Government, schools mark changes in town

By Pamela Isaacson
Staff Writer

This year saw changes in the government, schools and facade of Springfield. Now is the time to look back at the headlines that defined 1998.

Winter

The year began when St. Malin was elected as mayor by the Springfield Township Committee Jan. 1, shortly after he and fellow committee member Gregory Clarke and Roy Hirschfeld were sworn in during the annual reorganization meeting.

"I don't think being mayor will hit me until I start getting phone calls," said the jewelry store owner. His appointment as mayor came midway through his second term in the committee.

Before the new year began, Springfield Township Committee members resolved to extend committee members' terms from three to four years.

Springfield residents had the opportunity to share their opinions about a proposed computer pilot service through the "All About Springfield" directory. Hirschfeld said he envisioned a service similar to MapInfo's, where a multi-tiered, paper-computer hybrid nearby train stations from the town's furthest points.

The Echo Leader was restored as the township's official newspaper Jan. 27.

The proposed budget for 1999-2000, presented by Committeewoman Judith Blitzer, was the exact figure announced the year before, at $16,483,894.43.

Springfield resident Ralph DeVino was found guilty of three bribery-related charges in Union County

1998 THE YEAR IN REVIEW

Superior Court March 17. After two hours of deliberation and a five day trial, DeVino was found guilty of official misconduct, bribery by an official and flight by extortion.

State Prosecutor Yvanique Imberts asserted that DeVino had asked for and received half of a $15,000 bribe from Gary Vialonga, Feb. 2. Vialonga, an employee of developer Paragon Associates, testified that DeVino agreed to smooth the way for approval of their site plan application by the Springfield Township Planning Board. DeVino had been a member of the Zoning Board of Adjustments and chairman of the Design Review Committee.

In the spring, Union County Superior Court Judge Roy Anzalone sentenced DeVino to serve two consecutive eight-year terms for bribery and then by deception. He will become eligible for parole November 1999.

Spring

Green ribbons adorning town centers in Springfield and Mountside marked April, as Organ and Tissue Donation Awareness Month sponsored by the Overlook Hospital City of Life Committee.

Throughout the spring, the Springfield Police Department was involved in personnel disputes, allegations of bias and internal investigations.

Lt. Ivan Shapiro filed a discrimination suit against the department in Superior Court April 2, accusing Capt. Vincent Peterson of making two and-a-half hour trips to the Superior Court to see a judge during a two-day trial.

Peterson was placed on unpaid leave with a reassignment pending non-verbal Chief of Police William Chelone's final disciplinary charges against both officers, announced Mayor St. Mulligan April 26.

Shapiro was charged with taping a public meeting on the purchase of a tape recorder, making an unauthorized copy of the court's meeting minutes available to a third party and tampering to discuss these activities with Chelone.

April 25 marked the debut of lights for the first ever night game at Municipal Park field when the Jonathan Dayton High School softball team hosted Elizabeth. The three-month illumination project cost about $60,000.

Members of the Springfield Clergy Council organized an interfaith rally May 15 to protest the allegations of police department bigotry at Veterans Memorial Park. Approximately 170 people gathered to hear clergy members take what they felt would be proper action against certain officers.

The rally was staged four days after Mulligan sent a letter to residents protesting their prejudicial allegations.

The Township Committee

Environmental Commission President Clara Harelik and Recreation Director Michael Tennaro utilize one of the new recycling bins behind the Chisholm Recreation Center. This combined effort placed bins in Springfield's municipal parks during the summer.

approved a $1.41 million bond ordinance May 26, of which $1.34 million would be toward various capital improvements and acquisitions.

Another $70,000 was earmarked as a down payment as required by the state's local bond law.

Several projects scheduled to receive allocations included 3 new public works compressor, library furniture for the children's room and Donald Palmer Museum, the rehabilitation of various curbs and sidewalks and construction of a new firehouse.

Both Democrat and Republican Township Committee candidates swept their primary elections June 2. Democrat Clara Harelik collected 205 votes and Democrat Steven Goldstein collected 204 tallies. The Republican incumbents also were close with William Brocco at 166 votes and Judith Blitzer at 160.

Mayor leads reorganization meeting as year begins

By Pamela Isaacson

With the passage of another year, the Borough of Mountside underwent many transitions and events, all of which dominated the headlines in 1998.

Winter

The year began with an emboldened Mayor Robert Vigilanti conducted his seventh reorganization meeting at the borough's municipal level Jan. 6. Vigilanti reminded residents that his 1996 promise regarding property taxes had been kept, with each borough property owner seeing a $75 to $100 reduction in 1997.

He then asserted that the 1998 budget plan called for an even greater tax reduction due to events such as the deregulation of the school system, the addition of Brighton Gardens and Sony Theatres, the consolidation of jobs and a reduction in spending.

Also at the 1998 reorganization meeting, Ron Romak and Tom Perotta were sworn in to the Borough Council, with Romak beginning his 13th year of service and Perotta his third. Councilman Keith Turner also was elected council president for the second consecutive year.

Finally, Richard A. Huber was sworn in at the meeting as the latest addition to the borough's police department.

In educational news, a new five-year plan took effect in January, outlining the direction the school district should take in order to keep up with modern changes in technology. Highlights of the plan included requiring students to demonstrate competency in communication, information processing and real world applications of computer skills.

For the sixth year, Mountside approved the Joint Insurance Fund which allows the borough to pool together in buying non-health related insurance for employees who work in participating towns. At the same meeting, the Borough Council allocated $470,000 for capital improvements to certain local buildings.

Residents who were unable to attend Borough Council meetings this year could watch them for the first time on local cable channel 35.

Rosalind S. Dorjan, a 27-year Mountside resident who works as a clinical psychologist in Summit, was elected to serve as president of the New Jersey Psychological Association for 1999.

Students did not have to be getting to school this year as the Borough Council approved a transportation bus to Rosette's Vogel Bus Company, consolidating bus service for Deerfield School and Governor Livingston High School.

Police Detective Sgt. Rich Ortega and Todd Turner led a raid of the home of Eusebio Mendez, 47, who was charged with opening bogus bank accounts under assumed identities and transferring the money, totaling what may be amount to several million dollars, to other false accounts. Mendez was arrested Feb. 3 for using false identification to get up false checking accounts at Mountside's First and Summit banks.

In February the Borough Council passed an ordinance that abolished the borough's Board of Recreation Commissioners in favor of an authorized Department of Recreation.

"This will allow us to be more flexible, specialized and expand our activities for all ages. It will also make sure we get people who can fully commit to the department," said Vigilanti.

On the political front, Councilman David M. Hart announced he would not seek re-election after serving six years on the Borough Council. The Republican Club unanimously nominated Werner Schiano to seek a sixth term on the council and Glen Moringer to fill Hart's seat.

Emergency services crisis plagues borough

By Pamela Isaacson
Staff Writer

During the summer and fall months, the Borough of Mountside was plagued with dispatching (9-1-1) in the Volunteer Rescue Squad and Fire Department.

"It has become a major problem and it has now hit Mountside," said Mayor Bob Vigilanti at the Aug. 18 Borough Council meeting.

Although that meeting was scheduled to adjourn at 8:45 p.m., the mayor could bring an emergency session with representatives from the police and fire departments and the rescue squad, members of the Mountside Democratic Club expressed their concerns with the issue and requested that the mayor further clarify the situation.

Vigilanti and council members stated that the borough was searching for a solution and was open to several options. The mayor explained to assure the crowd of Mountside residents would not find themselves without emergency services while the situation was resolved.

Discussion continued at the Aug. 31 work session when the mayor again said that residents would continue to receive uninterrupted fire and rescue coverage despite shortfalls in membership.

At the time, much of the concern rested with the day-time shift of the rescue squad, between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m., as squad member Ken Carson said five more people were needed to cover that shift. "If you're looking to place blame, look in the mirror," he said. "We understand some people can't do it, but if it's a problem, really, someone has to jump in something you would like to do."

Although Vigilanti said the borough was "facing an emergency situation," he stated that adequate protection would be provided by current members. Mountside police officers qualified as Emergency Medical Technicians and through mutual aid coverage from Hillside, Springfield and Summit.

The crisis continued in September, even with the addition of Firefighter Michael K. Dwyer. Nine applications, four arriving since August, landed on the desk of Rescue Squad President Maggi Benninger, but only two were from Mountside residents. While non-borough residents can still serve on the squad, Vigilanti said he had hoped for a greater response from borough citizens.

The squad still faced a shortfall, especially during the day shift. For additional coverage, Mountside Police Chief James DeBate Jr. authorized two of his officers, each of whom are certified as EMTs, to assist Rescue Squad members if they are short-handed, with the understanding that their first priority is to serve the community as police officers. Two other officers were also authorized to assist with training courses to increase staff certification.

Chief of Police William Cushman opened a time capsule June 9 that had been buried at the Chisholm Community Center since May 25, 1921.

Inside were several local business cards, a copy of the Newark Star Ledger and the New York Herald, both from 1921. Those in attendance read about an outbreak of violence in Ireland and the death of a Ziegfeld Follies leader. A few Chevrolet coats have been purchased in that year for $645.

Dr. J. Laurence Kuhl, Capt. Raymond Volin, Myra Terry, Lin White and Dr. Carl Goldstein were inducted into the second annual Jonathan Dayton Hall of Fame June 8. "We are taking this day to honor five individuals who have made outstanding contributions in their community and professions," Principal Charles Serson said.

A group of high school seniors constructed a swing set in the high school courtyard and left the cafeteria to use it during a lunch period, ignoring warnings from the principal to the building. They led to the suspension of 27 students.

The Class of 1998 became the first class to graduate under Springfield Board of Education supervision. The 116 graduating seniors headed to the overnight Senior Graduation Celebration June 24 to join graduates from Kenilworth's David Greene High School.

A decision had been made earlier in the year to combine the party, as the two classes had spent their first three years together at Jonathan Davison Regional High School.

Summer
The Springfield Board of Education met June 30 to discuss disciplinary policies and practices. The meeting stemmed from an incident June 19 that led to the suspension of 27 students. It was suggested that the Board of Education kick into an informal suspension policy so students would not miss out on their education but would still receive a punishment.

The Township Committee formally ratified a new four-year labor contract with Fireman's Mutual Benevolent Association Local 57 and Superior Officers Local 57-A. It also was determined that the township would acquire the old Shibley Oil property for new fire headquarters.

Pederson was dismissed from the police force by a 3-1 vote of the Township Committee July 28. In early August a settlement was reached with Shapiro.

All disciplinary charges against Shapiro were dropped and Chisholm pleaded a $10,000 fine in the 21-year veteran's record.

The Springfield Planning Board unanimously rejected the J.D. Mack/CVS Pharmacy application, agreeing that CVS would generate too much traffic on Mountain Avenue. The applicant was expected to file an appeal.

The Springfield jury service, originally scheduled to begin running on Labor Day, was postponed until October because of administrative and logistic delays.

An amended land-use ordinance to provide zoning regulations concerning low- and moderate-income housing was passed during the first week of September by the Springfield Township Committee. The ordinance increased the maximum population density at the Boyczuk Stone-Affordable Housing Zone from 16 housing units per acre to 17 units per acre.

Royal School Real Estate, the developers of Edwards Super Food Store, delivered plans for the Saks Fifth Avenue site to the Zoning Board of Adjustment Sept. 4. Its reception by Board Secretary Lynda Gagliardi meant that the public hearing would resume Sept. 15.

An off-and-on discrimination lawsuit between the township and Police Officer Walter Brooks was back on Sept. 10. State Appellate Court Judge Howard Kestin and Donald Coburn overruled the suit's dismissal by Union County Superior Court Judge John T. Pisansky. With this ruling, the suit Brooks had originally filed could proceed in Superior Court.

Autumn
The Union Township Zoning Board made a decision Sept. 23 to allow a methadone clinic in Vauxhall to move to a remote industrial park area near the Springfield border.

A budget vote held in early October at Ballantyne County Club House to honor Helen Keyworth's retirement as chief administrator.

"Like to call Helen our grandmother to town hall," said Mayor Sy Mullman. "I don't think anyone knows the workings of our government better than Helen."

The Chisholm Recreation Center opened its doors after a 14-month

$1.25 million renovation project. The ribbon was cut Oct. 24, signifying the center's grand opening.

The Township Committee election, held on a debate was planned for Oct. 22, between Republican incumbents and their Democratic challengers. There was not much debate that evening as only Democratic candidates Harelik and Goldstein appeared, addressing a mostly supportive crowd of 13.

Harelik and Goldstein won a large victory over the incumbents in the Nov. 3 election as the township voted for Democrats across the board. The committee filled all five Township Committee seats with Democrats.

A State Appellate Court ruling cast a shadow of doubt over whether Royal School LLC would continue its Edwards Super Food Store public hearing before the Springfield Board of Adjustment, Nov. 17.

The court, in an unanimous ruling Oct. 23, declared that the parking lot and building variances given to original owner Saks Fifth Avenue are not automatically passed to Royal School. This reversed a decision made by State Superior Court Judge John T. Pisansky last year.

Theresa Herkalo, a long-time employee of the township, was recognized for her 25 years of service to local senior citizens and children as recreation secretary and senior citizen coordinator.

At the Nov. 4 meeting the Springfield Planning Board approved the application of K&K Development/Brown Park Continuum to develop the old Carter-Bell factory site on the border between the City of Summit and the township.

The Township Committee began considering diffusing police cars with automatic cardiac defibrillators. The devices are designed to assist heart-attack victims before ambulance or rescue squad personnel can respond and just between $3,000 and $4,000 each.

The Springfield Board of Education was presented with an assessment of the administrative structure of the district Nov. 16 after a seven-month study by William Libert of Educational Nexus.

Richard Sheola was hired as the township's full-time administrator, replacing Helen Keyworth. He was named acting administrator as of Jan. 9, 1999 until Keyworth's retirement takes effect later next year.

Residents were concerned not only about the speed limit but also about their property, which would disappear underneath a water street. In subsequent weeks, they met with Borough Engineer Mike Disto, who assured them that any grass or landscape areas would be replaced, if they were damaged.

L.J. James J. Debbie Jr. was named Chief of Police after a unanimous vote by the council June 9. Debbie had been serving as acting chief since the retirement of William Alder March 1.

A sea of red and blue waves over the Berkeley Heights football field as the Class of 1998 graduated from Governor Livingston High School June 22. "I hope you will retain your wonderful, positive spirit and accept new challenges," Principal Benjamin Jones advised the 184 graduates.

Democrats emerge victorious after long, fierce campaign

Politics in Springfield heated up in November when two seats on the Township Committee were up for election, Republican incumbents Judith Blitzer and William Ruocco faced Democratic challengers Clara Harelik and Steven Goldstein.

After a sticky campaign that featured a debate in which only Harelik and Goldstein appeared, the Democrats were victorious and will now occupy all five seats on the committee.

"I want to thank everyone who walked with us, everyone who held a friend to vote for us, everyone who helped with the phone bank," said Harelik as she celebrated after learning the election results. "Thank you to the people of Springfield for putting your trust in me. As vigorously as we campaigned, we will work as vigorously on the committee."

Harelik and Goldstein campaigned aggressively, targeting issues such as the Boyczuk Stone housing development, the full-time township administrator position and keeping municipal taxes in check. Ruocco and Blitzer's strategy was to campaign on a platform of maintaining two-part politics in Springfield.

When the nonpartisan League of Women Voters hosted an Oct. 23 debate at Town Hall, the Republicans failed to appear and did not provide statements for the league's newsletter. With no opponents to face, Harelik and Goldstein discussed their support of the separation of the township's clerk and administrator into the positions. All candidates claimed they were opposed to the proposed Boyczuk Stone housing development, which many Springfield residents fear will increase traffic congestion in that area.

More than 3,800 residents, representing about 40 percent of the township's registered voters, participated in the election. Harelik received 2,374 votes, Goldstein 2,366, Ruocco 1,426 and Blitzer 1,418.

Residents, business owners unite in protesting methadone clinic site

By Pamela Isaacson Staff Writer

Throughout the year, strong emotions and clashing opinions surrounded the relocation of the methadone clinic from the Vauxhall section of Union to Progress Street, near the Springfield border. Despite hostility, protest and lawsuits from Springfield residents and Township Committee members, moving to the new location is expected to take two months.

However, this result comes after a long battle that began in February.

For 25 years, the clinic has resided in Vauxhall, where residents allege they have faced difficulties with the facility operating in a residential neighborhood and near Central 3 School.

Before summer began, clinic owners agreed to rent space and move the clinic to Progress Street in Union — a remote industrial park area off Route 22 — by Aug. 1.

Almost immediately, area business owners protested the move by posting signs at telephone poles warning residents that the clinic "will bring dangerous drug and criminal activity to your streets, as well as affect property values and intimidate customers away from local businesses."

Shortly thereafter, the clinic owners added fuel to an already smoldering fire by deciding to buy the property rather than rent it. Around the same time, the Springfield Township Committee passed a resolution that clearly expressed members' negative view of the events that were unfolding in close proximity to their neighborhood.

"We're not interested in having them in our neighborhood," Springfield Mayor Sy Mullman said. "In the meantime, the Legislature was investigating a bill that would deny the clinic a license from the state Department of Health if the clinic was within 1,000 feet of a house of worship, school or residential zone. Because of these restrictions, the clinic had to be out of Vauxhall before that bill was signed into law."

Springfield residents were not the only ones opposed to the relocation. Colette M. Licchadi, the executive director of the Union Township Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber deployed the idea because the clinic would be moving to a business area.

A new attorney to represent the clinic's owners, Paul S. Werber, was selected for their hearing before the zoning board. The original attorney, Stephen P. Hehl, also was president of Union's Chamber of Commerce.

The Zoning Board ruled in favor of clinic owners when Werber appeared before the board armed with a case law from 1983 in which no residential zone could be a state-licensed ambulatory care facility was skin to a professional office business which is allowed in that industrial zone, part of Union.

Werber said answers to the arguments outlined in both suits would be answered soon.

$204,637 over spending from 1997. "We are pleased to introduce a budget that does not reflect any additional spending from the previous year," Nordin said.

The Board of Education introduced the official 1998-99 budget March 31, allowing for a total of $8,696,740. The tax levy, however, totaled $7,577,199, less than a $30,000 increase from last year. "This budget will put in place the necessary initiatives to improve educational opportunities for our students," said Board President Pat Tschetter.

Spring
Facts remained the same after the Board of Education election April 21, as Board President Pat Tschetter, Vice President Sally Riveccio and board member Richard Kress all ran unopposed.

Renovation projects began April 14 with the awarding of bids for the renovation of the community room on the second floor of Borough Hall, the repair of the Mountaineer Public Library roof and the Deerfield School tennis court lighting system.

Police Officer Tom Murphy stopped a vehicle on Route 22 that was occupied by two Newark men allegedly involved in a string of six armed robberies throughout New Jersey: Montclair, Belleville and Hillside. Melvin and Theon Chang were charged with receiving stolen property, possession of a controlled dangerous substance, possession of narcotics paraphernalia and hindering apprehension.

Gregory Bonin was appointed as the new borough administrator, a position that had been left vacant since the resignation of Kathleen Tohard in December 1997.

Thomas Michael Nordin 21, began his tenure as a Mountaineer Police Officer May 1, making him the second officer to be appointed to the department this year. Nordin graduated from Syracuse University and then attended the John H. Sumler Police Academy in Scotch Plains.

Residents of New Providence Road addressed the council with their concerns about widening the road, a project which is required in order to receive a $100,000 state grant to renovate the roadway.

Residents were concerned not only about the speed limit but also about their property, which would disappear underneath a water street. In subsequent weeks, they met with Borough Engineer Mike Disto, who assured them that any grass or landscape areas would be replaced, if they were damaged.

The Lightning Wheelz, 13 athletes from Children's Specialized Hospital, set 34 national records and collected enough money to form the trophy of the number one wheelchair team in the country at the National Championships for Wheelchair Sports in Bellevue, Wash., in early July.

As roof work began at Deerfield School, a contract was awarded to the Barone Construction & Equipment Corporation in the amount of $144,447.50 to correct the athletic fields behind the institution.

The Borough made its way to the World Wide Web in July, with Bohn designing a Mountaineer Website to benefit the community.

Due to a community support and departure of staff, the Mountaineer Volunteer Rescue Squad and Volunteer Fire Department were threatened with extinction. Vigilante assured residents Aug. 31 they would continue to provide uninterrupted fire and rescue services.

Linda Schneider, a member of the Mountaineer Board of Education for 18 years, announced her resignation Aug. 25 to take effect the following day.

Resident Thomas Lyons was sworn in as the county's latest superior court judge Sept. 3. Lyons succeeded Scott J. Moynihan in the family-section of the court, who was transferred to the criminal department.

There were no injuries, but Mountaineer residents felt the severity of the Labor Day storm that tore through the county Sept. 7. About 1,500 homes and businesses west of New Providence lost power, and police officers acted as stand-ins for the dysfunctional traffic signals on Route 22.

Vigliante proposed the formation of an ice skating rink created on top of existing tennis courts for the winter. After the first skate, a waiver on top of the ramps would freeze in the form of a "low-maintenance" outdoor rink.

The Police Department's Detective Bureau officers received Sept. 22 for outstanding work in the apprehension and conviction of individuals involved in identity theft. This type of crime involves assuming existing lines of credit or opening new credit accounts in another person's name.

A letter, written by Mayor Vigilante and distributed to the community, resulted in a heated discussion at the Borough Council meeting Oct. 20. "Only when the Board of Education's budget is defeated by public vote does the governing body have a voice in their process," Vigilante wrote. Although the mayor was obstructed and could not respond, one resident said they "replied and offended" by the letter.

The Republican Party made a clean sweep during the Nov. 3 election with Glenn Morimer claiming 1,242 votes and incumbent Warner Schoen closing with 1,226 votes. Democratic challengers Michael Krasser and Steve Brocner won in the borough's seventh district.

Police began to seek automatic bear debridations for as many patrol cars as possible in November. The device gives police officers a chance to assist heart attack victims before ambulance or rescue squad personnel can respond.

Corporal Andrew Scilliano aided Scotch Plains and Union County officers when he spotted the van of Michael Terrence Howson on Route 22 in late November. Howson, wanted by law enforcement officers for a bank robbery and murder, was held in the apartment building after Sullivan and several other officers closed in on a van. Howson 23.

In December, the borough adopted a resolution asking the Railroad Valley township, a neighbor to Councilman Scott's, to contribute a seat on their Board of Commissioners. Since the KVSA agreement, Mountaineer would join 19 towns: Essex and Middlesex, should be eligible in starting vacant facilities.

Republicans sweep November council election

By Pamela Isaacson Staff Writer

There were no surprises in this year's Borough Council election as Republicans Warner Schoen and Glenn Morimer were chosen to serve on the committee. Morimer for his first term and Schoen for his fifth.

Democratic challengers Michael Krasser and Steve Brocner accumulated about 43 percent of the vote, with Krasser's 916 and Brocner's 886 votes. Morimer totaled 1,242 votes and incumbent Schoen acquired 1,226. Krasser and Brocner both won in District 7.

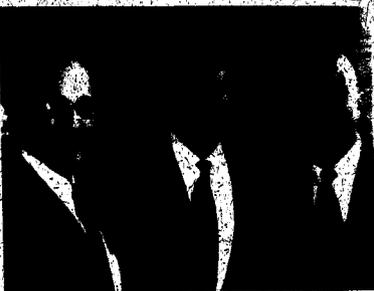

For the Democrats, plans surrounding the campaign included the slogan, "as all seats are occupied by Republicans and accountability." The candidates called for a more open government that allowed the public more access to decision-making and more direct discussions with council members. Schoen cited his experience of the council, and his responsibility to "expand existing strengths," as Morimer reflected on his life as a Mountaineer resident and his desire to use his skills "to the borough's benefit."

Tuesday's organization meeting will welcome newcomer Morimer, who stated on election night, "I'm looking forward to serving the voters of Mountaineer. The town is a changing and we're going to change with the town. We are really an move forward into the next century."

The Nov. 3 election forced all the introduction of the borough's most heated political outcome: "I think these members are excellent," said poll volunteer Prof. Benjamin that night.

They will spend things as people become more accustomed.

From left, Mountaineer Borough Councilman Warner Schoen and council candidate Glenn Morimer meet Councilman Bob Franks for brunch last spring. In November, Schoen was re-elected to yet another term on the Borough Council and Morimer was chosen to begin his first.

New leaders must keep promises

The season surrounding New Year's also includes changes in government and fresh resolves from officials who must now take their places on the committees, councils or other seats to which they were elected in November. Municipal reorganization meetings will occur in conjunction with this "changing of the guard," and we encourage residents to go to these events to hear the New Year's plans of their municipal leaders.

Hopefully, the resolutions of our municipal governments will not mirror the frivolous, ill-fated resolves typically made by just about everyone during this season. Both Springfield and Mountaineer need strong leaders who will live up to their political promises.

Springfield's Township Committee will boast two fresh faces this year with the additions of Steven Goldstein and Clara Harelki. Both will officially take their seats in helping to move the township forward Sunday at 4 p.m. in Town Hall.

Similarly, the Mountaineer Borough Council will see the addition of Glen Mortimer in 1999. Mountaineer's reorganization meeting will occur in Borough Hall Tuesday at 8 p.m.

New Year brings fresh resolves

When the clock strikes midnight later this evening, the infamous ball will drop in New York's Times Square and those who stayed up to witness the change in calendar year will cheer, kiss, loved ones with glee and toast to old acquaintances. However celebrated, most will ring in 1999 with smiles, tears or bittersweet nostalgia.

Inevitably, fresh resolves will accompany the start of 1999 in the form of New Year's resolutions. According to tradition, this season represents an opportunity for people to better themselves by setting goals — losing those extra pounds, quitting smoking or kicking any other bad habit that has crept into one's daily life.

Resolutions such as these are seldom kept as a simple change in the number on our datebooks is rarely incentive enough to drastically alter ingrained patterns, and disappointment follows shortly after resolves are abandoned. With this in mind, we encourage our readers to find realistic New Year's resolutions rather than ride the roller coaster of high hopes and low disappointments.

Start new year responsibly

While we're on the subject of the New Year and its inevitable festivities, we'd like to caution our readers to celebrate responsibly tonight. Ringing in 1999 is likely to be the biggest party night of the year, and we urge all residents to consider transportation to and from destinations before the punch and eggnog begins flowing freely.

Too often, unnecessary tragedy occurs during the holiday season in the form of automobile accidents caused by intoxicated drivers. These accidents are the direct result of judgment clouded by alcohol and a lack of planning and foresight.

No one relishes the thought of starting the new year in the local drunk tank arrested for DWI. Even less appealing is the idea of waking up Jan. 1 in the hospital and realizing your car has been totaled and that you've injured yourself or someone else.

Think before you go out tonight. If for you, having a good time means indulging heavily in alcohol-laden beverages, arrange for a ride with a friend or family member who does not drink but has the same general plans for the evening as yourself.

If this proves impossible, take a cab, preferably both to and from your destination — don't tempt yourself to drive home under impaired judgment by having your car with you at the end of the night.

By the same token, if you are sure that you will be abstaining from drink tonight, offer to act as the designated driver for one or more persons who will not. With fewer cars out on cold, icy roads, dangerous accidents become less likely.

New Year's represents a fresh beginning and a time for positive resolutions. We encourage all our readers to enjoy this once-a-year event in a manner each finds most suitable, but above all, to stay safe and ensure the safety of others by planning to celebrate responsibly.

Sexual McCarthyism caused impeachment

As Americans, we need to remember the history of this country as it relates to the issue of impeachment going on today. In the 1900s, 19 people in Salem, Mass. were hanged as witches because the ministers in charge could not accept anyone who spoke against local morality by being nonbelievers about god. All those accused were accused of high crimes and were humiliated in public.

By Roy Hirschfeld

The murdering stopped only when the community realized how many more would die for not being pure of heart and mind. Later, women who committed adultery were forced to wear scarlet letters on their dresses and sometimes stoned to death for sexual sin.

Centuries later, in the 1950s, Senator Joseph McCarthy tried to bully, threaten and ruin the reputations of issues of communism. He lost against every aspect of the accused in terms of their personal and business lives to make them appear morally bankrupt.

Now in 1998, we have a Congress which has sold its soul to the devil. The devil appears as arrogance, selfish morality and uses tactics like the ministers of Salem and McCarthy. The goal here is not only to bring down a President but to advocate an opinion that others know what morally right is and that there are standards of sexual behavior which must be followed. Do I hear the ghosts of Salem and McCarthy alive again?

What is going on via clear agenda — a rumble is impossible for anyone to imagine how (sex) deals with that abhorrent.

I also thought a major facet of Christian belief was that every man or woman is imperfect and will commit sins. If a person seeks out the forgiveness and the grace of God, we should not judge their sin and instead help them to get back to God.

It is time to stop spending millions of dollars to create a new sexual McCarthyism in this country. This is how much the Staff Report cost taxpayers and what the deal has always been: Startman will be a politician and a religious right wing zealot instead of wasting money on special prosecutors. The government should be spending money on education and teaching tolerance.

I have faith that a sense of grace will prevail in the Senate and that I can believe the good will prevail and we will get a big boost with the business of this country. President Clinton needs our support during this trying time. He has done many things to improve the overall employment and tax situation and has finally balanced the budget. He is a man with superior intellect yet flawed personal character.

I know no one who is perfect and I have read of no President who has not had secret reasons for mutiny. I find the public with lies at one time or another. I also don't think I am the perfect, moral person either — we are all flawed. Let's stick Clinton's impeachment and existing in the Senate and go on with the consensus of the American people to keep him on office.

Let's also not forget that all the Republican Congressional representatives, including our local representative, Roy Franks, voted yes on all questions of Presidential impeachment. His campaign slogan was that he represents our values. He certainly doesn't represent our values and I will not forget how he voted when the people in his district overwhelmingly voted against re-election.

Were those who voted for impeachment guided by conscience and the people they represent, or was it really party loyalty and the need to appease the right wing of the Republican party?

The guide of party and morality as the main method of evaluating politicians is a sad commentary on the future of politics in America. Let us renounce sexual McCarthyism, or someday you or I will be placed in the court of moral judgement and, if the right-wing fanatics have their way, man not god will be the judge. Don't let it happen — tell every Senator in Congress to stop the insanity, vote against impeachment and instead work for legislation to better the lives of all Americans.

Roy Hirschfeld is a resident of Springfield and serves on the Township Committee.

Non-traditional resolutions offer possibilities

"It's just another New Year's Eve, another night like all the rest, but when it's through this New Year will be brand new."

Today is New Year's Eve. Amazingly, New Year's Eve 1998 Tomorrow will be 1999, a short year away from the new millennium, the year 2000. It's hard to believe that we'll be entering a new century in only 12 months. God, time flies so fast. It seems like yesterday my high school graduation took place some 22 years ago.

Time flies by like the speed of sound and truthfully, we all know it, don't we? And isn't that exactly why it's incumbent upon us to not let it slip away without its maximum? The answers of course to these questions are "No" and "Yes" because of it, we must take an analysis of every bit of time we have.

Actually, around this time, most of us are wondering what kind of New Year resolutions to strike by the first participation — at least temporarily. Naturally, the common ones are dropping a few pounds, cutting out smoking, exercising more, or breaking some bad habit that we don't like. All admirable efforts — but ordinary and common — to say the least. They all affect us individually but, for the most part, go on by themselves.

Naturally, it's good to make self-improvements. But what about those around us? What about those we care about? What about those we love? Shouldn't we do something for them? Maybe 1999 should be different.

Nobody Asked My Opinion. But...

By Bob Milici

Maybe this year, we can all look inside ourselves and make resolutions that'll not only make our lives better, but better for that of others as well.

You see, life is short, my friends. Way too short. And the thing is, none of us know just how short our lives may be. We all take for granted that we'll be around for 30 or 30 years. That we'll be able to watch our children become adults. But in every case, that may not be true. We never know what tomorrow will bring and unfortunately, for us, our time on earth may be right around the corner.

If one major reason why we must take advantage of every moment we have alive is — why 1999 should be different. It's why, in the new year starting tomorrow, we should all look at ourselves honestly, take stock and think of ways that we can make every moment count, not just pass. And not just for ourselves, but for everyone around us.

Human nature, as it is, propels us to buy our lives and sometimes ignore some of the things that are so precious to us. Sometimes to a point that we find our lives precious only after we're lost. We fill our lives with hobbies, extra-curricular activities, worries and events that may fill our schedules, but take our time — our precious time — away from those whom we really love, when we should really be with. And with life as short as it is, can be short-lived if the only way we around? Of course it should be.

Let's all use 1999 as a stepping stone into the new century, as a catalyst to a new attitude and make changes to ourselves that will really count. If you have children, spend more time with them. Find out what they like, what they're interested in, join them in their endeavors and hobbies.

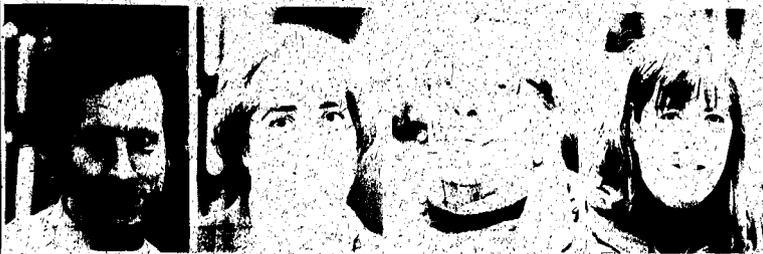

Kids grow up too fast. My nine-year-old is teaching me things that my memory has long forgotten. And I don't like yesterday that he was rocking my arms, listening to songs, that "reality" music we've — certainly not to them. My five-year-old asked me "where he came from" the other day. How did they grow so fast? Frolicking. But it's that time thing. Speed of sound, you know, it moves so fast.

How about our neighbors? Do we really know them? In this world of no time, do we really take a chance to better the way we make time to know our neighbors? In 1965, we knew all of our neighbors. As a seven-year-old, everyone surrounding our house in Newark knew our family and we knew theirs. Then there were real neighborhoods.

Board of Ed addresses school calendar

By Walter Elliott

Staff Writer
Drawing a school calendar, questioner at a public hearing and a spokesman for a high school independent study course highlighted the Springfield Board of Education meeting last week.

Superintendent of Schools Gary Friedland presented findings he received from staff members and parents about the 1999-2000 school year draft. The original draft featured 105 days off around Lincoln and Washington's birthdays, a three-day Memorial Day weekend and school closure on or by June 23. State law requires a 180-day minimum school year while contract obligations add another four days to most calendars.

"Some of the responses I've received from parents and teachers concerned the spring calendar," Friedland said before the full board. "Some are concerned about the lack of a break between February and May."

The board and Friedland debated among themselves the merits of having two days or five days off in February. Friedland indicated that most Linn County public school districts suffered with two days. Summer, as an exception, took a week off.

"One of the problems that exists with Boyd's Hashanah, which starts on Saturday next year," board member Jacqueline Shanes said. "We used to have those two days off at the beginning but then when we would think about it, why not? Some parents like a day before the school year starts for their younger children into routine."

"It seems that we tend to create calendar on a year-to-year basis," colleague Ken Fingerson said. "We set a schedule and parents plan their vacations around them. We come up with a new schedule with new dates and parents have to plan again."

Other questions about the next school year calendar included placement of staff development days and how many snow days to reserve. Placement of special work days and holidays determines whether the school year starts before or after Labor Day and where it ends in June.

Board Chairman Robert Fish, after conducting a "straw vote" recommended creating a draft 2000-01 calendar to give staff and parents some comparison.

Parent Anna Sattler brought copies of archery and pickleball study guides her daughters are using in the Clatsop Middle School physical education classes. She also brought questions about their relevance to the requirements.

"I understand that children need to learn that the rules are before playing a game," Sattler said. "A question how important it is to know how long a pickleball field is and what all the names to the parts of a bow and arrows are. You see how these guides are written — and what's on here aren't on the test."

"As a physical education instructor for 26 years, I've never heard of pickleball before," said board panelist Ben Stivasto. "The students do need to know what the rules are, what discipline to take and about teamwork."

The board failed to pass the policy regarding the high school independent study course. The offering new to the system this year, first a 45% vote with 10 abstentions. Those abstaining in voting were concerned in how the policy would be followed.

The course was put into the course catalog earlier this year and the catalogs are at the printers now. Friedland said. "The policy is followed by guidelines used by a group of instructors. Students applying for the course must submit a project proposal and the instructors judge the applicants' maturity and independence. This is done on a case-by-case basis."

The policy will be re-voted by the board during their next meeting. Students who have registered said Friedland will be given an interim course

Thirty-year Auxiliary Police veteran Ronnie Minitsky assists a motorist with directions around a detour on Morris Avenue. The Auxiliary Police came out to help Christmas day when a car accident disrupted power and traffic in the area.

Auxiliary police volunteer on holiday

At approximately 2:30 p.m. Friday, a motorist while driving east on Morris Avenue in Springfield jumped the curb in front of the Lyon's Building.

Along with two concrete garbage cans, multiple parking signs and trees, the vehicle knocked down a main power pole causing power outages and loss of heat in residences and businesses in the area. With power lines down across the highway, the auxiliary police were called out to assist the Springfield Police Department in closing Morris Avenue in both directions from Mountain Avenue to Caldwel Place.

Despite the Christmas holidays and sub-freezing temperatures, a dozen auxiliary officers volunteered to assist the Springfield Police Department in the cleanup and telephone companies and Springfield's local departments cleaned up the mess.

Power to the area was finally restored to traffic by Saturday morning, approximately 12 hours after the accident. However, the auxiliary officers still managed traffic past and around the occupants of the building until temporary generator power was restored at approximately 7 p.m. Saturday evening.

John Cutugno, emergency management coordinator in charge of the Springfield Auxiliary Police, noted that while it is not unusual for the unit to be called out for this type of event, the holiday, cold temperatures and length of the callout also show the tremendous dedication these men have to the community.

Callender scored 27 points and Peretti and Callender combined to bring down 24 rebounds in the team's win over Maplewood.

Springfield won with assist was Yuri Parulog and coming off the bench to help out wherever he could was Donald Volken.

Springfield's 7th graders played their teams out and came up victorious over Roselle.

Springfield trailed Roselle by a 12-8 score at the end of the first quarter. Roselle remained on top by a 19-15 score at the half.

Youth Basketball

Springfield played tough stepping away at Roselle's lead. Leo Ferrine scored two points to bring Springfield within one at 22-21. After Roselle scored a free throw, Ferrine made a buzzer to knot the score at 23-21.

Springfield managed to slip ahead by a 25-23 margin at the end of the third quarter.

Roselle used the game again at 25-25 before Ferrine hit a key three point shot. Roselle scored again to cut the Springfield lead to one point and then again to take a 29-28 lead at the end of the game.

With a little over three minutes to go in the game, Jordan Gerber scored an important basket to help Springfield regain the lead at 30-29.

With 17 seconds to go, Ferrine was felled and then he proceeded to make one and two free throws to make it 31-29. Dan Scott was then fouled and he made one free throw for the final score of 32-29.

With four seconds remaining Roselle was unable to score and the nailbiter was over.

Ferrine paced Springfield in scoring with a 35 point effort. He also grabbed five rebounds and came up with the steal.

Gerber had six points, two rebounds and an assist.

Frankie Miceli scored five points and Scott finished with four. Heims Abdelaziz scored one point.

Miceli lit up the scoreboard by making three consecutive three-point baskets against Maplewood in Springfield's tough 43-39 defeat. His nine points on three shots came in the second quarter after the game was knifed at 9-9 at the conclusion of the first period.

Springfield was ahead 19-15 at the half and then increased its lead to 32-11 in the third quarter.

However, little by little, Maplewood chipped away to close the gap. At the end of the third quarter Springfield's lead was cut to 32-28.

Maplewood's pressure defense increased in the fourth quarter and it helped Springfield's Essex County team eventually take the lead for good.

Miceli paced the Minutemen with an 18-point effort. Ferrine scored 10 points and grabbed four rebounds and three steals.

Gerber's play helped keep Springfield in the game as he grabbed eight rebounds and scored three points.

Abdelaziz, always playing strong underneath, continued to play aggressively and also scored four points.

Scott scored two points and had one assist and Mike Laurion scored two points and had three rebounds.

Kobel twins a key to GL's success

Mountainsiders spark Highlanders

By Andrew McGinn
Assistant Sports Editor

The start of a new sports season signals yet another challenge for the Kobel twins. Alison and Lauren and the Governor Livingston High School three sport athletes are now looking to propel the girls' basketball team to the same heights they helped the girls' tennis team reach in the recently completed fall season.

While a spurned twin will keep Alison, a reputable defender, in a cast and quarantined for some points in January, Lauren has played off the sick list for nearly a year by scoring 24 points and grabbing 22 rebounds in GL's season
opening upset victories over Mountain Valley Conference Mountain Division
opponents Hillsdale, 51-43, and Roselle Catholic, 45-39.

High School Girls' Basketball

The senior forward scored a game-high 17 points in the Jan. 6 win over Hillsdale and has, for seven games, scored the girls' basketball team to the same heights they helped the girls' tennis team reach in the recently completed fall season.

While a spurned twin will keep Alison, a reputable defender, in a cast and quarantined for some points in January, Lauren has played off the sick list for nearly a year by scoring 24 points and grabbing 22 rebounds in GL's season
opening upset victories over Mountain Valley Conference Mountain Division
opponents Hillsdale, 51-43, and Roselle Catholic, 45-39.

Last season Governor Livingston went 10-10 and split a pair of games with Roselle Catholic, one of the pre-season favorites to capture the Mountain Division title in 1998-99, along with Immaculate and Union Catholic. Roselle Catholic won the first meeting 48-37 and GL took the second game between the bestest win, 42-39 in a 1-1 tie.

GL's 12th) commenced play in the New Providence Tournament Tuesday night with a game against Rahway. A win would have put the Highlanders on the last night's final against the winner of Tuesday night's New Providence Whitpany Park contest.

Should GL have lost its first game, it would have played a consolation game yesterday.

Lauren and Alison both earned first-team All-Conference and Courier New third-team All-Ancients after leading the GL girls' tennis team to a 17-2 mark and a MVC Mountain Division title.

Alison was 19-3 at third singles while Lauren won 18-4 in second singles play for the Highlanders, who finished third in the Union County Tournament behind Westfield and Summit and reached the second round of the North Jersey Section 22 Group 2 playoffs where they were defeated by Chatham.

Lauren also played solid defense for head coach Don Kupchak against Hill side, helping the Highlanders limit their number of three-point shots. The preseason-modded Cupert team was able to launch.

"We're feeling very confident right now," said Lauren, who averaged 35 points and nine rebounds a last season. "It's always nice to win your first game of the season, so we were excited about that and beating Roselle Catholic like we've had a lot of momentum going into the New Providence Tournament. We keep Roselle Catholic was going to be tough, but our slugging guards came up and everything else clicked for us."

Mountainside soccer teams have outstanding seasons

Two Mountainside Magic girls soccer teams, 14-and-under, and 12-and-under, each won their respective division titles in Inter-Country League play while both finishing with impressive 9-1 winning records.

The 14-and-under team included coaches Jane Blasi and Ted Zawistek and players Elizabeth Jilly, Kaitlin Sullivan, Brielle, Lacianna, Leana
Blasi, Anna Hays, Cecilia, Maureen, Danielle Pace, Kristin Widge, Jamie

Boyer, Jenna Spadocini, Keite Moore,
Jennifer Hauser, James Zivjak, Marissa DeAmis, Erin Sanders and Karina Blasi.

The 12-and-under squad included
coaches and players Brian Dempsey, Patrice Casiano, Clyntia Phillips,
Rachel Talbot, Jessica Landis,
Julianne Boyer, Jack McCurdy, Sara
O'Sullivan, Vera Souverov,
Christy McCurdy, Lauren Hauser,
Hilbin Barone, Lynette Burnerford, Rebecca Goulin and Wayne Boyer.

Another Mountainside girls 12-and-under team, the Alpha Targos, coached by Rick Bostad and George Furze, placed third after Scotts Plains among a total of 11 teams as the division they played in.

A third Mountainside girls 12-and-under team, the Green Hill Chili Peppers, coached by Mark Massa and Rudy Gessinger, also had a successful season.

The coach 14-and-under team, the Big Green, coached by Doug Trampler, did very well, finishing second in the league.

Much credit goes to Susan Thau, who once again coached the Mountainside Blasi — the boys' 14-and-under Morris County travel team.
Thau was ably assisted by Vicki Kolando and Pete Gelombo.

The Blasi continued to play competively, and a key player suffered a season-ending injury in the first game.
