Although the only courtroom experience current students Jonathan Dayton High School may have is by watching "LA Law," they are preparing to argue Brennan vs. New Jersey State High School Intercollegiate Athletic Association. The case has been invented for their first-time participation in the Vincent J. Apruzzese Mock Trial Competition, co-sponsored with New Jersey's County Bar Associations.

"I'm in love with the experience," said ninth grader Shira Zabludovsky. "I wanted to see what it's like to be in a courtroom, and how to prepare for it."

Students and advisors received a workbook detailing details of the case-investigation and general guidelines. The fictional plaintiff is the family of Sam Brennan, a senior at Metropolitan High School in Metropolitan, New Jersey. During August 1997, the summer between his sophomore and junior year, Brennan suffered an injury that destroyed his left eye.

While it appeared that nothing could improve Brennan's vision, Dr. Lee Stupljan performed experimental surgery to implant a working eye. During the following baseball season, Brennan led the team to a state championship after he beat long-time friend Pat Povero for the catcher's position. Because of his sudden success, Brennan was reported to the Athletic Association and, consequently, found in violation of the Association's Rule 20, which prohibits the use of performance-enhancing devices. He was banned from playing baseball during his senior year.

Tardy documents stall bid for RVSA membership

By Walter Elliott

Staff Writer

The Rahway Valley Sewerage Authority did not hear Mountainside's bid to become a full member Thursday night.

While word of the borough's attempt to re-enter from

Cranford—unofficially reached the Board of Commissioners' ears, the borough's documentation did not reach the RVSA's Rahway offices in time for the monthly agenda.

I read in the paper that the Mountainside Borough Council voted a resolution intending to become a member Tuesday, RVSA South Plains Commissioner Joan Papen said. "Do we know anything more about it?"

"We would have considered Mountainside's request tonight," RVSA Board Chairman and Cranford Commissioner Edward Robinson said. "But they did not send any policies to us yet. That's why they're not on the agenda."

"It was a matter of timing," Mountaintide Borough Administrator Greg Bowman said. "Borough Clerk Judith Owy put the council's resolution in the mail Wednesday."

The Borough Council voted unanimously to pay $400,000 in membership fees Dec. 15. Mountainside pending RVSA agreement, would have a voting seat on the Board of Commissioners. It would become part owner of the authority and have 10% rights of three million gallons per day.

RVSA's acceptance of Mountainside would mean the borough's break with Cranford. Mountainside has a two-year-old agreement to buy flow rights from Cranford, RVSA member.

This resolution takes up from being a tenant to a partial owner. Mayor Robert Viglianti said, "It gives us our own representation without having to go through Cranford."

Other full members are Clark, Garwood, Kentwood, Rahway, Roselle Park, Scotch Plains, Springfield and Woodbridge. Each member pays a membership fee in proportion to the total flow they are allocated.

"The members are allowed to buy and trade flow allocation rights among themselves," RVSA Executive Director Richard Tokarski said. "The total amount of flow allocation is determined by the capacity of our sewer main in Rahway."

Tokarski cited Clark's purchase of 40,000 gallons per day peak flow rights from Garwood for $60,000 as an example. That inter-local agreement was approved during the Thursday meeting.

The RVSA board reviews and monitors any hookups or other conditions which may affect overall capacity.

A pending amendment among Kenilworth, Roselle Park and Scotch Plains, for example, is being evaluated.

What the board cannot do according to Authority Engineer Mike Brinker, is give under capacity flow credits for overflow conditions.

Springfield is one of several RVSA members that are facing penalties for having more than 10 overflow incidents over the last year. The authority has held off penalizing the town while it attempts to interconnect and inflow problems. A letter by Township Attorney Bruce Bergen acknowledging a meeting on Dec. 12 was read into the board record.

The next opportunity for Mountainside to bring up its membership application may come in the RVSA's Jan. 21 meeting.

A development occurred in an unexpected direction Friday in the matter of the proposed Consumer Value Services Pharmacy in Springfield.

Jeffrey Reilly, according to a real estate source, may have found a tenant for 125-241 Mountain Ave. The address had been the proposed site for a CVS Pharmacy by J.D. Mack and Montgomery Associates for almost two years. The source, who did not want to be quoted, said an application for tenancy may be made in one of the current building's stores or offices within the next month.

Jeffrey Reilly took over the property from Montgomery Associates by early November, the source said. "It has been seeking tenant leases since."

925 Mountain Ave. was built in 1976 to house original builder United Coatings Savings Bank and four other tenants. It has been vacant since Ballroom Magic Dance Studio moved to Union last year. United Coatings, which became Coates, moved out a few years earlier.

Developer J.D. Mack allowed the leases to expire while pursuing an application to convert the building to a 10,000-square-foot CVS Pharmacy. Neighbors and some township officials opposed the conversion, citing potential increases in traffic and a general decline in the Five Points area's quality of life.

A two-year struggle before Springfield's property boards and state Superior Court ensued. That battle, should the property sale and new tenancy occur, would end CVS' bid. The clerical staff of Springfield's Planning Board, Zoning Board of Adjustment and Development Review Commission said they have received no applications for tenancy or occupation.

The Coates House was to have succeeded Springfield Township Attorney Bruce Bergen 2 months before Superior Court Judge John T. Pisarsky ruled. That motion, where Bergen would have asked Pisarsky to reconsider a ruling on the Mountain Avenue building, was postponed to Jan. 22.

The party filing the motion failed to put off the hearing one month, a law clerk in Pisarsky's chamber said Thursday. The petitioner has the permission to do so without showing cause.

Bergen was to argue the ruling contradicts the Appellate Court decision on a similar zoning dispute, Oct. 23. The three-judge panel ruled the variance of the 500 Feet Avenue home at 930 Mountain Ave. is not unconstitutional.

The developer, local resident Robert Alford, had no role in Edwards' decision.

There was a countervailing argument Pisarsky, Bergens' attorney, said, "and that was that we could argue that the building is not a residence."

Reilly, who is a consumer value services manager, said,

"I think we can make a good argument."

He said he has no idea what the outcome will be.

Broken tail light leads to arrest in borough

Mountaintop

Officer Thomas Murphy of the Mountaintop Police Department arrested Ralman Sayles, 23, Dec. 15 at 9:20 a.m. in Sayles was charged with the possession of less than 100 mg of marijuana.

Murphy pulled Sayles over at the corner of Shetland and Bristol Road. When the officer noticed a broken tail light on the rear Toyota computer check revealed that the plates came back to a 1984 brown Buick.

When Sayles was asked for the license documentation, he was unable to produce the papers, although he claimed to use them. According to Murphy, Sayles stated that he had the title but failed to transfer it to his name. The only identification he produced was a Division of Motor Vehicles card. The Division resident was then transported to police headquarters for being an unlicensed driver.

While at headquarters, Sayles was unable to tell the officers where he obtained the license plates, saying that his girlfriend got them from a friend. He told the officers that he preferred not to elaborate on the origin of the plates.

Jamonti Ghanem, 27, was arrested and charged with contempt of court Dec. 15 at 3:33 p.m. He was arrested by "Fairfield" officers and found to have warrants out of Mountaintop for $640 and East Orange for $55.

Elians Vargas-Gomez, 48, was arrested Dec. 12. He was stopped at 12:38 a.m. on Route 22 West for failure to maintain one lane. It was later discovered that the driver was uninsured.

Local resident John Seifert, 32, was stopped at the intersection of Mountain Avenue and Park Drive

Dec. 12 at 5:57 a.m. for a moving violation. He was arrested and charged with driving with an unexpired license plate.

Springfield

The report of missing property by one Route 22 restaurant patron led to the arrest of another on Dec. 16. One Bennington's diner noticed that her paper was missing and called the police at about 1 a.m.

A subsequent search found the $100 device on a man identified as Robert Shailes, 31, of Union. He was arrested and charged for possession of stolen property by 2:30 a.m. The paper was returned to its owner.

A Mountain Avenue resident called police headquarters about a large bird perching on her parked car at about 1:15 p.m. Dec. 15. A responding patrol officer found the bird to be a rooster and called Animal Control. Officers of Newark for pickup.

Township student accepted into Harvard

By Pamela Isaacson
Staff Writer

Jonathan Dayton High School senior Scott Sambur found out Dec. 14 that dreams really do come true—especially when you have the highest grade point average in your class. It was on that date Sambur received word that will join Harvard University's Class of 2003 next fall.

"I was sobbing," he said. "I was crying. I was so happy."

The early acceptance to Harvard, the only one guidance counselor at the school can remember, is the culmination of Sambur's self-motivation.

He is a brilliant student who self-motivated, he really wanted to go to an Ivy League school," said Sambur's guidance counselor Joseph Cozzi.

"We didn't get him into Harvard. He got himself into Harvard."

For the past two years, Sambur has been the president of the Future Business Leaders of America Club. He also serves as president of the National Honor Society. In addition, Sambur works on the yearbook, holds a position as assistant photography editor on "The Dove Print," the school newspaper, and is a member of the peer leadership, French and Key Club.

I originally wanted to go for business," he said. "Now I'm not sure if I figured that Harvard would be better because it is more challenging."

Last summer, Sambur traveled to France to study at the Sorbonne. To help fund his return trip to live in Paris next summer, Sambur has been working at Barnes and Noble on Route 22 for the past four years.

Sambur, upon receiving his acceptance, pulled his applications to the Wharton Business School at the University of Pennsylvania, Cornell, Yale, Dartmouth, Princeton and Tufts.

"I considered still applying to Wharton, but no anymore. I would never turn down Harvard," he said.

With his acceptance in December, one would imagine that Sambur has lost his motivation for the rest of the school year, but Sambur is preparing to take the Advanced Placement exams which could exempt him from introductory courses at the university.

He also needs to maintain his grades in order to receive exemption from his final exams in the spring.

Sambur is unsure which career path he will follow, but thinks he will likely pursue business. "There is caring piece to him that a little import when he decides. What area he eventually wants to go into," Cozzi said. "He has an ability to help the masses. The state of Harvard will really bring out his talents."

Township firefighters respond to 4-car accident on Route 22

Springfield

A four-car accident brought the Springfield Fire Department to Route 22 at 7:19 a.m. Dec. 15.

All vehicles were traveling westbound in the left lane attempting to make a U-turn near the Endo Diner when they crashed into traffic. A Cranford resident could not stop his Ford van in time and struck the car in front of him, causing a chain reaction.

Engines responded to the Police Department's report of the accident to assist in assisting and aiding one victim. The injured was transported to the hospital by the Mountaintop First Aid Squad as firefighters addressed a spill on the roadway.

Three out of the four vehicles needed to be towed from the scene.

The first call of the day, Dec. 19 came at 7:14 a.m. when firefighters responded to a Waverly Avenue residence for an odor of gas in the area.

There were no reported fires. Dec. 18 but the squad responded to two medical service calls.

Dec. 17 began with a medical ter ical call at 7:46. At 7:56 a.m. firefighters responded to a Brook Hills Circle residence for a smoke detector problem. Lunethine found the squad responding to Riverdale Drive and South Maple Avenue for an over-turned vehicle. At 10:18 a.m. all units responded to a Morris Avenue business for smoke in the building.

There were four more medical medical service calls throughout the day.

Firefighters went back to school Dec. 16 at 7:48 a.m. when all units responded to Jonathan Dayton High School for an activated fire alarm. The rest of the day was spent handling four medical service calls.

After a busy early morning, the department responded to a South Springfield Avenue business at 9:20 a.m. for an activated fire alarm. At 12:48 p.m., firefighters visited a Mountaintop residence for a water condition.

They also responded to two medical service calls.

For unto us a Child is born

This week, Christians throughout the world will celebrate Christmas.

The annual commemoration of the birth of Christ some two millennia ago brings with it a wealth of experiences, be they sacred or secular; sadly, though in today's world, it seems the secular wins hands down.

However, without Christ's birth in that cattle stall, there would be no reason to send all those cards, give — and receive — all those gifts, attend all those parties, and generally make merry for a solid week.

For two thousand years, we have been marking this event with festivity and rejoicing. Imagine, all for a little baby whose parents couldn't even manage to find a room at an inn!

And it is in these very lean circumstances of His birth that we find one of the most important messages of this blessed holiday ... humility.

Christ was born in a stable amid the dirt and the smells of animal sweat and manure. Though He is a King, He was not a king's birth in resplendent surroundings. God chose not to have this King born among kings, but among peasants. His attendants were shepherds; though only common tenders of the flocks, God chose to send heavenly angels to them with the good-news that the Messiah had been born. The only nobility present were the three kings whose steadfast faith in the prophecies led them to trust that this infant in the bay' was indeed God's incarnate.

Why would God plan Christ's birth in this fashion? Theologians tell us that the humble nature of the event was in keeping with Christ's ministry, one not exclusive to the powerful and mighty, but to all people of all times and all means. Furthermore, it would not be very hard to hail King if He were born in a palace. This is where faith — like that of the Wise Men — comes.

This tale, told since His birth, has acquired a mysticism through time. But what if God had chosen to send Christ today? Where would He be born? Were we to translate the story of the nativity to modern terms, we would probably find Mary, Joseph and the Christ Child at a homeless shelter, a free clinic or some other place that a lot of us may very well walk right past without another thought. We might see some street people congregated outside; we might overhear that something amazing was happening; and then we might think that nothing truly amazing could occur in such a place and keep on walking.

However, this humble Child was born to all of us — weak and strong, humble and powerful, rich and poor. He was born to bring a peace to this world through each of us.

As we look at the traditional depictions of the manger scene, we should remember that such humble places still exist and in each of them, so does Christ.

We wish a blessed Christmas to all our readers, one filled with the humble wonder of the miracles of this season.

Efforts merit recognition

A Certificate of Merit was given to Boy Scout Troop 23 last week for the group's work in preserving the Watchung Reservation in Mountainside. The recognition from the Springfield Environmental Commission was thoughtful and well-placed as the scouts' outstanding efforts did much to improve a local treasure.

The group undertook a survey of the reservation's plant life and worked to remove non-native vegetation from hiking trails. Native plants were restored and protected from herbivores by surrounding the vegetation with small wire cages. The scouts also protected the area's fauna by constructing shelters for animals like hollowing out logs.

The group cited its use of the reservation for Eagle Scout projects and other activities as a reason for their interest in preserving the area.

Aesthetically, the work paid off immediately with cleaner trails. In addition, there has already been a noted increase in the number of hawks and falcons sighted in the reservation.

We thank Troop 23 for their efforts and also the Environmental Commission for continuing to recognize excellence in those who give a little something back to their community.

"A civilization that is not informed cannot be free, and a world that is not free cannot endure."

CAROLING KIDS
Springfield youth join in the fun at the township's holiday festivities by singing a round of holiday carols.

Defending Christmas trees is going too far

It's that time of year again as residents bid and you scramble to get everything done in time for the holidays. Whether it's to do a list headed to a trip to the mall, digging up the decorations, or finding one school concert to the next, it's definitely a busy time of year.

For those celebrating Christmas, finding the perfect tree is one of the highlights of the season. For about a decade and a half from my childhood into my adult years, we at the Van Sant household accomplished this task as much to my chagrin as by pulling the big cardboard box out of the Christmas closet and sticking the branches into the trunk. There's nothing like the smell of plastic pine to put you in the "holiday mood."

Ten years ago my wife, Wendy, entered our life, all that came to an end. Having grown up in rural Connecticut, I thought of a plastic Christmas tree left her smelly.

Perfect branches: Yes, there are tree needles no contend with well-inspiring, and we have to be diligent about keeping the head down and the tree's lights checked, but there's something magical about the smell of a live tree in the living room at Christmas, and that's a magic I want my children to grow up experiencing.

A few weeks back, a local group of the Sierra Club had written a health letter to the editor of a local daily newspaper. In this letter, the club's spokesperson decried the use of real trees with a fervor not unlike the animal rights activists who denounce annual deer hunts in the Watchung Reservation as barbaric. Their reasoning was based neither on the health of those living in the house — some people are highly allergic to pine and spruce trees — nor the safety of same in issue which is a grainy healthy every holiday season when we're out of house trees. No, the Sierra Club was not overly concerned with the well-being of people.

A few weeks back, a local group of the Sierra Club had written a health letter to the editor of a local daily newspaper. In this letter, the club's spokesperson decried the use of real trees with a fervor not unlike the animal rights activists who denounce annual deer hunts in the Watchung Reservation as barbaric. Their reasoning was based neither on the health of those living in the house — some people are highly allergic to pine and spruce trees — nor the safety of same in issue which is a grainy healthy every holiday season when we're out of house trees. No, the Sierra Club was not overly concerned with the well-being of people.

They were telling us that the down of trees for our personal gratification is, plainly, a practice tantamount to raising cute little images so some woman can flaunt à la coat.

One stopped staking my head in amazement, I started to get more than a little irritated with his latest installment of alleged environmental correctness.

People, Christmas trees are crazy. They are raised farce farms for the sole purpose of being cut down and sold to us as humans to decorate with lights and sparkling ornaments. Furthermore, the people who manage these farms are not exactly magnificently hunters waiting cold-bloodedly for an innocent unsuspecting deer to fall to their path.

As with any crop, new seedlings are planted each year as the mature trees are cut down to be shipped to local vendors. These constant lumberjacks strike the soil since a tree left to grow indefinitely — as the environmental activists would seem to endorse — will eventually deplete the ground's nutrients for future growth.

And with the planting of each future harvest, the farmers are better able to cultivate and to fortify the ground, now encumbered by dense foliage.

Furthermore, for those concerned about the amount of waste this practice generates, it's very easy to make mulch out of your tree after the holidays. I know this for a fact since a Japanese tradition is Wendy's, which enables us to return the tree to which enables us to return the tree to help the earth do what it does best growing things.

Now, I'm not ignorant of the needs of the environment. Although I'm not a vegetarian, I do hold certain beliefs which include folks at the Sierra Club, PETA, and their like would endorse. I don't personally believe in the wearing of fur, but I also don't deny anyone else their right to do so, and at our house, we recycle, make efforts to cut down on our garbage volume, and don't run our air conditioners unless necessary. I, too, want to leave the nest necessary — of which my two children are members — a planet which is as healthy and as clean as possible.

But to denounce the use of Christmas trees for the sole reason that's inhuman to cut them down for our vanity is not much different than saying that the lettuce in your sandwich has feelings, too. After all, why should we price the rights of one crop and forget all about the rest of them? What about the rights of each and every string bean or tomato to grow old in peace? Where's their activism group?

I hope that organizations such as the Sierra Club enjoy a new year of support for their many good works on behalf of the environment we all share. But I also hope this is the last we hear of this Christmas tree singin

Commentators invariably mar sporting events

Problem Solver

By Robert Lapidus

Once upon a time there was football, baseball and basketball. And there is reality.

And there were commentaries who managed to transmit the drama that was unfolding on the fields of play. With still pictures, they managed to convey the excitement, the spirit, the conflict.

They did it with a remarkable brevity. Two sportswriters usually shared the assignment — one handling the play-by-play, the other filling in with what we used to call the "color" commentary.

And then came television. Now we could see for ourselves what was happening on the playing field, be it a diamonds, gridiron, rink or court. It was pretty much in front of us. So it would seem that all the announcers had to do was fill in the blanks.

All we needed was someone to let us know what might be happening off-camera. What might be taking place in the grandstand or the dugout. And then came officials.

How wrong we were.

Since we can see all the action for ourselves, today's breed of high-priced telecasters feels obliged to somehow "justify" their existence. Every moment on the field is subject to instant analysis. There are the X's and O's. There are the could'ves and should-haves. Every down in football, every pitch in baseball, every pass in a basketball game is the subject for a lengthy discourse.

We are told what's already not happened. We are told why it happened. We are told what will happen next. We are told what the manager or coach should have made and what he should do next to stop it. But it is not enough that every step is analyzed and dissected. It is not enough sufficient merely to describe the action. The people up in the booth have assumed the mantle of the ultimate abuser. They freely criticize the players for assumed errors of judgment. Coaches and managers are subject to evaluation. And the officials, what are most invariably correct, are severely judged.

And when they run out of things to say about what is happening in the course of the game, there is always the back-up material. The interview with the fullback's aunt. The pitcher's little League coach. What the trainer had for breakfast on game day.

With a gang of three, or four, the only thing we don't get is an occasional moment of silence. The babble is endless.

Until recently there was one safe haven from refuge from all of the tennis. Tennis is ideally suited for television coverage, with all of the action taking place in a compact space. And there was the rule of silence.

Tennis fans are entitled to be silent during the course of play. You do your cheering after the point has been decided. True, during a particularly ferocious rally you will hear the most unlikely that any comment they might make could even be heard by the players.

Then came John McEnroe, McEnroe, during his tenure as an announcer for the U.S. Open, has proven a point. He's not just as obnoxious as a commentator as he was a player.

He babbles relentlessly. He pontificates. He criticizes the players. The officials. Just about everyone except the ball boys.

Fortunately there is a cure for all this: the mute button. But it really should not be necessary to resort to this. A good announcer can certainly add an extra dimension to our televisionized enjoyment of any sport. All we need is a few more good commentaries.

Oh well! That's the way it is. What can we say? Except ... bring back Russ Hodges!

Thanks computer program support

To the Editor:

Once again, the Deerfield School Technology Committee shows how thinking globally and acting locally can make a difference. The transformation of our elementary school into a learning center for adults on Dec. 2 at our Computers 101 session was a prime example of how a grassroots organization such as ours can impact the entire community.

Much deserved thanks are extended to our school administrator, Gerald Schaller; our school's head computer teacher and technical guru, Randy Palmer; and his assistant, Yir-Ampu; our guest speakers, Darryl Walker from Comcast, Barry Salow, PC consultant from Springfield; Ray Jousner of Computer Experts, Inc.; and all our Tech Committee members for donating their time, talent and support in making this program possible.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Don't take credit for squad's efforts

To the Editor:

In recent article about automatic external defibrillators, we noted that a Township Committee member intimated that the township had purchased and supplied two of these multi-thousand-dollar units to the Springfield First Aid Squad.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The squad recognized the importance of such units years ago. In fact, it purchased two units via a combination of grants, generously-specified donations and fund drive money more than a year ago, and has been the only organization in town to utilize them for the protection of township residents.

The SFAS wholly supports the outfitting of all first-responder vehicles with automatic external defibrillators.

It is most disturbing to note, however, the total disregard by the Township Committee of the only local organization in operating experience with these devices during the planning stages of this new project. Does it make sense to reinvent the wheel? In addition, it is difficult to understand why the committee has used as its model guide a physician associated with a hospital far outside our local medical resource area.

Is this deliberate "slap in the face" to the volunteers of the SFAS, or is it just a continuation of the general "we don't care" attitude of the Township Committee that the squad has noted for the past few years?

O'Toole appointed to committee assessing New Jersey schools

Assemblyman Kevin J. O'Toole has been appointed to the legislative Joint Committee on the Public Schools and New Jersey Inter-governmental Relations Commission by Speaker Jack Collins.

O'Toole, who serves as the General Assembly's lead in the Senate, said he was looking forward to the challenges presented by both appointments.

The Joint Commission on the Public Schools is comprised of Assembly members and Senators. It is charged with reviewing and analyzing important legislative policies and initiatives that impact New Jersey's public schools.

"Providing our children with a first-class education day after day, been, and remains, atop priority of mine," said O'Toole. "R-E-E-S-E Union" New Jersey cannot expect its young people to compete in a global marketplace if they do not receive a quality education."

"I look forward to serving on the important legislative committee and playing an active role in helping to advance educational policies that will benefit New Jersey school children," O'Toole added. "We have a very good public school system in New Jersey, but that doesn't mean that we can't make it even better and more successful."

The New Jersey Inter-governmental Relations Commission represents New Jersey's interest on the Council of State Government, a national association that meets on a regional and national level to promote quality-of-life issues.

"The commission helps to improve public policies among state, local, and national levels," O'Toole said. "It provides New Jersey with access to important information and data bases relating to economic, social and other government-related issues. It is an honor to serve with my peers from other state legislatures throughout the country and exchange ideas on a myriad of public concerns."

O'Toole said O'Toole's legal experience as a former Mayor of Cedar Grove and his knowledge of the state legislative process would be a great asset to both the Joint Committee on the Public Schools.

Collins said O'Toole's legal experience as a former Mayor of Cedar Grove and his knowledge of the state legislative process would be a great asset to both the Joint Committee on the Public Schools.

Hospice gains volunteers

A new class of 10 graduates has joined the ranks of Center for Hospice Care volunteers already helping the organization's professional staff and family members in providing at-home care for patients who are terminally ill.

Among them is Springfield resident Harvey Ritter.

The new volunteers were congratulated by volunteer coordinator Terri Husak on their successful completion of a nine-week training course at graduation ceremonies held at Hospice headquarters in Glen Ridge.

The Center for Hospice Care is an affiliate of the Saint Barnabas Health Care System, currently caring for more than 1,000 patients per day in Northern New Jersey, and has expanded its services to 30 area nursing homes.

According to Lorraine Sciaro, executive director of Hospice and Hospice Nurses are indebted to the many volunteers engaged in patient services. To qualify as a Medicare provider, she noted, Hospice must demonstrate that a minimum of five percent of the value of patient services is provided by volunteers. In fact, she said, "Volunteers working with us are providing in excess of 10 percent of the value of services."

Training programs are held many times throughout the year so that Hospice can meet the challenge of the constantly increasing patient census. This next class begins Jan. 6. For more information, call the volunteer department at (973) 349-0300.

Zabudovsky plays the role of Terry Landau, Reporter's baseball coach who will argue that it was Bremer's own determination, not the chemicals, that enhanced his athletic abilities.

"I am thinking about becoming a lawyer," Zabudovsky said. "It's just overwhelming right now."

Pam Bookbinder, 14, plays defense witness at Dunlap High School. "This is my first time doing this," she said. "It's challenging because a competitor will be coming up and asking questions about a person I'm pretending to be."

Serving as an adviser for the group of over 20 students is Yale L. Greenbaum, a Springfield resident with a general practice. Greenbaum, and Greenbaum, in Union, "I am trying to instill in them a sense of confidence and the importance of being prepared," he said.

Last Wednesday was Greenbaum's second session with the students. "I hope they're doing well. It's fun, but it's work," he added.

Greenbaum has been assisting participants in writing opening and closing remarks, formulating questions, preparing testimony, presenting witnesses, cross-examining and how to address a judge and jury. "It's like being a baseball coach," he said. "You don't get the performance you want unless you push the team a little."

For ninth grader Michael Loschiavo, participating in the competition is practical for the future. "I want to be a lawyer. Now I'm learning the basics, what everything means, the different people in the courtroom and how to present a case," he explained. "I am also learning how to work with other people to make sure we get certain things done."

Loschiavo said her professional ambitions stem from her passion for debate. "My parents say that when I have a point I keep arguing it," she said. "I like to follow different cases on TV and see different sides to see which is more believable."

The team will compete sometime in January, although they have not yet been informed of the exact date. Last year, Cherry Hill High School beat both the state and national championships. Past teams have dealt with child custody, issues of the press, bear covenants and real estate disputes in the workplace.

Summit skates to its first Cron Holiday Tourney title

Ice hockey team stuns reigning champion

By Andrew McGinn

Assistant Sports Editor

Having won the Cron Holiday Tournament for five consecutive years from 1993 through 1997, the ice hockey team from St. Joseph's High School in Metuchen was a prohibited favorite to claim the title again this season. However, somebody forgot to pass that information along to this year's upstart Summit squad.

The Hilltoppers, 7-11, rode the strength of a goal by freshman right wing Kyle Schreiber early in the third period, assisted by senior center Andrew Natale and freshman left wing Matt Starke, grabbed a one-goal lead that they would not relinquish and went on to stun the reigning champions, 3-2. Wednesday night, finds on route to capturing their first ever Cron Tournament championship.

Summit, which began the tournament 1-10 after losing 11 points in three games, helped Summit to the early lead against the Edmets by converting a pass from Schreiber onto a goal 56 seconds into the game, which was played at Wainman Rink in Roselle.

St. Joseph's, which tallied twice in the first period, roared back to claim a 2-1 lead before sophomore right wing John Matuchniak's stamp for Summit with 1:59 left in the second period to knot the score at 2. Matuchniak's goal was assisted by senior center Zach Carr and sophomore left wing Mike Santorus.

Junior goalie Matt Henderson came up big in the victory as he delayed St. Joseph's high-powered offensive attack by turning aside 37 shots.

In 16 years of competing in the Cron, Summit had advanced to the finals only three times before winning it all this season, including two years ago when the Hilltoppers were held by St. Joe's 3-1 in the championship game.

This year's triumph also marked just the second time in its history that Summit's National B team has knocked off a team from the Nittimic A Division, which houses the state's premier teams such as powerhouses St. Joe's, Seton Hall Prep, Brice Memorial and Bergen Catholic.

"This was a great win for us," said Summit head coach Keith Naxton, whose team catapulted to 10th in the state with the victory. "It brought us a lot of recognition and provided my players with a great deal of confidence. Now we know we can play with anybody if we play within the confines of our game."

Defeating a team like St. Joe's meant creating and executing a flawless game plan and that's just what the Hilltoppers were able to accomplish against St. Joe's.

"We put the press on the puck at all times and we had Mike Nelsen, Jeff Cannardi and David Hane shadow their best player (Anthony Iovino)," Nixon commented.

In the semifinals against a Westfield team led by Ronnie Kashkar, the state's leading scorer last season, Summit was equally successful in taking the opposition's best player out of the mix.
