherine White-received 15, 18, and 21, respectively. State reports Regional 12th graders above average in reading, math skills

School District have demonstrated above average ability in basic reading and math skills, according to results of statewide testing conducted in November 1972.

A report on the results, released last week by the District, gives a general comparison of the skills demonstrated by 1,256 Regional seniors who took the tests two years ago among 88,230 seniors from throughout the state. It notes particular needs and strengths demonstrated by the local district, and offers five recommendations for improvements Reading ability of Regional 12th graders is "very good," the report states, noting "utilization of context clues, understanding of job in Mountainside" is apparent from the results of state testing of fourth graders conducted in 1972, borough Superintendent of Schools Dr. Levin B. Hanigan noted this week.

Results of state testing show 'solid' study skills

The results of the math and reading tests show the scores of the Mountainside youngsters in all areas "significantly exceeded the Union County reference points," according to Hanigan's report. (Any scores that exceeded the county reference score by five points were considered "significant.")

The superintendent did note that some mathematics test items—such as subtraction of one, two and three-digit numbers, division and multiplication of multi-digit numbers. geometrical figures, number sentences (with special attention to problem format) and the conversion of numbers to words and vice versa-"indicated a need for reteaching or strengthening the concepts.'

"The teachers felt that these tests were helpful in pinpointing items that needed to be re-taught and strengthened. However, data that indicates which children missed what problems still is missing. When it comes, greater individualization of instruction will be possible," Hanigan noted.

THE AREAS COVERED in the reading tests included phonetic analysis, word knowledge, word structure, comprehension and study skills. "One thing that is apparent immediately is that phonics and phonetic analysis are being well taught in the Mountainside reading program," Hanigan's report stated, noting the local test scores in that category, "significantly exceeded" county levels.

In word knowledge, which included context clues, synonyms and word structuresyllabication, roots, prefixes, adjectival suf-fixes, and plurals—"the results are significantly higher than the county, with no areas of weakness or deficiency noted."

Cited by Hanigan as being "by far the most important segment" of the test was the reading comprehnsion "section, which" demands organization of ideas, identifying main ideas and understanding supporting ones, and interpretation. The scores in reading comprehension were

Hanigan noted, adding, "The test questions seemed to be difficult and they demanded quite a bit of reading-between-the-lines skill. This area of the test will be exceedingly valuable in pinpointing needed improvement

Guide words in the dictionary, alphabetical sequence, tables of contents and glossary use made up the study skills section of the test, in which Mountainside scores again were cited as being higher than the county reference points. --O--O--

IN SUMMARY, Hanigan noted the tests did dicate that there are definite areas that can be identified for re-teaching and strengthening. 'For this purpose the test results are indeed helpful and stimulating," he said.

However, he also cautioned against attaching too much emphasis to the scores. "Many of the areas tested had too few items and some of them were questionable," he said. "As an example, syllabication mastery is dependent in the test) upon three questions. Number 1. How many syllables does the word happiness have?' Scores were relatively high on this item. Numbers 2 and 3: 'Divide the words basket and bullet into syllables.' Scores were relatively low on these. Children are being taught linguistically by sound syllables, and they are not necessarily the same as written syllables. Hence the wrong numbers were often selected.

"The most important things to realize is that a child's mastery of syllabication is measured (in the test) by these three questions. Such a test is neither comprehensive enough nor definitive enough to draw such a conclusion. Other items throughout the tests raise this same question."

Persons wishing more information on test results of the individual borough schools may obtain it from the respective principals. The school district results are available in Hanigan's office.

Assisting Hanigan in analysis of the scores were the following Mountainside school per-sonnel: Edwin Sjonell, guidance: William Hummel and Donald Rath, principals; Helen Sutter, language arts coordinator; Martha Podmayer, James Johnson, Richard Adinolfi, Gertrude Rockett and Charlotte Ross, Tourth grade teachers: Anna Matko, Susan Schreiber and Joan Krystow, third grade teachers.

suggested by Conlin Library, gymnasium included in project By ABNER GOLD

The Regional High School District Board of Education Tuesday night authorized its attorney to take "whatever action is required" to compel its contractor to complete construction work at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield.

John Conlin of Garwood, building and grounds chairman, told the meeting at the Deerfield School in Mountainside that he will meet today with the contractor to discuss additional work needed on the floors in the library, gymnasium and elsewhere and on n the ventilating system. If work is not completed promptly, he said, the board should act to dismiss the contractor and find others to

He added that construction of new tennis courts at David Brearley High School in Kenilworth should be completed this summer. Conlin said, however, that courts at Dayton will be delayed. He explained that they must be coordinated with relocation of Van Winkle's Brook along the edge of the school property, a joint flood control project just approved by the board and the Springfield Township Committee. The tennis courts will be in the brook construction area and must wait for final determination of the grade level for the drainage project.

He also noted that the Union County Park Commission will start work June 15 on restoration of the Dayton field house at Meisel Field in Springfield, with completion before APPROXIMATELY TWO-THIRDS of the 75 persons in the audience consisted of students from Gov. Livingston Regional High School, Berkeley Heights. Most of them were present to support an appeal by Student Council leaders for three changes in school regulations.

The students sought approval for an open lunch period, a designated smoking area and permission to arrive late and depart early for students with study hours in the first and last periods of the school day.

Their proposals were outlined by DustinN Hecker, president of the GL Student Council. His father, Roland Hecker of Berkeley Heights, was the only board member who took no part in the lengthy discussion which followed.

Peter Festante, principal at GL, expressed strong opposition to the open lunch and late arrival plans. He stressed the school's isolated location, which would require youngsters to drive or hitch rides if using the open lunch or late arrival freedom. If the school were in a more central location, he said, he could support the requests.

While expressing some doubts about a smoking area, he said, "If we could insure that the lavatories and school buses would remain smoke-free, I might go for it."

Marching band to participate in Salute to Israel

The Jonathan Dayton Regional High School Band, under the direction of Jeff Anderson, will appear in the Salute to Israel parade in New York City Sunday.

There will be an extensive judging contest for all bands appearing along the two-mile parade route. The bands will play only Israeli music and will be rated on overall sound of performance, marching ability and showmanship. The judges will appear incognito throughout the parade. Each band is required to carry one or more Israeli flags, which were presented to each competing band. Penalties will be deducted for such items as marching more than one block without music, leaving more than a 50-yard gap between units, playing unauthorized, non-Israel music and stopping for maneuvers in the line of march.

Award plaques will be presented for the first five places in each category. In addition, a banner will be given to the first place bands in

In addition to the parade on Sunday, the Dayton Band will present a classical and jazz concert at Halsey Hall on Saturday. The hand consists of 85 musicians from Mountainside and Springfield, who have shown an outstanding ability in music this year. An excellent concert repertoire has been compiled by the band this year. Senior and music awards will be presented at the concert.

Tickets for the concert may be obtained at the door for 75 cents per student and $1.50 per adult. Senior citizens are admitted free.

Modern health awareness requires more study of food additive hazards

You are in the supermarket and are worried, distracted. The higher prices are not those you remembered from a week ago. It is an epidemic out of control and you hurry to select the food and leave. You do not read the labels much, the colorful letter-twisting food salesmanship spread like happy noodles over the cartons. The contents, or additives, are in very small type. You do not read them

At home you have more time. You read about the colors, preservatives, thickeners, flavorings and emulsifiers added to the cereals, the soups, or whatever you picked from the shelves. The small type is a little ashamed, it is hiding, and says nothing about the drug-pesticide food chain as DDT or the industrial wastes now branched into all food, including the so-called "organics."

To date, science cannot show that significant harm has come to people from food additives, except in those instances of unusual concentration of the chemicals in drinking water in food. This does not mean that food additives in small concentrations do not harm. Science cannot demonstrate harm since no effective investigations had ever been made for population studies. Yet, even if a group of interested doctors would enter into long term studies of people on high additive diets compared to people on low additive diets, the many other health and environmental factors and variables would make most conclusions too unrealistic. The conclusions of science come a little harder than the generous pitch of the corn flakes huckster.

Still, there are some realities to move ahead on. First of all; we have to understand that simply because "no evidence" exists it does not rule out the additive as a possible long-term cause of disease. Second, far more caution must be applied in adding chemicals to food. The chemicals may well be considered as drugs. The dosage of even "harmless" drugs are different for child and adult. Third, medical science, perhaps more on the practicing clinical level, should be alerted to the more irrational syndromes occurring in groups or in an individual that may be tied into degrees of toxicity or stress caused by the additive chemical, and so reported. It would also be helpful to lose the mythology of the vitamin bomb, or of the virgin cereal are all part of the water, earth, sky chain of life now tied to the factory belt, the sprayed farm, the watercourse nibble of oiled earth, the fresh rain from yesterday's smokestack.

The claims often set down for vitamins appear to be written by wishful thinking weightlifters looking for the magic to a 400 pound press. Or sometimes the claims made for vitamin E sounds as though they are coming from Casanova selling a love potion from the back of the medicine wagon on Main street.

There is no evidence to support claims made for the vitamin bomb as a cure or prevention for diseases not controlled by the more rational, moderate and generally therapeutic uses of vitamins. There also is no evidence to indicate that milk or milk products, or cereal grains, are natural foods for humans. In fact there is much evidence to the contrary.

Modern health awareness, its fears, its reach for control and understanding of food, is not helped by the oversimplification of food cultism where real threats are converted to peculiar mystic additives which color and flavor its own

I would like to commend the students and faculty connected with both the Deerfield Elementary and Middle School spring concerts. The programs were most enjoyable.

I was most disturbed at the behavior of the audiences at both programs, but particularly at the Middle School concert. Charter study unit lists options; decision likely Tuesday

As its August deadline nears, the Union pleting review of possible improvements in the structure and administration of county government and hopes to have the basic recommendations ready by Tuesday night.

That's when the panel-elected by referendum last November to study possible alternatives to the present form of government-has its regular meeting. The commission, by law, must submit its report to the county clerk on or before the ninth month following its election, meaning Aug. 6.

(One of the factors that influenced the drive for a charter review-and eight such study panels were elected in counties in New Jersey ast November—was the Musto Commission Report, issued in 1969. It concluded, ". . . if county government is to be improved and strengthened to meet today's economic and social demands, if it is to become an effective partner in a strong, responsive and representative local government system, it is ministrative control be brought directly into the hands of the elected body—the board of chosen freeholders.")

The Charter Study Commission has prepared a report on its alternatives and what they mean to Union County residents. The four possible choices for the organization of county govern-

-COUNTY EXECUTIVE: Under this plan a county executive is elected as well as board of chosen freeholders. The county executive would control and direct administrative departments, appoint a chief administrator, department heads, members of boards and agencies and appointive officers-all with the consent of the board of freeholders. He would also submit the budget (and vote in the case of a tie) and could veto an ordinance passed by the freeholder board. He would have the power of suspension and removal-subject to disapproval by two-thirds of the freeholder board. The board of freeholders has the powers and dismissals by a two-thirds vote and reducing budget items (but an increase requires a two-thirds vote).

-COUNTY MANAGER: This plan provides for an appointed manager who serves as the chief administrative officer, directing and supervising the work of all departments. He would be appointed by the freeholders board for an indefinite term and could only be removed by a majority vote of the board. He prepares the annual budget, appoints heads of departments and other county officers and can remove or suspend officials in the unclassified service (subject to disapproval by a two-thirds vote of the board). The board of chosen freeholders acts as the legislative body, appoints members of boards and commissions and approves the annual budgets.

-ELECTED SUPERVISOR: The supervisor is elected at-large for a three-year term. He would preside over the board of freeholders, with the advice and consent of the board, vote in case of a tie and veto ordinances (subject to being overridden by a two-thirds vote of the board). The board of freeholders appoints and removes the county administrator (who, in turn, appoints department heads with the advice and consent of the board), approves the annual budgets and passes whatever ordinances and resolutions it deems necessary.

-BOARD PRESIDENT: This plan provides for election of a board president, a member of the freeholder board, elected by its members for a period of two years. He has the right to vote as a member of the board and presides over its meetings and acts as its spokesman. He appoints members of independent or advisory boards and commissions, with the advice and consent of the freeholder board, and supervises the county administrator. The board of freeholders passes whatever ordinances or resolutions it deems necessary, appoints and the budgets.

In addition, the charter study commission may recommend a special charter, requiring a two-thirds vote of approval of each house of the legislature as well as the voter approval in a referendum required under all of the forms. Should it recommend any of the four specified optional forms, the voters would be asked to approve the recommendation (probably in the November 1974 election). Should the voters approve the election of officers under the new plan it would take place at the next general election, and the new administrative code would become effective by May 1 of the following year. A probable sequence would be a November 1975 election and a May 1, 1976, doption of an administrative code.

The Charter Study Commission must, if it recommends one of the optional forms, make recommendations as to the size of the board, concurring of terms and the type of constituencies. The alternatives provided by law

The Suburban Symphony Orchestra of New Jersey, with Henry Bloch as music director, will present a concert on Wednesday and June 26. The two concerts will be presented by The Union County Park Commission in cooperation with the Union County Cultural and Heritage Commission. The appearances are possible because of a grant provided by the New Jersey Council on the Arts,

The Suburban Symphony Orchestra of New Jersey appeared at Union County parks twice in 1971 during the Park Commission's "Golden Anniversary" celebration. It consists of 75 pieces and presents several concerts each year. All of the principal members are professional players and its membership comes from 40 different communities in 10 New

The purpose of the programs is to expose and stimulate interest in classicial, semi-classical and popular music.

Bloch, the conductor and musical director, received his early musical education at the Hollander Conservatory of Music in Berlin, Germany, and continued his studies at Queen College, New York and Columbia University.

Bloch has been associated professionally as a double bass player with the Metropolitan Opera Association, the Brooklyn Philharmonic, the New York City Opera Company, and the Adolf Busch Chamber Players.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Export-Import Bank was charged last week by Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo (R. 12th Dist.-N.J.) with flauting the will of Congress by granting $280 million in low interest credits to build eight chemical fertilizer plants in the Soviet Union.

He said the seven percent interest on the credit deal would help the Soviet Union to compete with the American fertilizer industry. It also will assist the Soviet Union in main taining weapons production by enabling them to readily convert these new chemical plants to

"At a time when American business and labor are starved for investment funds and jobs, the Export-Import Bank would be lending the Soviet Union $180 million at interest rates of seven percent, considerably below the record prime lending rate for American companies,' Rep. Rinaldo said.

He charged the bank with ignoring a recent resolution that Congressman Rinaldo and 224 other members of the House approved. It instructed the Export-Import Bank to make no further loans to the Soviet Union.

Previous credit deals with the Soviet Union, Rinaldo claimed, have so drained the loan fund that U.S. airlines that are seeking to expand their overseas business have been forced to reduce their loan requests by as much as 30

"This isn't detente. It's a giveaway of American dollars, technology, jobs and eventually our markets in chemical fertilizers to the Soviet Union," Rinaldo said.

plants abroad at an estimated cost of more than $1 billion as part of their five-year plan, according to Congressman Rinaldo "I don't believe that you can buy peace by offering bargain prices to the other guy,' Rinaldo added.

He cited testimony before the House Banking and Currency Committee, of which Rinaldo is a member, that since the time of Peter the Great the Russians were able, within a short space of time, to approach contemporary economic levels in the West by importing advanced

Adam Levin, Democratic candidate for Congressman in the 12th District, said this week his first order of business, if elected, will be to sponsor a Legislative Priorities Program that provides for a coordinated and com-prehensive attack on the most critical problems confronting the nation. "Since 1946 Congress has demonstrated a dismal lack of initiative and imagination in dealing with the major issues affecting American life," Levin said. "As a result, key problems have been carried from session to session without relief and the public has been forced to deal with each succeeding crisis on its inactivity has been a willingness to surrender of it can be attributed to Congress' piecemeal, uncoordinated approach to problem solving.

Levin said his proposal would require Congress to take a vote at the beginning of each year on the single, most pressing national priority facing the country. "All committees would be required to file formal reports on their investigations and recommendations by July 1 of each year, Levin continued. "Congress would then study the reports and meet in August-the traditional month for vacations and junkets-for the purpose of developing a comprehensive

The Democratic Congressional candidate said the national priority project would be developed in addition to the normal legislative duties of Congress. He said resources are already available for the increased workload since each Congressman receives more than $150,000 a year in staff allowances and committee funding is consistently being increased.

"The Science and Astronautics Committee would study the safety of nuclear power and the feasibility of solar energy generation. The Interior Committee would survey the availability of geothermal energy, the status of federal oil shale reserves and the possibility of drilling on public lands and in the naval reserves. Since that time, more than 12,000 persons have benefitted from the center educational counseling services.

'This reaction has demonstrated the worth of this project and represents a prime example of how industry and institutions of higher learning are working together diligently to spread the word of opportunity, educational and vocational, to as many New Jersey residents as possible," Sedelmeyer added.

The fact is, our residents sell most of our homes. Over 2/3 of our buyers are referred here by friends who've convinced them: Covered Bridge is the best value on the condominium market.

What do they rave about? The homes themselves: 7 different models in I and 2-bedroom single-story ranch or duplex homes and first or second-floor apartment homes—with 1, 11/2 or 2 full baths. Exteriors of rustic brick and rich wood materials. Patios and balconies that are private and peaceful. Luxury features like dine-in kitchens, enormous closets, air conditioning, wall-to-wall carpeting.

They praise the marvelous social life, centered around our bustling $2 million Clubhouse, where you can find lively activities during any part of the day or evening! Other things they're sold on: A heated swimming pool. Tennis and shuffleboard courts. An 18-hole Executive golf course now under construction with special rates available to residents.

They love our location: just 43 miles from New York (only 56 minutes traveling time via air-conditioned buses that stop at our entrance). And the enormous financial advantages: you get all the tax-saving and equity-building benefits of home ownership with none of the exterior maintenance worries.

Alfalfa whipped topping! Edible protein now processed

Imagine an edible protein from alfalfa in the form of a whipped topping for your chocolate sundae, pumpkin ple or Irish coffee.

The possibility of such a topping and other applications of soluble protein from alfalfa was contained in a report from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Western Regional Research Laboratory, presented by Benny K. Knuckles at the recent national meeting of the American Chemical Society in Los Angeles.

Scientists of the Western Regional Research Laboratory had previously reported the processing of a bland-tasting, white, insoluble protein, suitable for use in breads, pastas, stews, gravies, ground meats, milk substitutes and other preprocessed foods.

Now, they have modified their process to yield a soluble, rather than an insoluble protein. In other words, they now know how either form of edible white protein from green alfalfa juice can be produced. Production of the insoluble form is in the pilot plant stage, while the new modified process is laboratory-bench

The major component of the soluble protein concentrate from green alfalfa juice is a foamstabilizing protein of alfalfa, called "Fraction I Protein." The foam stabilizing property, along with the protein's ability to gel, suggest its possible use in soups, sausages, meat extenders, and whipped toppings, said Knuckles.

Most of the world's protein exists in green leaves. However, this protein is not consumed directly by humans because of its high fibercontent and bitter taste.

Protein research on alfalfa, previously resulted in a process yielding a green protein concentrate suitable for poultry feed supplement, and a heat-precipitated insoluble white protein. The new process reported in Los Angeles, called PRO-XAN II, utilizes controlled heating and centrifugation to separate the green protein from the unchanged white protein which remains in solution.

Knuckles has taken this solution of white protein and used ultra-filtration to remove salts, color, and taste to produce a soluble. cream-colored protein. Ultrafiltration concentrates the protein by removing up to 90 percent of the water and 80 percent of the nonprotein solids. Adding water and continuing ultrafiltration removes still more nonprotein solids yielding a product of about 95 percent protein (dry basis). This protein, after adjustment to pH 7 and freeze-drying, will redissolve in water at room temperature.

Al Wilson is on the move, With his Rocky Road Single "Show & Tell" Climbing both R & B and Pop charts, and the release of his new album, the blend of earthiness and sophistication that is Al Wilson's trademark is the "now" sound.

Musically. Al traces his style to no single influence. He patterned himself after no idol, no established performer. Pop. jazz, spiritual, blues, hard rock and, as he puts it, "funk," were all absorbed by him and are now infused into his music.

As early as grade school, Al showed his creative talent as an actor in school plays. Later, he won talent shows as a singer and took first prize in an art contest. By the age of 12, he had earned money as a country and western singer, formed his own spiritual quartet and sang in a church choir.

There were many years of hard apprenticeship. After two years in the Navy, where he sang with an enlisted man's combo Al came to Los Angeles alone and unknown to make the rounds of night clubs. He sang wherever and whenever he could. He worked at any job he could find until he decided he was going to live from his earnings as an entertainer or quit.

He joined "The Jewels" (Who cut the original R & B classic "Hearts of Stone") in 1959. In 1960, he had his first taste of real success as a member of the "Rollers" whose single. 'Continental Walk," hit the national charts. During this period Al added to his vocal talents.

This advice comes from The Tobacco Institute, an organization of cigarette manufacturers. The institute says the practice is growing, and all without apparent reason.

Actress Joan Crawford has taken to the air in series of radio announcements for the American Foundation for the Blind, to point out that the belief that cellophane bands from eigarette packs can be redeemed for guide dogs is a "cruel hoax" resulting in "heartbreak and

Typically, word seems to spread in a community that some number of bands or packs will help provide such things as a dialysis machine for a kidney patient, open-heart surgery for a child or an iron lung for a polio

In many cases newspapers have assigned reporters to track the source of these well-meaning efforts. Never has such a rumor been traced to its actual source

"Such publicity is helpful," an institute spokesman said. "yet the empty cigarette pack rumor still pops up as predictably as daisies in the spring-and all year long."

Burns W. Roper, the public opinion survey expert, says it's likely that people respond energetically to these empty-pack drives, without checking their authenticity, as a way of "getting involved" personally in our highly complex, institutionalized society

IDYLL IN THE SUN Part One

There is an island group in the middle of the Pacific that can be seconded to none in beauty and scenic wonders

And it is "ours." It is Hawaii.

Who needs Taiwan, the isle formerly called 'Formosa'' which means "beautiful" in Portuguese?

And Bali, which is sometimes called "the Paradise of the Pacific?"

Or Iceland, Or Japan, Or Ceylon, Or Zanzibar, Or Fiji, Or Tahiti, Or St. John, Or Ber-

All beautiful.

But Hawaii does not need to play second fiddle to any. It is glorious in its own right. Contrary to expectations, when a traveler arrives in Honolulu, the capital city of Hawaii, he is neither on the island of Hawaii, nor at the harbor called Pearl, nor in the place of the most spectacular beauty of the islands.

Honolulu is on the island of Oahu, Pearl Harbor is about ten miles up the coast from the city, and the greatest beauty shines, perhaps he most, on the island of Kauai.

However, collectively this group of islands is named after the largest island, Hawaii, so the traveler really is "in Hawaii" after all, no matter which island he happens to be standing on. It is also true that no matter which island he is on, there is a certain beauty on them all.

THERE ARE EIGHT main islands in the island chain called Hawaii, and each is different from the other. Seven are in a lazy string stretching northwest to southeast; from the sland of Kauai at the top, to the island of Hawaii at the bottom; with Oahu, Molokai, Lanai, Kahoolawe and Maui nestling between

The eighth island, Niihau, is forbidden to strangers, and may only be visited upon invitation from the last of the 250 (approximate) pure Hawaiians who live there. It is aloof even n its location. Lying southwest of Kauai at the top end, it is further west than any of the others. and does not fall into the cozy cascade of islands with the other seven. It is sort of flung off by itself instead, and nestles up to none. About 12 more islands are also in this chain but they are tiny.

On the seven "permitted" big islands. besides the great variety of spectacular scenery, there is also a great variety of spec-tacular houses, golf clubs, plantations, ranches, and particularly hotels. The hotels of Hawaii are numerous; sometimes quite remote, sometimes quite extravagant, but all seemingly striving to be as remarkable as the

"I hope you do not mind," The Man "Well, yes," I said. But The Man ordered it anyway. Before I could object The Man introduced himself, added a few dozen sentences and then said, "Will you join me for dinner?" "Well, no," I said. And before I could tell The Man I expected someone, he talked more and stayed seated. So I got up and simply walked away. It seemed the wise thing to do. The martini was quite good. Anyway, I had to get to a table in the dining room where I was to meet my date. A few minutes after I was seated, however, The Man approached again and said, "May I sit down?"

"Well, NO!" I said rather strongly, I think. But The Man sat anyway, and STAYED. Just then my date arrived and sat down, with rather a startled look on his face. At that point I laughed. What nerve!

That was also the first time I had ever been 'approached" by a JAPANESE man.

But he turned out to be most charming, a member of the diplomatic corps, and a gallant host as well. If it hadn't been for him, my friend and I would not have learned as many little interesting facts about Hawaii as we did. They say the Japanese are resourceful, progressive and determined, and I must say, I tend to

TO GET BACK to the islands: if your time is limited, as mine was, the best way to get a preview of the permissive seven islands and a small idea of some of the beauty involved, is to fly. Thus recommended Our Japanese Friend,

There is a company in Honolulu that will just do that little thing for you. Called Hawaiian Air Tour Service, or HATS, it will give you a trip you will never forget. The planes are small seating only 11 or 17 passengers, and they fly low so you can see everything possible. Sometimes you fly even lower than a waterfall or a cliff or a canyon.

The tour that takes you to all seven islands flies south out of Honolulu to the very bottom side of the island of Hawaii and then up to and around the top of the island of Kauai, and back down to Honolulu on the island of Oahu. Stops are made along the way at Hawaii, Molokai and Kauai for sightseeing, lunch and a river cruise.

It takes all day, approximately 900 miles, and includes views of live volcanoes, extinct volcanos, lava beds, skiing slopes, waterfalls, everlasting rainbows, seascapes, virgin forests, jungles, canyons, cliffs, caves, coves, rivers, beaches, valleys, mountains, gorges, palisadese glamorous hotels, planations, ranches, fields of Macadamia nuts and an island which claims to have 22,000 -yes, 22 thousand- varieties of prehids

But there are more important and perhaps less obvious differences. Dr. Feinsod is a bit older than his colleagues, and his education is different. A native of Irvington, he is a graduate of the medical school of the University of Bologna, Italy, one of an estimated 6,000 Americans who annually go abroad for their medical training.

Until recently, many of these foreign-degreed M.D.'s had very little chance of coming home directly into hospital residencies and internships without extensive examination, because they lacked the clinical training that is required in New Jersey and other states. But that situation is changing.

In September 1972, Dr. Feinsod and 18 other holders of foreign medical degrees entered the then new Fifth Channel program at the Rutgers Medical School of the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey. Nine months and countless hours of intensive clinical training later, all obtained their coveted internships or residencies, 14 of them in New Jersey hospitals.

It is the clinical training that most graduates of foreign medical schools lack, a deficiency. according to Dr. W. Edward McGough, director of the CMDNJ-Rutgers Medical School Fifth Channel program, that keeps them from competing on an equal basis with their U.S.trained fellow interns and residents.

Dr. Feinsod had "A" grades in his science subjects as an undergraduate at Upsala College, in East Orange, and an impressive record at Bologna. However, he had reached "the end of the road" as regards an excellent internship, until he heard of the Fifth Channel program and applied for it.

The program gets its name from the fact that is is the fifth currently available route to approved post-graduate medical traininginternships and residencies—with approval of the American Medical Association. Most doctors follow one of the first four: graduating from a U.S. medical school, with its attention to clinical training; graduating from a foreign school and passing a test given by the Educational Council for Foreign Medical Graduates (ECFMG); passing the Federal Licensing Examination (FLEX), or entering a special program with subsequent license to practice when passing the state licensing

"I had a sinking, here-we-go-again feeling." Dr. Feinsod recalled in a recent interview. "I had no idea how I would get into the mainstream of medical practice. I knew only that I wanted to be a doctor, and there seemed to be no way for me than to go ahead."

The young physician's effort started when he left Upsala, premedical degree in hand. He had grown up in South Orange, and was graduated from Montclair Academy. But, like so many other young, would-be physicians, his applications to American medical schools were all turned down. There simply weren't enough places for all who applied.

CMDNJ alone received more than 6,000 applications this year; it had only 207 openings first-year medical students.

'I was told to wait a year and start applying all over again," Dr. Feinsod said, "but suspected my chances would be no better the second time around."

He was married by then, but even so he went off to Italy. His wife, the former Gerri Weiss of easy.

"We discovered," Dr. Feinsod related, "that our apartment was smack in the middle of the biggest red light district in the city, and we couldn't move out because we had taken a oneyear lease."

Eventually they moved, to an apartment that typically had no electricity, no refrigerator, nd no closets or furniture. Two years after the Feinsods arrived in Italy, a daughter, Jennifer,

Most students at Bologna study for six or seven years, but Dr. Feinsod finished in five. "It was long enough to be away from home," he said. The blow that almost staggered him came after he returned home. He didn't pass the ECFMG exam.

"I couldn't believe it, after working so hard for so many years," he said. "It meant that I couldn't treat a single patient, or even set foot into an American hospital, as a doctor."

The Fifth Channel program was just being established, and Dr. Feinsod heard about it, applied and was accepted into the first class at CMDNJ-Rutgers Medical School Under the program, the Fifth Channelists fan out to community hospitals for clinical training under the supervision of the college faculty. For 40 weeks, they concentrate on services like laboratory medicine, physical diagnosis, clinical medicine, clinical surgery, pediatrics. obstetrics-gynecology and psychiatry.

Dr. Feinsod was assigned to Overlook Hospital where he became a resident in internal medicine after completing his Fifth Channel course.

Fifty-three foreign medical school graduates entered the CMDNJ class that succeeded Dr. Feinsod's, and are preparing for internship or residencies. Thirty-five of them will be in New Jersey hospitals.

Citizens might be more aware of the enormity of the solid waste problem in this country if they had a clearer idea of the accompanying costs. Federal officials estimate that disposal of municipal wastes alone in this country costs about $3.5 billion a year. As an expenditure, this ranks third behind school and highway construction. New York City, for example, has an operating budget for disposal of approximately $150 million a year. The per capita breakdown of budgets like this one allots a per household responsibility to residents of between $30-50 per annum Equally as important to citizens are the indirect costs of solid waste disposal. Wastes are often dumped on land or wetland of great value for other purposes. As our urban centers run out of space, however, they turn hungrily to areas such as estuaries, marshes, shorelines. and the low-lying valley(s) of streams for areas to dump. These areas have great value ecologically, recreationally and educationally and are irreplaceable resources.

In spite of these great problems and in spite of limitations on national disposal systems. until recently there was little official concern with waste management and control. The problem of solid waste disposal has been one of the neglected areas of . pollution control.

The federal government has begun dealing with the problem after increasing concern about air polution. Burning in open dumps and incinerators has been the cause of poor air quality in many communities. Interestingly, for each ton of refuse incinerated, about 20 pounds of fly ash is generated and this contains both gold and silver. A mid-west research organization has found enough value in fly ash from incinerators to be comparable to the entire assay of gold and silver of some normal mines in the west.

Even in the face of developing legislation and funding, there are simply too few people adequately trained in solid waste problems on the staffs of major industrial firms and municipal organizations today. The problem, then, is growing rapidly even as steps are being taken to limit that growth. Government, industry and the public are just beginning to realize the full significance of the solid waste problem. Time is working against them. however, - time - and our nation's great ability to generate waste through productivity. We must get on with the job.

Recycling dates set at Two Guys

The Reynolds Metals Company has anounced its recycling unit will be in Union Township from 1 to 3 p.m. June 12 and June 26 at the Two Guys parking lot, Area residents who bring aluminum cans and other household aluminum scrap to the unit will now be paid 15 cents a pound (approximately a half-cent a can), instead of the 10 cents-perpound price that had been in effect since eynolds pioneered consumer recycling on a national basis in 1968.

In 1973, the company recycled more than 1.1 illion cans and paid the public more than $4,5 million. A Reynolds spokesman noted the firm now recycles about 25 percent of the cans it manufactures and is working toward the day when there will be 100 percent recycling.

David F. Norcross, executive director of the New Jersey Election Law Enforcement Commission, this week reminded candidates for public office that the Campaign Finance Disclosure Law is applicable to all candidates, except county committeemen and county committeewomen, who ran in the June 4

"Reports from each candidate were due on May 10, May 28 and will be due on June 19. We are particularly concerned about getting the work out because in the general election, the level of compliance was lowest at the municipal

"Candidates who have not yet filed in either of the pre-election periods because of oversight should correct this deficiency as soon as possible," the director said. "Because of printing problems, the distribution of forms was delayed and the commission will, of course, take this into account when reviewing compliance with the first reporting deadline by candidates'':

He also pointed out that, "A change in
