Johnstone, Chatham attorney; Bob Logan, the judge's law secretary and Franz Skok, Chatham attorney. Feller said he anticipates a decision on the zoning matter, which has been in and out of various courts for several years, in the next two or three weeks.

Tennis courts delayed; board issues warning

The contractor may not complete the four tennis courts on the Jonathan Dayton campus in Springfield before April, despite a warning from the attorney for the Union County Regional High School District that the firm could be fined $50 per day for delays past December.

The district's legal counsel, Franz Skok, reporting to the school board Tuesday, said he sent the "notice of warning" Nov. 4 to the contractor, Valley Paving Co. of Ramsey. The school district's assistant superintendent for buildings and grounds, Lewis Fredericks, said he met with the contractor's representatives Nov. 7 and requested a written completion schedule.

The schedule had not arrived—much to the annoyance of Natalie Waldt, senior board member from Springfield—before the board's regular adjourned meeting Tuesday night at Gov. Livingston Regional High in Berkeley Heights.

"It's ridiculous," Waldt said about the contractor's performance so far.

When the schedule does arrive, Skok predicted, the contractor will request board approval to finish the job in April. The contract calls for completion in 120 working days, ending sometime in December, Skok noted. But the head of Valley Paving claims 10 warm, dry days—not expected until spring—will be needed when the final composition coating is laid on the courts, Skok reported.

"What would that (April completion) do to the Jonathan Dayton Schedule?" asked Charles Vitale Jr. of Kenilworth, the school board president.

"From March 15th on, it would mean additional transportation costs, as well as the inconvenience," replied Dr. Donald Merachnik, the school district superintendent. He said that's when the tennis season will begin, and student teams would have to be transported off campus for practice as well as games. Waldt had initiated the board request Nov. 1 for the warning letter from Skok. This week she and other board members asked their attorney to start researching the legal question of whether they could recover transportation costs from the contractor, in addition to any other penalties.

Skok said his warning letter told Valley Paving that the school district is concerned about lack of progress on the entire contract. The contract, originally for $139,300, included $44,700 to resurface three tennis courts and build a fourth at Gov. Livingston, plus $94,600 for the four new courts at Dayton. The board later authorized an additional $1,490 for preliminary electrical work on the Dayton courts, where a Springfield citizens' committee wants the township to finance installation of lights. The citizens' group says non-students could play tennis at night at Dayton.

Dayton will be the last of the district's four high schools to get tennis courts. The district spent five years negotiating with Springfield township officials about aesthetics and with state officials about flood resistance of the proposed courts. With these problems finally resolved, Waldt said, Springfield tennis enthusiasts are in no mood for further delays.

In another matter Tuesday, the board received both pro and con comments

Tower deck to open with safety facelift

Final safety precaution measures on the Watchung Reservation water tower are expected to be completed by Dec. 12 and the observation deck most likely will be open to the public soon after.

The Elizabethtown Water Co., owners of the tower, completed $7,000 worth of safety improvements this summer. The final stage, fencing in the observation deck and placing bars at the top of the tower to prohibit climbing on the outside of the structure, will cost the utility another $13,000.

The vice-president of the water company, Walter Mony, said he had originally set a top price of $10,000 for the final improvements, but reluctantly was going along with the bid accepted by the Union County Park Commission.

The safety measures finished this summer include a 10-foot-high chain link fence surrounding the tower, topped with six strands of barbed wire; a security swing-gate to allow for access of maintenance vehicles and securing existing wire mesh that surrounds the observation deck.

The tower was closed to the public following an apparent suicide in 1975.

about its Nov. 1 decision to adopt a supplementary system for ranking students in the class of 1978 at each regional high school. The official ranking system is based on cumulative grade-point totals from all courses, including vocational and physical education. The supplementary system, called "the academic ranking," excludes some courses from the totals. Reaction this week ranged from an in person complaint by a Gov. Livingston student, Diane Davignon, to a thank-you letter from a Springfield mother, Muriel Craner.

Earlier, Merachnik and his assistant superintendent for public information, Gary Bobko, had urged all citizens with opinions on ranking to become part of a district team reviewing the problem. Bobko invited both parents and students to call him at his office, 379-4889, if they are willing to serve on an advisory council. The advisory council "will serve as a sounding board and provide input reactions" to a newly organized Regional Ranking Committee of teachers and administrators, according to Bobko.

The two ranking systems, official and academic, were adopted for the class of

A NEW WAY TO PROTECT THE PINELANDS

There's been a lot of talk in our state about protecting the New Jersey Pine Barrens. This expanse of land, located between New Jersey's famous seaside resorts and the heavily-populated Northeast Corridor, includes some of the most beautiful land on the entire East Coast.

The wilderness is broken here and there by small communities and farms, as well as cranberry and blueberry bogs that are among the most productive in the nation. Relics of past industrial activity provide insight into the area's rich history.

The Pine Barrens are also blessed with an underground reservoir—equivalent to a 2,000 square miles lake—and this body of water helps hold the entire area in ecological balance.

But, unfortunately, the trend in our country has been towards rampant development of our dwindling open spaces. Since the Pine Barrens are so large, since land is so expensive there and since some of the land should be developed for agricultural and other purposes, it can't be protected through the traditional national park system.

So the question is how can we preserve this most valuable landscape?

Working with Senator Case, I have developed an approach that will help preserve the essential character of the Pine Barrens region and do even more it will establish a national framework to protect other valuable cultural, natural and recreational areas.

The National Reserves Act of 1977, as we call the bill, would use a variety of conservation and land management techniques. Planning will start at the grass roots, with local citizens and governments deeply involved.

Federal officials will provide technical and financial assistance for protecting land and water resources. The whole process will culminate in an act of Congress declaring an area a "national reserve." In short, our bill creates a new mechanism for preserving and protecting valuable areas without shutting off compatible growth and development.

And to test this exciting concept, we have selected the Pine Barrens. The bill states clearly that the planning phases will begin on the Pine Barrens as soon as the measure is passed.

I think this is a good bill—using an innovative national approach to solve the problems of the Pine Barrens and other regions.

Sixteen years ago, when I introduced the original Open Space Act, I said, "The question is whether we wish to continue our haphazard, wasteful and often deeply unsatisfying pattern of development, or whether we wish to create something of lasting value." The question is before us again today, and our answer will help to determine the legacy we leave to future generations.

History society open Saturday

The New Jersey Historical Society has opened its library and museum to the public Saturdays.

The society (230 Broadway, Newark) will be open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

"We are happy to announce the Saturday openings as a convenience to our many library and museum users who cannot visit us during weekdays," said Dr. Clifford L. Lord, director of the society.

Dr. Lord said the new hours would give families better opportunity to visit the museum and researchers and writers, many of whom work during the week, more time to use the library.

Currently on display in the museum is a retrospective of the society's exhibition during the last 25 years, as well as its permanent portrait exhibition. The society's library, one of the largest New Jersey collections in existence, has 50,000 volumes plus voluminous pamphlets, manuscripts, prints, photographs and other items.

IN CONGRESS

Matthew Rinaldo

12th District

One of the biggest growth areas for crime can be found in nine northeastern states where cigarette bootlegging has cost New York $600 million in revenues and New Jersey $119 million in the last ten years.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations reports that Pennsylvania has lost $176 million, Connecticut $85 million, and Massachusetts $32 million. The combined cigarette revenue losses for Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio during that same period were $86 million.

The sale of contraband cigarettes has been even more devastating to the cigarette industry. Business losses as a result of the black market in cigarettes are estimated at $2.5 billion. This has resulted in unemployment for half the workers in the wholesale and cigarette vending business.

The reason is that the gap between state taxes on cigarettes sold in tobacco producing states and the northeast has increased threefold in the last 15 years. Business has blossomed in counterfeit tax stamps and in smuggling huge quantities of cigarettes from low tax states.

According to the Council against Cigarette Bootlegging, the black market in untaxed cigarettes has become so widespread that it covers virtually every major apartment house, industrial plant and office building in New York City. One out of every two packs of cigarettes sold in New York City is connected to the black market, according to the Council.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations claims that four New York crime families, employing more than 500 enforcers, peddlers and distributors, smuggle an estimated 480 million packs into the state each year.

Two bills that I am sponsoring in Congress would drastically curtail the contraband sale of cigarettes and drive out organized crime.

First, in place of a dual state and federal cigarette tax, my bill would impose a single federal tax of 20 cents a pack at the point of shipment. It would drastically curb tax collection and administrative costs in each state and assure that the tax would be imposed and collected on a dozen major cigarette manufacturers.

None of the states that agree to this method of collection would lose revenue. Indeed, by agreeing to eliminate its own cigarette tax, New Jersey would be able to receive at least $17 million more a year from the federal tax. Along with a reduction in state administrative costs, this would increase New Jersey's revenue from cigarette sales from $168 million a year to about $185 million.

The second part of this attack on cigarette bootlegging involves passage of legislation that I also am sponsoring to make it a federal crime to ship, receive or possess contraband cigarettes. This would be defined as more than 20,000 cigarettes without a tax stamp.

Those who violated the law would be subject to a $10,000 fine and a two-year prison term. The law would be enforced by the Division of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in the U.S. Department of the Treasury.

Establishing a single federal tobacco tax would discourage organized crime and recapture about half a billion dollars in state and federal tobacco revenue that is now lost through the black market. It also would give legitimate tobacco wholesalers and distributors protection against organized crime.

Although there is some resistance in tobacco growing states like North Carolina and Kentucky to a combined cigarette tax, the loss of tax dollars to organized crime should convince Congress that this legislation is in the national interest. No state would receive less revenue than it now obtains from cigarette sales.

The Multi-State Tax Commission, an association of primarily western and southern states, supports legislation to crack down on bootlegging. The commission recognizes that states are losing legitimate sources of distribution because of the black market, and that it has caused several states, like New York and New Jersey, to keep raising their cigarette taxes to make up for those losses.

With enactment of my bill, taxpayers would benefit and smokers in high tax states like New Jersey would end up paying less for a pack of cigarettes.

FROM THE WINNERS
Winning is a great experience. But it's not just a feat of numbers. There is also a warm, human side.

The Republican Party of Mountainside could not be enjoying success now without the help of its countless supporters and workers. On behalf of Tim Benford, Bruce Geiger and Ruth Gibadlo, campaign treasurer Bill Biunno and I want to say "thank you very much" to all the people of Mountainside who made that success a reality.

Special high praise goes to the tireless Mountainside municipal chairman, Ed Gibadlo and his dedicated committee people—movers and shakers all. These are the supporters who unselfishly braved the inclement weather of the last month.

We are all very grateful to the Mountainside Echo and its reporter, Denise Renner Martin, for generously demonstrating the role of community vehicle at this time. Our earnest hope is that more Mountainside residents will join us in political participation, for good government is everyone's concern.

Teen Talk

THIS WEEK'S LETTER: How can you tell if a guy is playing it straight? My boyfriend and I have been going together for six months. He's very good to me. He tells me that he loves me and wants to marry me as soon as I am seventeen, which is four months away. We go out at least three times a week and he takes me to the best movies and restaurants. We get along great. The problem is, my friends. All of them tell me I am being double-timed. They say he is dating two other girls and telling them the same things he tells me. I'm afraid if I ask him about it, he'll get mad and I'll lose him completely. What should I do?

OUR REPLY: Ask him. If you have the kind of relationship you think you have, he will not be offended. He may tell you that it is true, so be prepared to give him his walking papers or let things continue as they are. He may also tell you it is not true. Your choice then is to either believe him or seek out the truth.

Fine ordered for guilty plea in corpse case

Keith Brink, 27, of Springfield, already in the state reformatory at Yardville for an unrelated offense, has received a suspended sentence and $500 fine for participating in the unlawful disposal of a corpse snatched in Union and found floating in a Springfield pond.

The body, buried for 53 years, was taken from Hollywood Cemetery in Union and found by an off-duty patrolman May 20 in Springfield.

Brink, serving an indeterminate sentence, has been in the reformatory since July for violation of probation in a 1974 conviction for possessing heroin. He pleaded guilty Nov. 7 of two additional offenses: obtaining money by false pretenses from a Springfield service station Sept. 27, 1976, and participating in the body disposal last May 19.

County Court Judge Edward W. Beglin Jr. sentencing Brink last Friday, said the defendant could serve a reformatory term for the service station offense at the same time he completes the sentence for probation violation. On the body-disposal count, Judge Beglin ordered a suspended sentence to begin after Brink is freed from Yardville. The judge also fined Brink $500 and placed him on probation for four years.

Stuart Anker, 20, and Dale Nitolo, 19, both of Springfield, were charged with actually snatching the body from Union. Four other men, including Brink, were charged with helping to dispose of the body.

The Brink verdict was the first in the body case. The other five suspects pleaded "not guilty" in October and await trial.

County groups given arts council grants

The New Jersey State Council on the Arts this week announced the award of $19,650 in grants in Union County as part of the state council's annual program of matching grants and fellowships to support the arts throughout the state.

Harry Devlin of Westfield, vice chairman of the council and chairman of its grants committee, said the grants and fellowships in Union County are included in the council's overall program of $235,000 in awards for 1977.

The Printmaking Council of New Jersey, located in Plainfield, received two grants of $2,000 each. One grant will help defray the cost of the salary of the council administrator while the other will assist the council in staging experimental printmaking, educational workshops and exhibitions.

The Summit Art Center received $400 to assist in financing its operating volunteer.

The State Arts Council also approved a $1,800 grant to the Plainfield Symphony Orchestra for a family concert program and a $1,000 grant to the Choral Art Society of New Jersey in Westfield for a program featuring great choruses from major operas.

A $1,000 grant was also approved for the Remington Review in Elizabeth and the Federated Art Associations of New Jersey in Westfield received $750 to assist in research and publication of a directory of New Jersey art organizations.

The state council approved two fellowships for Union County artists.

A $3,000 music fellowship was awarded to Mario D. Lombardo of Cranford while Betty M. Stroffel of Westfield received a $1,000 fellowship in visual arts.

UCTI appoints Dr. Hadden to interim position

Dr. John F. Hadden of Mountainide has assumed the responsibilities of interim president, superintendent of the Union County Technical Institute and Vocational Center in Scotch Plains.

Dr. Hadden, who was appointed by the Board of Education of the Technical Institute and Vocational Center, succeeded Dr. Joseph J. O'Connell, who has been serving as acting president superintendent since July. He will serve in an interim capacity until a new president superintendent is designated by the Board, according to Mitchell S. Potempa, board president.

Hadden is the former superintendent of schools for the Southern Regional High School in Ocean County and previously served as superintendent of schools for the West Windsor-Plainsboro school district.

He is a graduate of the State University of New York at Fredonia, where he earned his bachelor's degree in music and master's degree in education, and holds a doctor of education degree from the University of Buffalo.

Hadden is married and the father of three sons, one a sophomore at Ohio State University and two in high school.

Dr. Harvey Charles, former president-superintendent, resigned in July for reasons of health. Potempa said a search committee has been appointed to seek a new president for the institution.

The State We're In

Brendan Byrne has won another four-year term as governor of New Jersey and, while the pundits have paid small heed to the existence of a so-called "environmental vote," I think it is alive and healthy and living in New Jersey.

Our friends the pundits are undoubtedly correct when they say that the income tax was the main issue upon which the election hinged. But thoughtful people throughout this state we're in, worried about the fate of our common environment, realized on election day that the more the property tax is deemphasized, along with the insane competition for municipal tax rates which it encourages, the better the climate for intelligent earmarking of land for all uses, including open space preservation, commercialization, housing and agriculture.

Several weeks before the election, candidates Byrne and Raymond H. Bateman talked at length about the environmental attitudes they would display if elected. This was at the annual convention of the Association of New Jersey Environmental Commissioners at Princeton University.

Gov. Byrne at that time said things which many of us who heard him find very encouraging, now that he is reelected—things like his continuing opposition to Tocks Island Dam, deepwater oil ports and offshore nuclear power plants, continuing emphasis on preservation of the Pine Barrens as a unique forest and wetland region, and his commitment to maintaining the independence of the Department of Environmental Protection, which he termed "essential to its work."

Of special interest was Byrne's call for implementation of an urban environment program, to focus attention on the need for more urban parks, big and small, and to "show cities that environmental issues are not limited to suburban ... or rural areas."

The governor spoke also about the need to expand environmental awareness "among all our people," so that an occasional lapse in bureaucratic procedure or judgment cannot be pounced upon greedily by selfish interests to prove that all environmental protection is bad.

Considerable political courage was demonstrated by Byrne, such a short while before the election, when he said he doubted if land-use controls should be left entirely to local governments because of the inability of many officials at that level to withstand the pressures for tax ratables.

I'm especially intrigued that Byrne, when asked about the possibility of a large statewide bond issue to preserve agricultural lands through purchase of development easements, declared that he is keenly interested in the outcome of a four-municipality test program under way in Burlington County. He endorsed the concept of easement purchases and of transfer of development rights by saying, "If it works the way it looks on paper, I'm for it."

Finally, departing from the gubernatorial election, I'm really happy that the aforementioned environmental vote erupted so decisively in Burlington County. That's where the freeholders polled the public about their issuing $1 million in bonds to buy development, or conservation, easements on critical areas of the Pine Barrens. The vote was overwhelmingly in favor of the program, in every part of the county.

This success of the relatively unfamiliar, although not new, idea of purchase of limited rights to lands for conservation purposes should take root now in other counties, following the widespread interest in the outcome of the Burlington County vote. It offers a whole new open space preservation ballgame, letting an owner keep his or her land while selling the development rights. A taxpayer dollar goes a lot farther that way.

Robert Pritchard of Westfield were fined a total of $50 and $20 in court costs. Lawrence Iuso and Manuel Salgado, both of Hillside, were each levied $50 fines and $15 each in costs. Salgado also received a six-month probation sentence.

Bauer also found three drivers guilty of speeding. Two Mountainside residents were each fined a total of $30 for speeding on W. Tracey drive in the Watchung reservation. Dwight Johnson and Frederick McKay both were found guilty of driving 42 m.p.h. in a 25 mile

Rt. 22 mishap injures woman

A Plainfield woman was treated for head injuries and released from Overlook Hospital following a hit-and-run accident on Rt. 22 at Lawrence avenue Thursday afternoon.

Irene Adams told police she was stopped at the Lawrence avenue light in the eastbound lane because there was an accident in front of her. She said a tractor trailer then struck her car in the rear.

According to reports, Adams said the truck driver got out of his vehicle and told her to pull off the highway. When she moved her car, the truck driver left the scene, police said.

Adams described the truck driver as a white male with a southern accent.

Mental Health

National Institutes of Health

The drug phencyclidine ("PCP" as it is commonly called) has been blamed for the hospitalization of at least 1,000 young persons in one major U.S. city during the last three years.

The young people showed schizophrenia-like symptoms after use of PCP and described its effects as sensations of numbness, extreme suspiciousness, feelings of isolation and an inability to control their thoughts and actions.

Phencyclidine was originally developed as an anesthetic in the late 1950s, but its use was abandoned because of the drug's erratic and unpleasant side effects. According to a report issued by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, the illicit drug can cause visual and auditory hallucinations, feelings of apathy and estrangement, drowsiness, inability to speak, delirium, abdominal cramps, vomiting and, in some instances, coma and death.

The drug today is legally restricted to use as an animal tranquilizer.

Depending on the amount taken, PCP may act as a stimulant, depressant or hallucinogen. Frequently, the purchaser of PCP believes he is buying another drug — it is often sold as or mixed with other drugs such as mescaline, LSD, or cocaine, or sprinkled on marijuana. When sold in capsules, PCP is called "peace pill" or "hog." In powder form it is called

"angel dust."

Unlike the usual schizophrenics, PCP users generally have no history of psychosis and respond much slower to treatment.

According to a federal report, PCP has replaced LSD as the primary hallucinogen sought by drug abusers. First observed in San Francisco in 1967, PCP under a variety of labels had spread to New York and other major cities by 1969.

Forensic unit elects leader

Dr. Charence S. Johnson, a senior member of the New Jersey Institute of Technology faculty, has been elected president of the College Forensic Association.

This is the first time in the history of the association that a member from a technical institution has been elected to executive office.

The College Forensic Association is composed of moderate-sized higher education institutions, largely from the Eastern states, devoted to the encouragement of competitive public discussion and debate. Two intercollegiate forensic tournaments are held each year under association auspices.

Conference planned on the environment

Dialogues will be opened between economic and environmental proponents during a two-day conference today and tomorrow at the Holiday Inn, North Brunswick.

Based on the theme, "New Jersey: Environmental and Economic Health," the conference is sponsored by the New Jersey Conservation Foundation of Morristown with the support of 25 other organizations in a variety of fields. It is partially funded by the Urban Environment Conference Inc. of Washington, D.C., through a grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

"The seminar will provide a forum in which leaders of the state's labor, minority, business, community, industrial, health, academic and environmental organizations will discuss local and statewide environmental issues in terms of their varied perspectives, with the hope of identifying areas of common agreement and understanding," said David F. Moore, executive director of NJCF, a private, nonprofit, statewide organization.

"We believe the coming discussions will make the basic interrelationships of environmental, social and economic factors more apparent and help us all to find equitable solutions to the state's many problems."

Moore branded as a fallacy the idea that environmental and economic interests are diametrically opposed. "The truth is that good environmental policy is consistent with sound economic practices," he said.

A dozen workshops will bear on issues of social, environmental and economic interest. Warren Muir, deputy administrator of the EPA, will speak on "The Economic and Ecological Impact of Toxic Substance Regulation."

Other speakers will include Edward Grau, director of Region 9 of the United Auto Workers; Assemblyman William Perkins, 31st district; Hazel Henderson, codirector of the Princeton Center for Alternatives Futures Inc.; and James W. Riley, economist for Merck & Co.

Topics of workshops will be urban air quality and the EPA emission offset policy, the impact of offshore oil and gas drilling, hazardous and carcinogenic materials, taxation implications, casinos vs. wetlands, and housing and environmental regulations.

Also, coastal zone planning, food plan regulation, state air pollution

Byrne promise is applauded by school boards

The New Jersey School Boards Association president, Lawrence S. Schwartz, this week expressed strong appreciation for the statement by Gov. Brendan Byrne that his first priority in his new term would be the provision of quality education for all New Jersey's children.

"It's notable that Gov. Byrne, within moments of his reelection victory, singled out public education as the first issue that would occupy his attention during the next four years," remarked Schwartz. "Board members around New Jersey are heartened by this significant commitment to our children."

"We are also hopeful that the completion of the legislative and gubernatorial elections will allow swift passage of a tax formula and permit us to turn our attention to maintaining and improving our public schools," said Schwartz.

Noting the unsettled nature of school finance over the past three years, Schwartz commented, "While the association has difficulties with certain provisions of the educational funding program, we're now confident that planning for the 1978-79 school year can go on in an orderly and responsible manner."

Schwartz concluded: "We're optimistic that the next four years under Gov. Byrne and the newly-elected legislature will prove exciting and successful for the public schools in our state."

Early symposium

Originally, the word "symposium" meant "drinking together." In ancient Greece, a symposium was a catered party at which from three to nine guests would eat and drink and be entertained by dancers, musicians, jugglers and courtesans.

TV looks at schools

New Jersey Public Television's "Jerseyfile" looks at various educational alternatives on Monday, Nov. 28, channels 23, 50, 52 and 58. The show will be repeated Thursday, Dec. 1 at 10:30 p.m.

Crystal Sargent, certified speech pathologist and director of the Rock Brook School, Blawenburg, will outline the program for children with communication disorders offered at the school.

"Jerseyfile" will also show the Strawberry Hill School in Woodbridge Township which has a program for gifted and talented primary students.

Folk sing program

Children and their parents have been invited to join in folk singing at the Montclair Art Museum Friday, Nov. 25, from 2 to 3 p.m. Guitarist Barbara Simpson, the museum's associate curator of education, will lead the singing.

Joining in the program of music and songs will be Elise Travers, of the museum staff, playing the flute, and Kathy Kirk.

The songs will be mostly American folk songs, but a few of Miss Simpson's favorite English songs will be included, she said. Miss Simpson came to this country nine years ago from Creve in Cheshire, England, where she grew up.

She attended Fordham University and performed there as a singer. She is now working on a masters' degree in painting at Pratt Institute of Fine Arts. She has also taught early childhood education at the Bank Street College of Education in New York.

The museum will be closed on Thanksgiving Day. Robert Koenig, the museum's assistant director, will give a gallery talk on the exhibition of work by contemporary painter Robert Slatky on Sunday, Nov. 27. The exhibition closes that day.

A look at old homes

A three-part series entitled "Face You Well, Old House," with each episode dealing with a specific architectural design, will be seen on channels 23, 50, 52 and 58 beginning Tuesday, Nov. 29, at 10:30 p.m.

The first program, will feature the solidly built Dutch colonial of the Hackensack Valley. These houses, largely in Bergen County but as far north as New York State, are a purely American invention and are recognizable by their overhanging roofs.

The host of the series is co-producer Harry Devlin of Mountainside, artist/writer/lecturer and fellow at Union College.

Indian Forest built 'around' environment

Indian Forest in East Brunswick is an unusual community in that first priority was given to environmental considerations before even considering the number of homes to be built or the coverage or density to be obtained as in other subdivisions.

A professor at Cook College was engaged to study the land and also its relationship to the surrounding areas. The planning staff in East Brunswick spent considerable time with Indian Forest's planner leading its expertise and professionalism to the overall design.

After almost two years of study and planning Indian Forest was approved. Recently a member of the county planning staff stated Indian Forest was the most environmentally sensitive subdivision that had ever been approved in Middlesex County.

Open space is what makes this possible. Indian Forest has about 32 acres of greenbelt woven through its lands, preserving nature and providing privacy. The open space land was deliberately selected to preserve the most sensitive areas within the job. Homes are to be built in cooperation with the environment so that the beauty of the rolling hills and vegetation are preserved. The harmony thus achieved gives the homes a setting of openness and privacy. Monotony and regimentation are abolished.

Indian Forest has created an area for urban living and yet is close to nature. Natural trails abound through the open spaces. The right to use these lands and the privacy it affords is unusual due to the design.

Indian Forest is in an area of rich, rolling farmlands with many public and private recreational facilities nearby. Directly across Old Stage road is a 1,400 acre county park dedicated as a passive park area and primarily acquired by Middlesex County for conservation purposes.

The 10 models are being made available for inspection offering a wide variety of floor plans and styles that should satisfy every potential home-seeker. The layouts include three to five-bedroom home styles and up to 2 1/2 baths. Full basements and two-car garages are also included where shown. The development can be reached from the N.J. Turnpike Exit 9 to Rt. 18 south and by turning right to the Cranbury South River road Rt. 535, and proceeding to Fern road. Turn left to Old Stage road and left to Indian Forest models.

FLORENCE HAIG, of Crestwood Village is ordained as Elder of the Community Reformed Church of Whiting. The Rev. Harold Schut conducted the ceremony.

A near-sellout as Brunswick Heights opens

Brunswick Heights, the 133-home community at Rt. 27 and Sand Hill road, South Brunswick, which announced its grand opening two weeks ago, has, according to Joseph Stern of Eastern Properties, Kendall Park, the developers, sold almost all available homes in the first two sections.

Said Stern, "We really hadn't expected the first two sections of 44 homes to go so quickly. In fact, we anticipated opening the third section next spring, and here we are opening it six months ahead of schedule. And we're already well into construction of a number of homes with occupancy scheduled to start in late November and early December."

Located mid-way between Princeton and New Brunswick, Brunswick Heights offers many location advantages: exceptional commuting facilities including close-by rain and bus transportation to New York and neighboring communities. The location, according to Stern, has been a strong factor in the community's success.

In addition, the five distinctive homes being offered are available in at least 15 different elevations, affording home buyers the opportunity to express their individuality. Families have a choice of colonial, split-level and multi-level homes in Tudor, colonial and contemporary designs at prices starting from $57,990.

Models include the Eaton, a tri-level home with a living room on its own level, a dramatic 2 1/2-story high cathedral ceiling and two-story windows. The home also includes three bedrooms, paneled family room and two-car garage.

The Concord model is a traditional colonial with four bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, paneled family room and attached garage.

The Bedford split-level features a multi-level design highlighted by a "balcony" dining room. This home offers four bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, paneled family room and attached garage as standard.

The Fairfield is a true center hall colonial with four bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, paneled family room and two-car attached garage. The two-story Amherst features a 15-foot "showcase" center foyer, four bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, paneled family room and attached garage.

Brunswick Heights, 133-home community at Sand Hill Road and Route 27 in South Brunswick, N.J. shows this Bedford Split-level as one of five models offered at the sub-division. Prices start at $57,990. Joseph Stern of Eastern Properties is the builder.

Final sale negotiated

The Colonial House garden apartment building at 1087 E. Jersey st. in Elizabeth has been sold for cash above mortgage financing in excess of $375,000. The sale was negotiated by representative Stuart R. Falkin and Vice President Martin Ostroff of Gebro-Hammer Associates, the Livingston-based real estate investment specialists.

Colonial House is a 15-year-old, two and one-half story complex with 35 residential units. The property is situated two blocks from downtown Elizabeth, and is convenient to schools, transportation and hospitals, as well as the central business district. The building, which has 28 three-room and seven four-room apartments, offers 100 percent on-site parking for residents.

The building was sold for Toby Associates of Irvington, which was represented by William Rokos, Esq. of Union. The buyer was Chersey Associates of Cranford, represented by Sheldon Berger, Esq.

Builder has choices in developing land

Developing a building concept is an art to Martin Newman of the American Dream Builders group, who says that changing a tract of building lots to a development of one-family homes is as much an art as a science.

"The developer must have a feeling for the land as well as the style house to be built there. He must know who will want to live in the community he is building. With this in mind, construction starts and the personality of the house is developed," he explained.

He gives the following examples: Should the kitchen be the place to give the most square footage or the master bedroom or both? This will decide the size and selling price of the homes to be built. The appliances that should be included must be given considerable thought. Are micro wave ovens going to take the place of conventional ovens? Should they be standard? Are trash compactors going to be included? The front elevations of the homes are one of the most important aspects since it's obviously the first view the public gets of the model. The choices here are numerous. Vertical siding, horizontal, aluminum, shakes, brick plus many other materials are available. The cost of these materials and how they will look on the particular home to be built is a problem the developer must solve.

For more than 10 years in Newman has developed communities. He now is making decisions for the American Dream Builders Group. Developments are being built throughout New Jersey with each development needing personal attention. A good example is in Squirrel Run off Metlars lane in Piscataway in Middlesex County. Some of American Dream's finest models are on display there. New areas under construction include Manalapan Township, Toms River and Old Bridge.

The developments in West Milford (Star Valley), Jefferson Township (Jefferson Rock), South Brunswick (Mardi Gras) and Rainbows in Berkeley Township are selling very well, which means Newman's choices and decisions are still working.

Mardi Gras opens models

American Dream Builders Group has announced the grand opening of its development of 28 homes off Sand Hill road in South Brunswick.

Mardi Gras will offer a choice of nine homes including ranches, bi-levels, split levels and colonials. The homes are priced from $54,990 to $70,990. The first two models completed and decorated for public viewing are the Granada split level and the Florence option colonial.

The Granada is a four-bedroom colonial split level with 2 1/2 baths, two-car garage, full basement, living room, dining room, kitchen and paneled family room. Special features include one" Styrofoam insulated sheathing as well as full thick fiber glass insulation in walls; Magic Chef self-cleaning energy saving oven, a built in dishwasher and wall to wall carpeting.

The Florence option is a four-bedroom colonial home with all of the features of the Granada split level. It sells for $63,990.

A very exciting option is the fireplace on display in both models. La Droff fireplaces made in France have made a big impact on the American home buyers.

The models are open seven days a week from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Brochures are available in person or BARCELONA II bi-level design makes its debut at the new Villas at Berkeley community on Pelican drive at Rt. 9, Berkeley Township. The new model, priced from $47,990, offers a buyer many options in interior layout and features. Special emphasis has been placed on energy conservation.

Barcelona II model debuts at development

The Barcelona II a bi-level model whose design has been utilized with great success by the developer for some 20 years in other areas of New Jersey and New York, makes its debut this weekend at the newly-opened Villas at Berkeley community on Pelican Drive at Rt. 9 in Berkeley Township.

It is being introduced by Landall Corp. of River Edge, builders of residential communities in New Jersey, New York and Florida, as a no-frills house with approximately 2,300-square-feet of living area and is priced from $47,990. Landall also is showing a ranch known as the Seville with two bedrooms and a den or a third bedroom from $41,990 and the Cordoba II, a two-story Colonial with four bedrooms from $49,490.

The bi-level, with three bedrooms and den or fourth bedroom and two and a half baths, has two floors of living area and numerous features. Henrietta Realty, Inc. of Berkeley is the sales agent.

The builder is placing a special emphasis on energy conservation and use of economical oil heat. The energy aspect is highlighted through use of half-inch sheetrock throughout and energy conserving rated insulation such as three and a half-inch rated R-11 in walls and six-inch rated R-19 in the ceiling. Heating is by an economical oil-fired hot water baseboard system.

Tucked away in a suburban niche of the Jersey shore just two and a half miles south of Exit 80 of the Garden State Parkway, the Villas' homes can be purchased with five percent down for 30 years at eight and one quarter percent. Occupancies are slated for this year and early 1978.

The spacious bi-level plan offers six rooms on a level just a few steps off the foyer entry. Included is a master bedroom with adjoining bath and stall shower, two additional bedrooms, a hall bath with tub shower, living room with optional fireplace, formal dining room, a decorator kitchen with custom-crafted wood cabinets, 30-inch oven range and matching hood, and a broom closet.

The lower level of the house features a recreation room with sliding-glass doors to the rear yard, an adjoining powder room, oversized storage-utility area, a den or fourth bedroom, and a side-entry garage with direct access into the hall area.

Quality features include wall-to-wall carpeting in a choice of colors; color-coordinated family and master baths with decorator vanities and ceramic-tiled floors, tub and shower walls; maintenance-free aluminum gutters and leaders; 150 amp electrical service and all copper wiring, and an approved smoke alarm.

The homes are being built on lots about one-third of an acre in an area which has city sewers and water.

Shopping is nearby on Rt. 9, there are both public and parochial schools in the area, and houses of worship for most faiths. The parkway makes for easy commuting to North Jersey and New York, while the nearby ocean offers areas for swimming, boating and fishing.

Renewal financed

A medical office and professional building in Millburn has been financed by a free enterprise renewal project by the David Cronheim Company of Newark and Chatham.

According to Charles J. Dodge, manager of the Cronheim Company's mortgage department, a $600,000 loan was arranged for the property on Essex Street in the heart of Millburn.

Millburn Station Associates developed the medical building project, including 10 professional suites, nine of which have been leased.

W. Kaweczi of Montclair, was the architect for the renovation work and construction was carried out by R.J. Hoppe of Millburn. The tenants are specialists in various medical and dental fields.

"Rehabilitation projects are becoming more important these days," Dodge said, "and lenders recognize this fact and are willing to finance most worthwhile projects."
