Tourist sites are living history lesson

As one of America's 13 original colonies, New Jersey today offers visitors a living history lesson, with more than 1,000 historic buildings and sites located throughout the six tourism regions of the state.

"New Jersey residents are proud of their state's heritage and its contributions to the development of our nation," said Victoria D. Schmidt, director of the Division of Travel and Tourism, state Department of Commerce & Economic Development. "The long and rich history of our state has been preserved for the enjoyment of everyone."

Among the many prominent landmarks in the Gateway Region are the Apple Tree House in Jersey City, and the site of the duel between Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr on the Palisades in Weehawken.

The Apple Tree House, also known as the Van Waynen Home-stead Farm, was built in 1694 and served as the headquarters for Maj. Gen. Marquis de Lafayette during the American Revolution. The gray boulder where Alexander Hamilton fell to his death after being shot by Aaron Burr in 1804 is a national monument overlooking the Hudson River on the Weehawken cliffs.

The Delaware River Region is saturated with historic monuments and sites, from the Old Barracks in Trenton, built in 1758 during the French and Indian War to house British soldiers, to the pre-revolutionary Thomas Clarke farmhouse, a historic Quaker dwelling which still stands in Princeton.

Morristown, in the Skylands Region, served as headquarters for Washington's army in 1779-80 and is the site of the first national historic park dedicated in New Jersey in 1933. Today, Morristown National Historical Park contains nature trails at Jockey Hollow, where Washington's soldiers spent two severe winters, and the Ford mansion, headquarters of General Washington.

Also in the Skylands, the Old Schoolhouse in Monroe is situated on one of the country's first toll roads, the Newton-Vernon Turnpike. The small, one-room schoolhouse is one of a few in existence made from hand-carved stones.

At Waterloo Village in Stanhope, New Jersey's role as a supplier of armaments to the Continental Army and its early commercial history are preserved in a carefully restored village on the banks of the Musconetcong River and Morris Canal.

Visitors to Waterloo today find a unique blend of past and present in a restored 18th and 19th century village that has gained fame as the home of a summer music festival featuring music ranging from jazz and folk to bluegrass and the classics.

In the Shore Region, Monmouth Battlefield in Freehold was the site of the longest battle of the Revolutionary War, in June of 1778. It was here that

Tourist sites offer visitors a living history lesson

Molly Pitcher gained fame by taking her husband's place on the battlefield when he was felled by a bullet.

The Craig House, near the Monmouth Battlefield, still stands. Built in 1710, the British used the farmhouse as a temporary field hospital during the Revolutionary War.

Iron mining and manufacturing played a key role in the development of several historic villages in New Jersey.

The Shore Region's Allaire Village, in Farmingdale, was an early 19th century iron-making plantation development by James P. Allaire to supply raw materials for his marine engine shops and other enterprises in New York City.

Allaire was home to several hundred iron workers and their families. Today, the village contains a restored carpenter's shop, general store and bakery. There is hiking and camping in the woodlands that surround the village.

The furnace at Batsto Village, in the Greater Atlantic City Region, was erected by Charles Reed in 1766. During the Revolutionary War, the Batsto iron works produced cannons and munitions for the Continental Army.

Today, visitors to the village, a part of Wharton State Forest, can visit the Wharton Mansion, a general store, gristmill, blacksmith shop, wheelright shop and sawmill.

Glass also played a significant role in the life and economy of many New Jersey communities.

The earliest successful glass factory in America was founded in the Delaware River Region in Salem County in 1739 by Casper Wistar. It was followed by a number of other glass factories in southern New Jersey, including one owned by Dr. Theodore Corson

Wheaton, who acquired the Shull-Goodwin Glass Company of Millville in the Southern Shore Region in 1888.

Visitors to Wheaton Village in Millville today can see the Museum of American Glass, a working glass factory, exhibits of various crafts and trades and a "medicine show."

Some of New Jersey's first settlers came to the City of Bridgeton in 1686, where Richard Hancock built a sawmill and houses for workers near the banks of the Cohansey River.

Although none of the original settlement remains, visitors to the city today can explore the largest historic district in New Jersey, with 2,200 Colonial, Federal and Victorian buildings listed on the National Historic Register.

More than half of Bridgeton's 6,000 buildings are of historical note, including Potter's Tavern, where New Jersey's first newspaper, The Plain Dealer, was published.

Additional information on living history in New Jersey is available from the Division of Travel and Tourism, CN 826, Trenton, N.J. 08625, (609) 292-2470.

PRE-CONCERT PICNICKERS on the lawn in many historic sites in the state that attract tourists.

WATERLOO SCHOOL OF MUSIC—Students from the school perform chamber music throughout the grounds of historic Waterloo Village. The 'Waterloo Sampler Extravaganza' programs took place on Sunday afternoon, July 20, and will be presented Aug. 10. Admission is free of charge. Additional information can be obtained by calling Waterloo Village at 347-4700.

Scholarships for architects

The scholarship committee of the Central Chapter of the New Jersey Society of Architects is seeking applications from qualified students of architecture for the chapter's annual scholarship awards. Last year three students from within the Central Chapter's six county regions were awarded grants totaling $2,500, according to Robert D. Cerutti, AIA, the chapter president.

The Central Chapter, one of six local chapters that make up the New Jersey Society of Architects, is composed of 400 members from Union, Somerset, Hunterdon, Middlesex, Mercer and Burlington counties.

Although the student must have permanent residency within the chapter's geographical boundaries, the applicant can attend an accredited school of architecture anywhere in the United States, provided he or she has completed two years.

For applications and further information, students are invited to write or call Jeanne K. Perantoni, AIA, 1986 Central Chapter Scholarship Awards chairman, P.O. Box 758, 350 Grove St., Somerville, N.J. 08876 725-7800.

Consultant for theater

As one of several calculated moves aimed at carving a prestigious niche for the old Rahway Theater under its new mantle as the Union County Arts Center, Donald R. Streibig has been hired as a management consultant.

Streibig, from Ohio, is known in theater restoration and arts management circles for his work in revitalizing the Landmark Ohio Theater in Columbus and in serving as executive director of the Ohio Arts Council for several years. He moved to New Jersey in 1983 to become executive director of the New Brunswick Cultural Center, a post he held for two years.

During his tenure in New Brunswick, Streibig founded the New Jersey Presenters Roundtable. He remains its chairman. He is a former treasurer of the League of Historic American Theaters, is a member of the International Association of Auditorium Theaters, a member of the International Association of Auditorium Managers and of the Association of College, University and Community Arts Agencies. He has taught theater arts at the college level and served as assistant command entertainment director for the U.S. Armed Force in Europe.

Streibig's areas of responsibility in his new association with the Union County Arts Center include renovation, programming, staffing, budgeting and promotion.

Among other recent moves made by Rahway Landmarks, the art center's nonprofit owner-operator, are the hiring of Charles Bentz Associates of Westfield to manage a capital fund drive and the addition of a full-time salaried secretary to the predominantly voluntary staff. The latter post is held by Joanne King, formerly box office manager and administrative assistant for the Theater At Somerset, Somerset College.

On Saturday, Aug. 16, the Arts Center will serve as host at a concert by bandleader Woody Herman and the new "Thundering Herd." The Arts Center is located at the junction of Irving, Main and Hamilton streets and Central Avenue in Rahway.

Rebecca's forecast

For week of July 31 through Aug. 7

ARIES (3/21-4/20) This should be a pleasant week for most. Social and romantic overtones highlight travel, and news regarding children may revolve around a special achievement. Later, expect a romantic surprise, residence issues raise a question or two, and another's decisions may in fact influence your life very soon.

TAURUS (4/21-5/21) Home, family and property interest continue to be important. Tone down egotistical behavior and make an effort to mend a fence or two. Later, make time for a younger family member, discussions now are productive, and you may consider some travel plans in the near future. So wrap up loose ends now.

GEMINI (5/22-6/21) Siblings and relatives play an important role in this week. Delayed communications finally reach you and as a result longterm decisions may be in the offering. Later, you weigh your security against a risk, financial documents are highlighted, and personal confusion suggests to take things slowly.

CANCER (6/22-7/23) Another's decisions or actions will have an important effect on your life during this period. Financial or security related issues are highlighted, and push may come to shove in personal matters. Later, another may view your demands or expectations with disbelief. Are you asking too much of another?

LEO (7/24-8/23) Children, romantic and creative interests assume importance during this week. Be extra careful of your judgements in any of these areas as trip-ups are possible. Later, financial security improves, others resist a pushy or arrogant attitude, and family discussions suggest that changes are in the air soon.

VIRGO (8/24-9/23) Your financial interests continue to look promising. Don't allow job or personal distractions to cloud your judgments, and dealings with health or medical personnel are indicated in coming weeks. Later, you may reorganize your personal schedule to accommodate a heavier work schedule.

LIBRA (9/24-10/23) You may be contending with an array of personal worries early in this period. A loved one's health may cause concern, and try to defer longterm agreements for the time being. Later, long awaited opportunities begin to emerge, use care in travel, and allow time for social and recreational pursuits.

SCORPIO (10/24-11/22) The weeks ahead promise a more busy and demanding work schedule. Unexpected changes may be announced in your job, and goings on at a distance may have important repercussions

Musicians set for a concert

The New Jersey Symphony Orchestra's three-musician trombone section and a tubist who has performed with N.Y. Philharmonic will comprise the New Jersey Low Brass Quartet scheduled to perform Sunday at the Reeves-Reed Arboretum, 165 Hobart Ave., Summit.

The 3 p.m. program, part of the Sunday Afternoon series, free to the public, includes trombonists Charles Baker from the Montclair area, Vince Belford from Mt. Vernon, N.Y., Vernon Post from Livingston N. Y., and tubist Scott Mendoker from Cedar Grove.

Both Baker and Post are extra musicians with the New York Philharmonic. Post, whose father, Vernon Post Sr., teaches music at Summit High School, also plays solo trombone with the Goldman Band in New York City. Belford plays with the Goldman Band as well as the Joffrey Ballet. Mendoker, extra tubist for the N.Y. Philharmonic, also performs with the Metropolitan Opera and the American Symphony Orchestra. He teaches music at Pingry School in Martinsville. All four are free-lance musicians in N.Y. who formed this quartet to play the music involved in orchestral auditions. At Sunday's Arboretum concert they will give a mini-demonstration to show what transpires in playing in the brass section of an orchestra. Their musical selections will range from classical to jazz.

ture deserves your meticulous attention. Later, unusual or unexpected gains are indicated, communications are important, and new meetings are in store.

AQUARIUS (1/21-2/19) It's not what you say, it's how you say it that could land you in hot water early this period. Pushy tactics are met with equal resistance and temporary obstacles may be frustrating for some. Later, your mood shifts, enjoy recreational gatherings, and spruce up your appearance and wardrobe.

PISCES (2/20-3/20) Realistic expectations avoid a let-down early in the week. Local travel opportunities arise and romantic or creative interest get a well-deserved boost. Later, your daily pace is stepped up, domestic and work demands escalate and could take a toll on your health if you're not careful.
