Wood summed up his feelings about seeking a seat on the seven-member board this way The opportunity exists for the community to reestablish a situation wherein the Board of Education will set the policies of the system, establish future direction of the system and repyrde guidance to the administration, while allowing the administration and the teachers to conduct the day-to-day operations of our

We can only achieve these goals by adopting a sound, business-like approach to the operation of the board. This approach must be emphasized as it represents the return to normaley, which we seek."

Scott Schmedel, moderator, summarized the feelings of this group in lending support to the two candidates: "We have a group of people here who are genuinely concerned about our school system, and of the eight citizens who considered running for the two seats, Bjunno and Wood seem especially qualified

"All of us want to preserve the system, and these two men can get us back on the right track if we support them and give them a chance Both of them demonstrate the intelligence, the initiative and the perserverence to get through the problems which seem to constantly fragment and frustrate our current · school board," Schmodel said

DISPATCH ADDITIONAL BY MARC BLOOMING

People often approach me and ask. "How much do they pay you for writing that thing in the paper every week?"

Of course, I answer.

"Nothing." Astonished, they continue, "Do you mean to say that you write that sensational, witty, informative, interesting. provocative column every week for free?"

"Why, yes of course," I nobly reply. "Actually, it's nothing While I don't mind writing this column for free; or as the editor once told me, as a "labor of love," I do object to having to make sacrifices for the privilege of so doing By the time this column is published, I shall have learned for sure whether or not my health grade has been reduced to the level to which I suspect it has. In other words, I will not be surprised to learn that as a consequence of the column of two weeks ago, my health grade may have been severely damaged. Of course, as I have been told, it is not the wisest thing to criticize the health department two weeks before final health grades are issued two weeks before one is to recite an oral report to a senior health teacher; and two weeks before that report, a written report and various other things are to be subjectively evaluated by a senior health teacher.

If you think that no one took serious offense with the column of two weeks ago dealing with the absurdity of senior health at Dayton, 4 believe you are mistaken.

As the last health class for seniors ended last Friday, and as I rose from my seat, glancing unfalteringly at the instructor for one last time and as I triumphantly headed for the door, I could have sworn I heard someone utter, "Well, Mr. Bloom, l'Il see you dividual interviews, testing and counseling. Union College will administer basic skills tests for each person assigned to the Learning Resource Center to determine their level of achievement and to estimate how long it will take to obtain the basic skills they require for the position for which they are being trained

Brooks-Wilder movie spoof on `Frankenstein,' hilarious

If you want your funnybone transplated, Mel Brooks and Gene Wilder are the specialists to consult. You won't need Medicaid to pay the bill, and the operation will be performed quite painlessly (except for fits of chronic laughter) at the Maplewood Theater under the guise of a movie, "Young Frankenstein." This is the most successful collaboration so far between Brooks and Wilder, and I hope it won't be the last. They co-wrote the screenplay from a story by Wilder (loosely based on the Mary Shelly novel but firmly grounded in the Hollywood tradition of all previous Frankenstein films). The film is also the third appearance in a Brooks' film by Wilder, Wilder appeared in "The Producers" and last year's 'Blazing Saddles," both directed by Brooks, as is "Young Frankenstein."

Brooks sets the proper mood from the very beginning in this film, using black-and-white film rather than color and a near-square screen ratio to imitate the Karloff films of years past Just about every scene you can remember from any Frankenstein film is in the Brooks' version-the laboratory is even equipped with the same machinery and electric apparatus used for the first Frankenstein movie, on loan from a private owner.

Wilder plays the grandson of the first Doctor Frankenstein who inherits the family eastle in Transylvania In the opening scene, Frankenstein delivers a lecture to medical students and tells the future physicians that there is no hope in re-creating life as his grandfather did Once he arrives in Transylvania, however, his outlook changes. Young Doctor Frankenstein accepts the challenge and begins to give new life to an otherwise dead Peter Boyle, the lovable but misunderstood

CASTLE THEATER

"GIELT SCHOOL SCANDAL"

"Blazing Saddles") returns as Doctor Frankenstein's wife. She's at her best when being seduced by the monster or in putting off her mad-scientist husband.

Kenneth Mars plays a Strangelovian law enforcement officer, getting more laughs out of mechanistic arm gestures than Robby the Robot. And then there's Marty Feldman, Doctor Frankenstein's hunchback assistant whose hunch keeps shifting from one shoulder to the other from scene to scene. If that doesn't strike your funnybone, Feldman's 10-foot wide eyes will. There's also a cameo appearance by Gene Hackman and a beautiful laboratory assistant played by Terry Garr, a television sitcom and commercial veteran who should be getting more work in Hollywood for her natural talents and natural endowments.

Cloris Leachman is also featured in "Young Frankenstein" as caretaker of the castle and lover of the first Doctor Frankenstein. Her name is enough to make horses rear.

Follow Gene Wilder and Mel Brooks from Pennsylvania to Transylvania Stations for the ultimate monster movie. It'll tie you up in stitches

Hart comedy set for stage opening at Mill on Feb. 19

"Light Up the Sky," starring Newark-born Vivian Blaine, Celeste Holm, Sam Levine, Kay Medford and Wesley Addy, will open at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, Wednesday, Feb. 19. The Moss Hart comedy, which will be directed by Harold J. Kennedy, will play until

Kennedy, who was responsible for the revival of "The Front Page" on Broadway a few seasons ago, with Helen Hayes and the late Robert Ryan, will send "Light Up the Sky" on to Ford's Theater, Washington, D.C. for four weeks. Then it will go on a national tour. Kennedy considers "Light Up the Sky," "a funny play about show business, where there is still glamour, and where women wear gorgeous clothes. I feel that audiences are getting sick of the sordid and banal-they want to laugh." Additional information may be obtained by calling the box office at 376-4343.

Swedish drama comes to Elmora

The picture, which opened yesterday at the Elmora Theater, Elizabeth, is a marathon closeup of a marital relationship, ruthlessly dissected by Bergman.

The film stars Liv Ullmann, Erland Josephson, Bibi Andersson and Jan Malmsjo. It was photographed in color

Hoffman said, "As a result of the continued shift from manufacturing to service jobs in the state, most job seekers are experiencing difficulty in their efforts to find reemployment. To alleviate this problem, an Employment

During the Employment Opportunity Orientation Program, unemployment insurance staff members will explain the present labor situation as it relates to the search for work. Claimants will be advised of the current unavailability of jobs that match their previous occupation, and the prospect of retraining for emerging fields also will be discussed.
