Tri-state planning group assumes official status

New York City and its suburban environs in the states of Connecticut, New Jersey and New York—the largest metropolitan region in the world—now has an official organization to plan for broad improvements in all its major public services.

The planning role was accepted this week as the Tri-State Transportation Commission formally became the Tri-State Regional Planning Commission. Eighteen Tri-State Commissioners thus acknowledged a mandate to perform comprehensive planning conferred upon them in recent years by the three state legislatures.

The legislatures passed an interstate compact empowering the Commission to plan for the solution of immediate and long-range problems including but not limited to plans for development of land, housing, transportation and other public facilities.

This broadens the commission's responsibilities, which had previously been limited to planning for transportation and related land use.

The Tri-State Regional Planning Commission can respond to the problems of metropolitan living with plans and proposals. It cannot engage in the operation of any public facilities. However, the Commission may carry out experimental projects to test new ideas or demonstrate existing ideas in public services.

An example of the latter, Chairman Wood called attention to the exclusive bus lane that now operates on the New Jersey approach to the Lincoln Tunnel during rush hours. The Commission helped to line up the agencies who would cooperate in operating the bus lane.

applied for the financial assistance from the U.S. Department of Transportation in September, the funds were granted in October and the Port Authority opened the bus lane in December. Some 3,000 commuters are now able to reach their Manhattan jobs at least 15 minutes quicker than before.

During the recent railway strike on May 17-18, the bus lane handled as many as 1,100 buses, 400 more than usual, without a delay. An estimated 18,000 additional commuters were delighted as their buses sped by the crawling traffic on regular lanes during the trip to work on these rail-free days.

Tri-State was formed ten years ago by Governors Rockefeller, Dempsey and Meyner as an unofficial committee. It became an official transportation commission in 1965 by action of the three state legislatures.

THANKS FOR YOUR HELP—Genevieve Pascale (right), president of the women's division of the Chamber of Commerce of Eastern Union County, recently a gold charter member of the American Red Cross of Eastern Union County. Miss McCracken, who was honored at a dinner yesterday, is retiring after many years of service.

Miss McCracken honored by Union County Red Cross

Genevieve Pascale of Union, president of the women's division of the Chamber of Commerce of Eastern Union County, presented a gold charter to the membership of the American Red Cross of Eastern Union County, which was honored at a dinner yesterday, retiring after many years of service.

Miss Pascale, a member of the executive board of the American Red Cross Eastern Union County Chapter and chairman of the public relations committee, also wrote and planned the annual luncheon for her many years of community service.

She said, "I wish you leaving us, but, with mixed emotions, glad for her and for us. We shall miss her quiet efficiency and good humor. Charlotte had the loyal devotion and the personal friendship of a true friend. Her staff worked. Her wise counsel and clear judgment contributed much to the development of our chapter."

In a business sense, in carrying out her duties, Charlotte was always where the action was. She could never be accused of being a clock watcher. Hours meant nothing to her. Day or night she made herself available when and where needed. She gave her time and effort ungrudgingly.

"We know she will not be idle. We wish her well in whatever field of endeavor she pursues. We think her for her past years, for her understanding and for a job well done. We hope she will take time out to keep in touch with her many friends at Red Cross and all the other clubs and organizations of which she was a member."

Carmine J. Lioata, Christopher Dietz and John T. Conner Jr., Democratic candidates for candidates jointly, that campaign committee to their opponents to join them in "setting an example of high conduct" in the area of political contributions and expenditures.

Dietz said, "The public should know that the state election law requires that a campaign manager be appointed for each candidate or for candidates jointly, that campaign committee in a designated-donor bank and that all contributions be reported to the Secretary of State."

"This law has traditionally been ignored by the public officials who are elected to office. Just recently it was revealed that Senator Joseph DiStefano had an ownership interest in a cable-television company when he was sponsoring legislation favorable to such companies. Y Camps filled for July, registering for August

The New Jersey YMHA YWHA Camps, 289 Central Ave., East Orange, announced this week that all accommodations for the first part of the summer season have been filled but that applications are still being accepted for the second part of the season.

According to Matthew Elson, executive director of the camps, more than 1,500 boys and girls, ranging from seven to 16, will take up every available bed in the organization's four installations in Lake Como and Millard, N.J., during July.

He pointed out that each youngster has been assigned to a camp specially designed and staffed to serve his and her peer group on a coordinate basis with a comprehensive program of activities planned to achieve the ultimate in enjoyment—and individual development.

Noting that the spot-of-age children in each installation will be in the same age group, Elson said the campers will be grouped as follows: Penn Camp, 10 to 12; Camp Long Lake, 11 to 13; Camp Lake Como, 12 to 14; and Camp Millard, 13 to 16.

FRIDAY DEADLINE: All fees-alter that spot now should be in our office by noon on Friday.

Gallery opens a display of 'Graphic Innovations'

Graphic Innovations, a special new exhibit at the Metropolitan Art Museum, will be on display from July 6 to 12. The exhibit is a collection of 10 young designers' contemporary American art.

New techniques and skills have been successfully applied in the design of woodcut, linocut, and screenprint. The artists' efforts combine color and texture with line and form.

Judith Vivaldi's all-screenworks are appearing in the exhibit. She received her degree in art from the University of Los Angeles in Bogota, Colombia.
