Board closes its doors before voting on bids

The Union County Regional High School District Board of Education emerged from a closed-to-the-public session Tuesday night to award contracts totaling $115,887, higher than anticipated, for conversion of seven classrooms at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School into district-wide administrative offices.

The contracts will go to Hahr Construction Co., $32,770 for general construction and carpeting; Cantello Plumbing of Elizabeth, $59,607 for heating, ventilation and air conditioning, and Stater Electric of Newark, $23,500 for electrical work. Each successful bidder was the lowest of three.

The bids were almost $21,000 higher than the $95,000 maximum expected by engineers who drew the specifications.

The board's 1978-79 budget allocated only $105,000 for all costs of the project, including expenses such as design fees.

The bids were on the agenda for discussion in public Tuestry night. But the board decided, over objections from newspaper reporters in the audience, to conduct the pre-vote discussion in

Since the bids were higher than the allocation, budgetary transfers will be required. The board said Regional District personnel, such as teachers. might use the information in salary negotiations if they heard board members talk about other budget accounts from which funds could be transferred. On that basis, the board decided to call the construction bids a 'personnel matter." Many personnel or employee matters are exempt from anti-secrecy provisions of the state's socalled Sunshine Law. The board's attorney, Franz Skok, backed his clients' interpretation of the law.

Newspaper reporters called it a mockery of the anti-secrecy law and of the English language to define construction bids from non-employees as Regional District "personnel matters."

After the discussion in secret, the board voted in public to award the contracts. Member William Keyes of Berkeley Heights cast the lone "no" vote. He said he thinks the price is too high.

Board president Charles E. Vitale Jr. of Kenilworth said the district will save about $39,000 per year in rent by moving its central offices to its publicly owned property in Springfield. The offices are currently located in the privately owned Keyes-Martin Building, also in Springfield. July 1 is Keyes-Martin the tentative moving date.

In other action Tuesday night:

The board congratulated its vice-president, Dr. Marilyn Hart of Mountainside, for her appointment to a National School Boards Association (NSBA) task force to study minimum-competency testing of students. This is one of six major task forces that will serve the NSBA in the 1978-79 school year. Each will have 30 local school board members, chosen from throughout the U.S., serving under a national director of the NSBA.

Other members of the local board said recommendations of the NSBA's major task forces get nationwide attention in education circles. They urged (Continued on page 4)

Lynne Stoddard of West Caldwell has been named the Mountainside school system's public relations consultant for the 1978-79 school year. She succeeds Edward Moore of Millville, who held the post while studying for a master's degree at Glassboro State College.

Stoddard was selected from 55 candidates for the part-time position. She will work the equivalent of one day per week researching and writing press releases and bulletins on school activities and educational developments and compiling the "Our Schools" community newsletter.

Stoddard was graduated in 1965 from Drury College in Springfield, Mo., and received her master's degree from Washington University in St. Louis in 7 She was a high school journalism and English teacher in St. Louis and a aculty advisor for the yearbook, newspaper and literary magazine.

Stoddard served as the public relations director for the Jennings School District in St. Louis from 1971-1974. She is married and has two children.

THE MOUNTAINSIDE BOARD also has selected Dr. William L. Dougherty of Bernardsville as the school system's child psychiatrist-consultant, succeeding Dr. William Gansf.

Dr. Dougherty served in the same capacity for the New Providence school system for nine years and has worked at the Morris County guidance center and the Union County Psychiatric Clinic.

He will visit the borough schools once every two weeks at $50 per hour.

Mary C. O'Halloran of Trenton has been named to succeed Marilyn Lefkowitz as a learning consultant who will serve both borough schools.

Council nears final vote Charles flood work

Mountainside-Springfield Charles street flood project will move one step closer to construction when the Mountainside Borough Council introduces an ordinance appropriating $400,000 for its share of the total project costs at its next meeting. Fifty percent of the construction costs are being shared by Mountainside and Springfield, and Union County is paying the other half.

Council President Bruce Geiger said he expects the council to introduce the appropriation ordinance in August. Approval of the funding ordinance in September would then permit the borough to seek the necessary easements on six residential properties in the area of Linda drive.

Property owner refusal to grant the easements would not hold up construction, according to Geiger, who said the borough would condemn the properties should easements not be granted.

'When condemnation takes place it's only a question of money," explained Geiger.

He added that residents are paid for property damage with or without condemnation, making the legal proceeding simply another matter to contend with.

Several years of discussion followed the initial project proposal in 1974, with Linda drive residents complaining about resultant noise, disruption and property destruction. Borough officials managed to route the project away, from most backyards, but the final plans include construction of pipes through six.

Springfield officials have been waiting anxiously for Mountainside project approval. Township officials are reportedly concerned about escalating costs from inflation and completion of construction before the 1980 National Open Golf Tournament at the Baltrusrol Golf Course. The golf course is the site of the proposed pond which will collect flood waters from catch basins.

The Springfield project portion, however, does not cut through residential property and requires easements only from the Baltusrol owners. The golf course has already offered the easements to the township

Councilman Geiger is hoping that approval for the pending Force drive flood project will be easier to obtain. He said preliminary plans for the construction, involving open stream piping behind Orchard, Force and Penbrook drives, have been drawn up and borough officials have met with nearby

"Some of the residents are opposed to the project," said. Geiger, "but most 'seem to want it."

Major opposition on Force drive may be averted, however, because Geiger said those residents "do have flooding problems. Linda drive residents live several feet away from the Charles street flooding.'

Geiger noted that there is also general residential agreement for the replacement of a county bridge under New Providence road near the Children's Specialized Hospital. He said the county will pay for the bridge construction, but additional channel improvements on the Nomahegan Brook will be paid by the borough. 'We'll recommend the borough go to final design on this project at the next meeting," said Geiger.

For county register

Caldwell

Hugh Caldwell, register of deeds and mortgage, for Union County, says he merits reelection because he has managed to contain the inflation rate in his department to one percent a year. Among changes he introduced to accomplish this are: a new indexing system microfilming system, record producing system, map filing system, film duplicating system and map laminating system. Caldwell says these innovations have resulted in a savings of $100,000 a year.

-Caldwell-has been a resident of Plainfield for the past 30 years. He was a representative for the United Auto Workers Union for 30 years.

He has been elected as a county freeholder for two terms and served as chairman of the county roads and bridges department. Caldwell is also a former member of the county finance and administrative committees. He has received seven awards from the United Fund, served on the county

Mental Health Board and is chairman of the county Cancer Fund.

Caldwell and his wife Mary Alice have three daughters, Mary, Evelyn and Carlin. He is a communicant of St.

Hattield

Richard P. Hatfield, a resident of Scotch Plains, is running on the Republican ticket for Union County register of deeds and mortgages. He feels he should be elected because of his knowledge of deeds and titles gained from being a real estate license holder and member of the county tax appeals board. He also cites administrative experience as a plant supervisor and company general manager.

Hatfield says he plans to improve efficiency to reduce costs, and will be a visible leader.

Hatfield attended the Scotch Plains schools, Blair Academy and Wesleyan University. He served as a corporal in the Korean conflict and is employed as a real estate salesman.

He has served as municipal chairman and vice-chairman of the county Republican committee. Hatfield has been a co-chairman of the county cancer drive and has been extensively involved with the YMCA

Levin urges drivers to look for tire defect Adam K. Levin, director of the New Jersey Division of Consumer Affairs, this week urged that auto owners check to determine if they own tires from Firestone's discontinued steel-belted radial "500" line and to look for symptoms of defects which could cause life-threatening highway blowouts.

"There are four basic symptoms that indicate this tire is on the verge of failing," said Levin. "We want to alert the consumers of New Jersey so they will be able to spot these symptoms and understand what remedies are available now if they find apparent defects in the tires.

Levin noted that the tire, which has been the focus of national attention stemming from allegations of safety defects and higher-than-normal incidence of road failures, is the subject of a recall proceeding before the U.S. Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

The four symptoms which consumers should look for, according to Levin,

-Blisters or bubbles that appear on the sidewall of the tire;

 Distortion of the tread pattern;
 Uneven wear causing the wire of the steel belt to protrude;

-An out-of-round condition; that is, an S-shaped distortion that appears when viewing the tire head-on.
"We want consumers who find any of these symptoms to know that they do not have to drive around on apparently defective tires," Levin said. "We are making a case-by-case review of complaints which we have received in New Jersey concerning the Firestone "500" to determine if there is consistency among Firestone retail outlets concerning the company's replacement-adjustment policy for failed or defective "500" tires."

"We have contacted the corporate headquarters of Firestone and have received full details on the company's adjustment policy for retailers. We also have been assured that any consumer who has a tire that shows any of these four symptoms can take the tire to a Firestone store or dealer and have an adjustment made," Levin said.

Levin said the only way to be sure whether tires are among the defective ones is to check the serial number on the inside of the tire and decipher its meaning. The state consumer affairs chief explained that tire owner should look for a multi-digit code starting with the letters "DOT" on the inside sidewall of their tires.

'The two letters after 'DOT' are the manufacturer's code and the factory code. For example, the letter 'V', which is the code for Firestone, and the letter 'D,' which is the code for the company's Decatur, Ill., plant," Levin said.

'Then consumers should look at the last three digits of the serial number. These tell the date of manufacture by week and year. The last digit stands for the year; for example, '7' stands for 1977 or '8' stands for 1978. The two digits immediately preceding stand for the week of the year; for example, '03' stands for the third week," Levin said. "If consumers find an apparent defect in their tires-or actually have a blowout-they should record the serial number and call the special Tire Hotline which has been set up by the Division of Consumer Affairs: 648-4099 during regular business hours," Levin

Association adopts banking code of ethics

A detailed code of ethics providing banks in the state with an additional bench mark to assess their financial advertising for public understanding and clarity has been adopted by the New Jersey Bankers Association,

The code, originally devised by the national Bank Marketing Association. was adopted by the NJBA executive committee, which is urging its use by all NJBA member banks. The committee said the code is intended to add to those guidelines already followed by New Jersey banks under existing bank regulations or in normal advertising

"We have established a high standard of advertising conduct among banks in our state." Robert C. Forrey. NJBA president, said. "This code is intended to insure the permanency of that standard."

The preamble to the code describes an advertisement by a financial in-stitution as being ethical when "it is truthful and contains information that the intended audience can reasonably be expected to understand in making an intelligent purchase decision. Any features, any terms, including price, or any purchase benefits must be presented in a manner that does not mislead either by what is stated or by what is omitted."

Separate sections of the code cover specific guidelines to be applied to bank advertising concerning such offers as free services, free checking, price reductions. packaged services, premiums and interest rates. A special section deals with the use of indefinite superlatives.

A plan to encourage the development of pediatric pulmonary patient care facilities in New Jersey is one of the accomplishments marking het group's 72nd anniversary year, according to Mrs. J. Stanley Braddock, American Lung Association of New Jersey president.

Mrs. Braddock said that guidelines developed by the New Jersey Thoracic Society, the Association's medical arm, were sent to more than 400 hospitals and key health care agencies in the state. The ALANJ plans to award a pediatric pulmonary fellowship to be used by a hospital which meets these standards.

Thoracic Society members worked to promote adequate care for tuberculosis control in New Jersey through participation in the State Health Commissioner's Tuberculosis Advisory Council. The Council is currently pushing for adoption of a master plan for tuberculosis control, being reviewed by the commissioner.

In addition, the society sponsored a dozen regional conferences throughout the state aimed at furthering the education and scientific interests of the medical community toward improved respiratory care in New Jersey.

The ALANJ testified in support of a New Jersey health code regulation which would restrict smoking in public places in the state and sponsored a oneday conference for industry in cooperation with Rutgers University Cooperative Extension Service.
