Programs continue

By Philip Sean Curran
Staff Writer

Editor's note: The following is part one of two excerpts from Freeholder Chairman Nicholas Scutari's speech at Sunday's reorganization meeting.

As you could imagine, being elected chairman of this Board of chosen Freeholders is the high point of my political life, especially when you consider the quality of the individuals, my distinguished colleagues, who gave me this honor.

By Nicholas P. Scutari,

Two years ago last week, when I took the staff of office of Union County freeholder, I pledged to you to demonstrate real leadership in this position. I am gratified that my colleagues have recognized that leadership and have given me the opportunity to serve as freeholder chairman in 1999 as we lead this county into the 21st century. I sincerely thank them for bestowing this honor to me and my family and I will not let you or the residents of Union County down.

I will be asking this board to fund an additional $1 million for Project Pocket Parks so that more open space can be preserved and more playgrounds upgraded.

I will also request that our HEART grant program, which gave county grants to our own artists and historic preservationists for the first time in history, be fully funded once again.

And EAccess 2000, which helped put computers in every public school classroom and will make Internet access available for every public school child in our county, enter the next phase.

A grant proposing today a $150,000 grant program to help teachers use the Internet as a teaching tool.

Grants of up to $2,500 each will be available to teachers for specific projects that connect their students to the world through the Internet. The grants, which will be awarded on a competitive basis, will not only benefit our students, but also toward the many teachers whose commitment and creativity are at times unfilled due to limited resources.

First and foremost, I am proud to announce that, in 1999, there will be no tax increase for Union County for the third consecutive year.

The Democrats on this board have kept a watchful eye on the county's finances and have been able to deliver high quality programs and services to the residents of our 21 communities.

By spending dollar wisely and keeping open lines of communication between the county manager and our department heads, we know that the families of Union County receive maximum return for their tax dollars in the form of programs and services.

This board recognizes that higher education has become the key to success for our children. Too often, however, our children's academic success is limited by his or her family's financial situation. Children from middle-class families, struggling to get by, are faced with the prospect of no financial aid and large, burdensome student loans.

As a former member of the Linden Board of Education, I have seen firsthand the financial struggle of middle-class families. We must address this problem. So today, announce, with the cooperation of Union County College and its president, Tom Brown, the establishment of The Freeholder Scholar Program.

The program works this way: If you're a high school senior with at least a B average and your family's annual household income is less than $75,000, you're eligible at Union County College. You will be paid for by the board. You will receive a B average in your first

Freeholders to focus on three areas

By Philip Sean Curran
Staff Writer

Marking the third consecutive year of the Democratic Party at the helm of Union County government, the nine-member freeholder board plans to focus on three core areas: economic development; education and health; and the newly appointed freeholder chairman.

His first speech as chairman,

Nicholas P. Scutari released a blueprint for 1999, the highlight of which includes a incentive-based method for high school students to attend up to four semesters at Union County College free. Scutari walked a delicate balancing act between curtailment county dollars to projects that his predecessor started and to ones of his own.

The Linden native promised to keep projects such as "Project Pocket Parks," and "Access 2000" well-funded while he directed his colleagues to put money toward his novel program called "Project Downtown Union County" to help towns that want to upgrade their downtowns.

"By spending each dollar wisely and keeping open lines of communication between myself, County Manager Michael J. Lopolla, and our department heads, we ensure that the families of Union County receive maximum return for their tax dollars in the form of programs and services," Scutari said.

As for the college program, the chairman, said, high school seniors who do not apply for any other financial aid and whose annual household income is less than $75,000 can have the tuition for their first semester tuition at the college — if their grade point average does not dip below a B. And if the average stays at least a B for four semesters, all four will be paid, again by the county.

In many ways, Scutari's blueprint bears similarity to the three-point plan by chairman Daniel P. Sullivan offered in 1998, focusing on education and quality of life issues.

Speaking about economic development, Scutari revealed little about the program will work but offered towns an opportunity to fix their downtown areas much in the same way the county helped Elizabeth and Linden last year with their separate projects.

"I am asking that the freeholders commit up to $5 million in capital funds, which will be awarded to municipalities in a competitive, rotating basis. For the communities that have projects that are ready to go, I am sure we will be peeling from you shortly. To the communities with projects still in the planning stages, don't be discouraged. We will provide you with enough time to submit your proposals for consideration."

Besides that, a new mobile immigration clinic will be started this year, too. Scutari says he hopes the clinic can immunize 2,000 children in Union County in 1999.

Although "life sentence" was delayed by about 30 minutes, the presence of so many eminent political figures in Union County — in one room proved to be a spectacle unto itself. A standing ovation included. State Sen. Raymond J. Lesniak, Assemblyman Joseph S. Suliga, Democratic Party Chairwoman Charlotte DePinto and Elizabeth Mayor J. Christian Billingsley among others.

Packing into Judge Edward W. Beglin Jr.'s courtroom, the audience came to see the swearing-in of the three freeholders elected in November, and of Sheriff Ralph Froehlich.

Embarking on his eighth term, Froehlich was lauded not only for the performance of his department but also for his political prowess.

"As a matter of fact, Ralph is so popular and has such an impact on the Democratic vote when runs that Assemblyman Neil Cohen, Assemblyman Suliga and I will be introducing a concurrent amendment to the constitution to the State of New Jersey creating a one-year term for sheriff in Union County," Lesniak said, drawing sustained laughter with the remark, "Ralph will be heading our ticket every year."

A further freeholder in Essex County, U.S. Rep. Donald M. Payne, D-10, offered the all-Democratic and the sometimes privately fractious board some sound advice: The worst thing in the world can be when you become opposition to each other, I think you really need to remember unity is the best policy.

County crime sees mild drop

By Mark Hryvna

Regional Editor

Union County experienced a 2 percent decline in overall reported crime incidents during the first half of 1998 compared to the same period in 1997. The State Police recently released figures as part of the six-month report for 1998 under the Uniform Crime Reporting Unit.

The preliminary report also indicated a drop in overall crime statewide and for the first time since State Police began collecting crime data, all categories of major or index crime dropped significantly, a record 13 percent.

Only county data are released as part of the six-month report. Municipal data are not released until the State Police issue the full year-end Uniform Crime Report.

While Union County crime was down 2 percent overall for the first half of 1998, slight increases were evident in five of the 10 index categories reported.

In terms of percentage, the largest decreases were in the following categories: burglary, 8.7 percent; motor vehicle theft, 8.5 percent; domestic violence offenses, 7.2 percent.

As for domestic violence, Executive Assistant Prosecutor Robert E. O'Leary attributes the decrease to local police departments. "A lot of departments have refined their training and the messages have gone out to abusers and would-be abusers that the police and courts take this very seriously."

Violent crime incidents — which include categories of murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault — increased by 3.4 percent. Meanwhile, nonviolent crime incidents dropped, 2.9 percent. Nonviolent crime consists of the following categories: burglary, larceny/theft and motor vehicle theft.

Prosecutor Thomas V. Manahan said the fundamental challenge in reducing crime is to convince law-abiding residents that they can and should participate with law enforcement.

Auto theft

The Essex-Union Auto Theft Task Force recovered 57 stolen vehicles in December and brought the total number of car-theft cases caught in 1998 up to 250, according to police officials.

Since Jan. 1, 1997, detectives and police officers assigned to the task force recovered a total of 361 cars worth $4.4 million.

Twenty-four officers assigned to the unit from departments in 30 counties work throughout the area looking for stolen cars. Municipal police chiefs assign officers for three-month and six-month periods on the task force.

Since Dec. 19, 1997, when the task force began operation, it has recovered 2,656 stolen cars worth more than $26 million and arrested 1,592 adult and 786 juvenile suspects from car theft cases, according to Lt. Thomas DeCastro of the Union County Prosecutor's Office, who is commander of the two-county task force.

DeCastro said late model Jeeps, Auras and BMWs continue to be among the most popular models stolen. Thieves will steal a car to sell, cut it into parts for sale, for scrap.

Early crime totals from 1998 show only one unsolved killing but plenty of serial violence linked to the drug trade, he said. "As long as there are illegal handguns and people looking to protect their drug stash, gang turf operation, we will have violence, and there will be murders."

The 1998 total of 14 murders is the lowest since 1984, when there were 12 homicides.

The number is down from 18 murders in 1997 and the only case not yet solved is the stabbing of Steven Smith in Linden in late November.

Besides the Smith case, there were eight murders in Elizabeth, four in Plainfield and one outside a high-club in Scotch Plains on Nov. 27.

"We had an average of 25 to 30 murders each year for much of the 1980s," said O'Leary. "But in the 1990s, the homicide rate and the adult crime and juvenile delinquency rates have tapered off, and actually decreased slightly at a steady rate."

Revue takes audiences 'Up, Up and Away'

Four amazingly agile and versatile performers, in addition to a five-piece band, celebrated the songs of composer-lyricist Jimmy Webb in a new musical revue called "Up, Up and Away," Sunday afternoon at the Paper Mill Playhouse in Millburn.

The four, well-known to the audience were the showstopper. Agitated, never-jumpy Robert Johnson, who conceived and directed the show, Kelli Rabke, Judy McLane and Robert Johnson. The production, conceived and directed by Johnson, will run through Feb. 7.

through his music. With backup singer, Robert Spencer, Loni Hoyt and Vicki Carter on the keyboards, Alvin Moody, bass, Brad Brinsford, percussions, Ken Goffie, reeds and Steven Seltzer, guitar, the audience was entertained with music, music, singing.

Beginning with The Easy Years in Act I, the company and soloists, in addition to the well-known songs sang some of Webb's lesser known songs such as "Our Movie," "Song Seller," "Paper Cup," "Where's the Girl," Playground," "Susie," "Carpet Man," "Angel Heart," "Big Girls," "Sing Everybody Gets to Go to the Moon," "Lost Generation," "Medley," plus "Saturday Night," "The Worse That Could Happen," "I Knew It Had" and "Structural Park." The choreography by Rob Ashford was well-conceived and the sparkling costumes which the first wife, designed by Angelina Avalone, marvelously contributed to the mood of the times.

This lively musical revue, the first of its kind has much to offer, particularly to music lovers. If it is innovative, funny, entertaining and certainly worth a trip to the Paper Mill — or perhaps your traps, where McLane returns to the stage.

Alan Smithee deserves credit for 'Burn, Hollywood, Burn'

Every so often a story will appear in the media describing some situation in a film. "Waterworld," with Kevin Costner, was known to everyone as a film where the budget went completely out of control. Before the film even hit theaters everyone knew that Costner and the director were not getting along and their creative differences were wreaking havoc on the set. These problems exist with many films and every once in a while, a director will become so upset at the changes that are being made to his film that he will want his name removed from the credits.

When this happens, the director credit goes to a non-existent person, known legally in Hollywood as "Alan Smithee." When you see this name as the director, you can be sure that the person who was originally directing the picture was so disgusted at the end result that he was ashamed to be associated with it.

"Burn, Hollywood, Burn" is a mockumentary about a director whose real name is Alan Smithee. He begins to direct a film which, everyone involved believes is destined to be the biggest box-office sensation ever to hit the silver screen. "Toto," it is known, stars Sylvester Stallone, Whoopi Goldberg and Jackie Chan. They three stars play themselves in the movie.

Smithee is an artist and has a very specific vision he wants. He's spiritual, carries a Tibetan Holy rock and a Tzitzian stick wherever he goes, and has "Academy Awards" on his mind. His producers, James Edmunds and Oliver, played by Ryan O'Neal and Jerry Glazer, played by Richard Jeni, also have a vision they want a worldwide gross of a few hundred million dollars.

The film shoot goes smoothly, but Smithée soon befriends The Brothers Brothers, two black filmmakers who he soon more like gang members. They decide to represent Smithee. They set up a meeting with Edmunds and Oliver and demand Smithee have complete creative control of the film. Edmunds, who has brought a gun to the conference room, tries to pull it out but a Glover jumps on him. The Brothers Brothers make it clear that if they don't get what they want, Smithee will burn the negative.

Burn, Hollywood, Burn" is a funny look at Hollywood and its "players."

"Video Detective" David "Who"

directed the 1990 film "Shrimp on the Barbie," starring "Czech" Marin and Emma Samms.

— Answer: Alan Smithee.

A resident of Mountaintop, Jim Riffel is the author of "The Video Detective's Guide to the Top 100 Films of All Time."

Art selection is made easy through Internet art dealer

"We're revolutionizing the way consumers buy prints."

Saving money as a homeowner doesn't mean your home has to look boring. This was illustrated recently as Marketeze joined hands with Internet print dealer ArtSelect.

"Nothing makes a home seem warm, interesting and stimulating like quality art," says Marketeze executive Doug Chapman. "ArtSelect makes finding quality gallery prints an easy and inexpensive process."

ArtSelect gives consumers the same options that wealthy art collectors have: only a tiny fraction of the cost. You choose the artist, you choose the mate and you choose the frames. Chapman points out customers save 40 to 50 percent on quality customer framed art prints. Shipping is free.

As with many types of commerce, the Internet has changed the way art is purchased. Those visiting the ArtSelect website at <http://www.marketeze.artselect.com> can click their way to the perfect print, framed and put in just the right combination.

People often feel like they have to settle for hand-me-down prints from garage sales or mass-produced prints from department stores. You wind up with a home that looks like a budget motel. With ArtSelect, you don't have to settle for anything less than the masters, all framed with a quality, professional look.

Chapman said, "When visiting the ArtSelect site, consumers first search the extensive catalog of prints organized by artist, style, color, theme, color or mood." Don't worry, don't care who the artist was, as long as it had a type of print that went with her kitchen wallpaper. No problem, "smiles Chapman."

Next, customers select art, frames and mats by clicking the pictures to see an enlarged image with a recommended mat and frame. The customer can click through the other choices until they find just the right combination.

Enrichment center has openings in winter/spring courses

The Enrichment Center of Westfield adult service center and enrichment company, still has spaces available in many of its winter/spring classes which will be starting within the next two weeks. Several classes have already filled and additional sections are being added.

A sample of the elementary classes being offered are Motion Magnets and Machines, one of many science courses; phonics reading on varied levels; Spanish; creative kindergarten classes including math, science and reading; math for every level student including gifted and talented; and several arts/drama sections; and creative writing.

For middle school students the Enrichment Center GED preparation classes in English and English still have a few spots open. The popular gifted and talented classes for middle school include: Mock Trials; Physics; Latin; Biology; and Mental Math.

Call The Enrichment Center to determine if your child qualifies for these classes. Study skills; test-taking skills; junior SAT and other challenges; and evening classes are available for students who are eager to learn.

The Enrichment Center of Westfield is expanding its NYST schedule to accommodate the growing demands of the surrounding communities. Students are coming in from Westfield, surrounding towns and from surprising distances. Said Rhoda Asch, "The demand for class space is great. Since The Enrichment Center class size is only 48 students."

Classes are offered Saturday through Thursday.

The Enrichment Center has a unique strategy about the SATs and the students taking the SATs. Students can always spare one hour to come to a class on any given day, but is more difficult to find the time to attend a three-hour session," said Elaine Sigal. Classes can run one hour and are offered in math and verbal. Students do not have to take classes in both areas. With small class sizes, teachers are able to individualize during these classes.

Students pay per class as they attend so as not to burden parents financially. Course Board materials are used so that the students are learning and practicing real SATs.

The Enrichment Center has a 95% success rate. All of the teachers at The Enrichment Center are state certified and experienced.

A how-to-do-it program beginning immediately, SOS, is Student Over-

All Support, is available for all grades. This individual program is geared to the student, whether A.D.D., in need of remediation or not working up to potential. The Enrichment Center's state certified and experienced specialty teachers are able to help eliminate patient-student scholastic conflicts.

Asch, a partner at The Enrichment Center, said, "It's difficult at times for one person to teach all grades and all subjects well; we employ elementary, middle and high school teachers who have specialties in their subjects and grades to meet the learning requirements for all students." The new SOS program includes study skills, organizational skills, homework help, confidence building, time management skills, test-taking skills, math skills and writing skills.

Private tutoring is available by state certified teachers in all subjects and all levels, including honors and Advanced Placement courses. Teachers will live the student's text as well as supplemental materials.

The Enrichment Center's Winter/Spring Brochure listing classes for students to kindergarteners through 12 grade are available. For more information to register for classes, call The Enrichment Center at only 654-0110.

Teachers make the grade on creative lesson plans

When teachers get good grades, students are the winners and motivation celebrates. That's what happened recently when a select group of minor and senior high school teachers were honored for their creative displays.

Teaching methods using creative divergences at supermarkets, shopping lists, DNA right simulations, restaurant menus, were celebrated.

Central High School teacher

everyone will benefit from an inspired and enthusiastic group of researchers, educators, engineers, researchers and inventors 10 years from now," commented Dave Dugay, president of Cheyenne Products, a company based in California.

Samuel M. Taylor, chairman and founder of education at the California Academy of Sciences was excited by the diversity of entries. The United States "Ringers" have lagged behind the rest of the world in math and science skills. We must catch up," says Taylor.

Park Avenue is "ultra" refined for 1999

Park Avenue and Park Avenue Ultra, Buick's full-size luxury sedans, are refined for 1999 with enhanced trim, body style that has been a major success in the market.

The new generation of Park Avenue is designed to make an elegant and tasteful statement, according to Park Avenue Brand Manager Katherine J. Benoit.

"Park Avenue gives you the classic elegance you expect in a luxury car," said Benoit. "More important, every feature has been selected to satisfy functional needs for the driver and passenger. So you might say we added a Son to the family."

The primary customers for Park Avenue include professionals, entrepreneurs, and executive men and women who want style, smooth ride, roominess and exceptional value.

In 1998, Park Avenue again received numerous awards from independent sources. For example, it was "Recommended" by Motor Trend Guide, "First-Run Safety" by Kinney's Persons, Entertainment Weekly, and an "Excellent Overall Value" by Intellichoice. In 1998, which gave Park Avenue the lowest fuel cost and lowest insurance cost in its class and for being rated an "Excellent Value" seven times in eight years.

Specific refinements for 1999 include an improved tail lamp appearance on Park Avenue, enhanced Concert Sound III sound system and Michelin tires standard on Ultra.

There are also four new exterior colors: Sterling Silver Metallic, Tuxedo Blue Metallic, Gold Leaf Metallic, and Dark Brown Metallic/Mystic. In-line White Diamond becomes available this year. In the '98 model year, Park Avenue's instrument panel and center console adopted a new East German trim.

Park Avenue Ultra's supercharged version of the 3.8L produces 240-hp at 5,200 rpm and 250 lb-ft of torque at 3,600 rpm. Projected fuel economy is unchanged: 19 miles per gallon city and 28 mpg highway for Park Avenue and 38-37 for the supercharged Ultra.

Both engines are linked to the 4T65E electronically controlled five-speed automatic transmission. What has won critical praise for its smoothness is the low gear ratio.

Mass and responsiveness. Ultra is equipped with heavy-duty suspension.

Except for oil and filter changes, both powerplants remain virtually maintenance-free up to 100,000 miles. Long-life features include engine coolant with a recommended change interval of five years or 150,000 miles; platinum-tipped spark plugs with first recommended change at 100,000 miles; and transmission fluid that requires no change under normal operating conditions for 100,000 miles.

Park Avenue provides an unusually strong architecture of safety cage construction and active features. As Next Generation front air bags, four-wheel anti-lock disc brakes and doors that automatically unlock within 15 seconds after an air bag deployment.

An active safety and security system is optional offered again on the GM OnStar mobile communication system. OnStar combines Global Positioning System satellite technology and a hands-free voice activated cellular telephone to link drivers to a communications center where advisors are available to provide many kinds of assistance such as emergency services, and navigational and travel support. OnStar, a dealer installation also offers automatic notification of air bag deployment, theft detection, and stolen vehicle tracking.

Outside, folding rear-view mirrors are offered with optional heated and electrochromic dimming features. Also, a passenger-side "parallel park assist" inside rearview mirror automatically folds down whenever the reverse gear is engaged. This feature, first offered for '98, is designed to provide the driver a better view of the parallel parking area behind and to the right of the car.

Park Avenue's suspension system has been widely praised by auto writers for its responsiveness. It includes MacPherson struts at front and semi-trailing arms at rear, mounted to the body through rubber-isolated, welded-steel structures. Rear air shocks automatically adjust to maintain proper vehicle height regardless of the load being carried.

An optional GM lighting package again includes heavy-duty suspension, steering programming, magnetic variable effort steering, specialty headlamps, and 225/60R16 Eagle LS Touring tires and leather-wrapped steering wheel.

Park Avenue has Personal Choice features operated by the remote keyless entry key, that include memory, interior and seat positions, automatic door lock operation, perimeter lighting, security feedback, and radio and climate controls.

A package of clerical features called Convenience Plus is back. It includes delayed entry and exit lighting, "theater dimming" interior lamps, battery cutdown protection, kick-off protection on power door locks, warning tones for the parking brake, turn signals, headlamps and garage key, the coded PASS Key III entry system, remote access keyless power flash to pass delayed locking, auxiliary power outlet, and climate control lamps with night setting, heating controls.

Some features optional on Park Avenue are standard on Ultra. For example, moisture sensing wipers, which wipers automatically operate based on moisture on the windshield instead of a fixed delay interval.

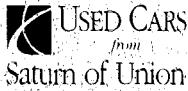

A tire inflation monitoring system automatically alerts the driver if a tire is losing pressure. Traction control increases control on slippery surfaces.

Another feature optional on Park Avenue and standard on Ultra is the Driver Information Center, which provides features on the instrument panel to select such information as oil level and the coolant level, vehicle information for fuel economy, miles to empty and gallons of fuel until the pressure monitoring and two trip odometers. The two-line LCD character electronic display can show cellular beginning stations when equipped.

Another optional feature returning for '99 is a head-up display. Called EyeView, it projects information onto the windshield showing vehicle speed, high beam and turn signal indicators and a check engine warning, eliminating the need for the driver's eyes to leave the road.
