MORE TO DO

Now that the days are starting to get shorter again, and the sun starts increased warmth in our southern paradise, the housewife's "weekend life" once again centers around the municipal pool.

The pool staff, as always, has provided a wide and imaginative range of recreational activities for old and young, but there are several exciting special interest subjects they have overlooked.

Like swimming, for example. Has anyone ever thought of making an example of sunbathing? How many people are aware of the proper techniques for sunbathing?

These techniques were determined following a vast federal research project, financed by taking funds originally earmarked for feeding poor people.

At any rate, sunbathing should be always rated sides by rolling out at right angles to magnetic north. This is known to the experts as the "water for the water" rolling method and is endorsed by approximately seven out of nine experts.

The other reason, as determined by federal physicians, is that sunbathing in warm weather sociologists, is that people tend to bathe in the sun in the warm months and in the winter, in the cold months, upon the north-south axis.

Thus, there is usually more room in most socio-economic levels for rolling to the east or west. North and south rollers run a far greater risk of rolling into their neighbors' "bird" games or football kicking territories.

That is just one sample of the many courses which could be offered at the municipal pool.

There is also a massive task of propagating the bio-techniques for keeping children out of the water in the hot months after they have eaten.

Another federal research team has determined that the proper time depends on the inverse ratio of the calorific intake, as well as the constant variable of the age and weight of the child, as well as a plus-minus-minus allowance for the depth of the water. This averages out to 43 minutes.

The most effective traditional method for keeping kids out of the water is to tie them to a tree. This plan, however, has been denounced by ecologists as hard on the tree.

In addition, screens of youngsters lashed to trees is often picked up by the pool maintenance men, thus creating the problems of neighbors who object to noise emanating from the pool.

Cloning fish to the extent, particularly determined small fry can just pull off the concrete. And having children dive into the pool with a bang, as in the case of a contraband - it puts too much concrete in the water.

One technique is to make the kids pay for their own refreshments. This cuts down on the intake, but it also limits snack receipts.

Another plan is to have the last one in the pool in the afternoon entitled to first choice of the pie at night. This obligates the lady of the house to provide the pie.

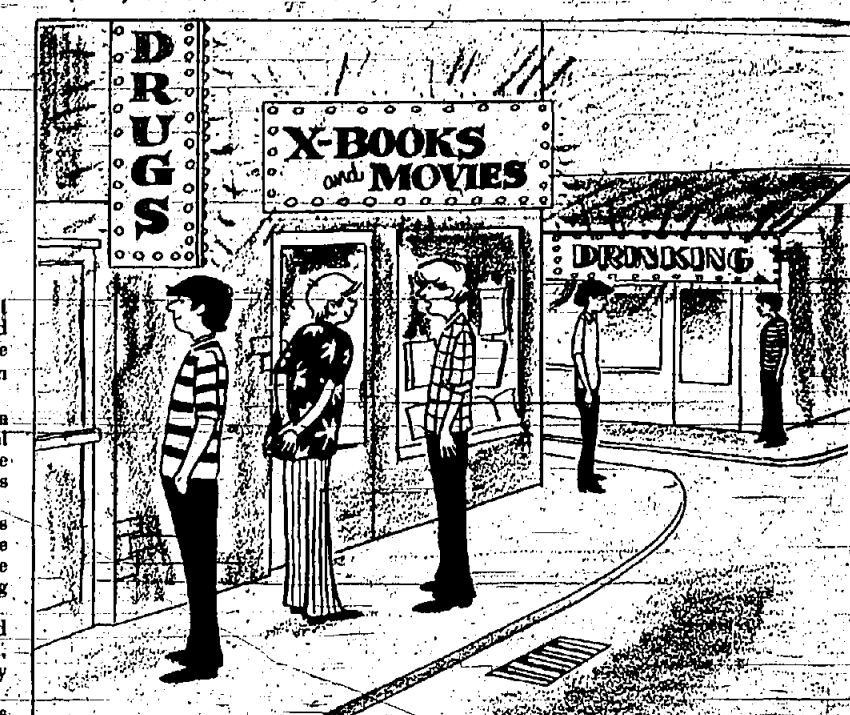

In fact, all the studies to date have been done by the Federal Government, and on the last way to dissociate drowning from eating.

The Recreation Department might well consult with the Regional Adult School on the establishment of a research group to pursue inquiries into the subject.

After all, there are not many towns where a wife can tell her hard-working husband, "See, honey, I'm exhausted. I've been laboring around the house all day long. You'd better take us all out for dinner."

State Senator MATTHEW RINALDO

Recently, one of my legislative aides spent a frustrating 10 minutes trying to obtain the telephone number of a company that has been in business for many years. After being required to open the name and address several times, he was told by the operator that there was no such number.

I have placed my suggestion in the form of a letter to Mr. Robert W. Klompare, chairman of the New Jersey Public Utilities Commission. I see it fit to implement it—and I am not a special interest group. I have, at least, a special responsibility to go out of my way to provide the services the consumers expect and deserve.

PROFILE--August Caprio

Instructing in a foreign language is more than teaching the student to read and write. It is the student's understanding of the language as well as the culture of the country whose language is being taught.

Caprio's belief in studying languages abroad is true not just for teachers, but also for the students. He has spent time in Europe, and he has learned a great deal about the language and the culture of the countries he has visited.

Boom brings problems Student film warns Morris

Morris County is expected to have a population of more than one million in the near future, according to a study by the Morris County Planning Board. The study, titled "Morris County: A Study in Growth," was presented at a public hearing in the county's largest city, Randolph. The study predicts that the county's population will increase from approximately 300,000 in 1970 to over one million by the year 2000. This rapid growth is expected to bring with it significant challenges, including increased traffic congestion, strain on public services, and environmental degradation. The study also highlights the need for better planning and infrastructure development to accommodate the county's booming population.

Federal funds to aid regional health services

A more-than-lively interest in botany

Eminent Rutgers ecologist 'retiring' to Yale

The New Jersey Regional Medical Program announced this week its plan to use $2 million in federal funds to start or continue 11 projects aimed at improving the public's health.

The money will be used in seven new programs, and four others already under way, to "efforts to deliver to the greatest extent the benefits of advances in treating heart disease, cancer, stroke and related diseases. Several kidney disease programs were completed last March."

In announcing receipt of its annual federal grant, Dr. Arthur F. Murray, Jr., coordinator of the New Jersey program, noted that 22 projects totaling $27 million had been approved by the federal government. However, a reduction in federal funding "affecting all Regional Medical Programs in the nation resulted in the curtailment of the plan."

Dr. Murray also noted that the overall projects are consistent with President Nixon's health message "without" urged that the "Regional Medical Program...to meet the need to improve the delivery of health care to the poor, cut medical care costs and use health manpower more effectively."

Among them is an "Urban Health Component" program, started last year. This program serves a disadvantaged population of 200,000 in the nine Model Cities programs and another 400,000 in 13 newly approved "mini-model cities" projects in State Community Development Program Cities.

It provides "Regional Medical Program planning staff-to help these cities plan and organize their facilities and manpower for more effective health care delivery systems. With an allocation of $160,000, it is the most expensive of the 11 programs.

The new "Urban Health Component" Health Care Service," with a $118,000 price tag, is a demonstration program based at Middlesex General Hospital, Newark.

Special health teams will offer preventive medicine and treatment to some 4,000 persons, including Medicaid patients, as "a prototype" for other community health projects.

A "Regional Cancer Control Program" (Domestically) serving at $53,000 will link 22 New Jersey hospitals with Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases in New York. The new electronic hook-up with Memorial will provide radiation therapy consultation, and the competing of precise, effective and safe radiation doses for an estimated 10,000 New Jersey cancer patients.

THROUGH THE establishment of Tumor Conference Boards in New Jersey Hospitals, a total of 54 hospitals with more than 15,000 cancer admissions a year will provide "team review" of the patients by the end of 1971. The physician teams will consider the status of the disease, treatment methods and plans for rehabilitation, under a $48,000 budget.

"Evaluation of the Status of Implanted Pacemakers," a $57,000 program, continues and expands use of the regional diagnostic center at Rutgers' Robert Wood Johnson Medical Center. Pacemaker failure now can be predicted by "telemetry" linking 10 community hospitals throughout the state with both leaded and un-leaded pacemakers. Some 300 more patients have been added to the program without increasing laboratory personnel and equipment.

A $23,000 allocation enables the New Jersey Heart Association to organize and continue teaching, "Cholesterol Cardiovascular Resuscitation" to first-aid and rescue squads and police and fire departments throughout the state. More than 10,000 persons have already received basic and refresher training in emergency care for people who have suddenly stopped breathing.

UNDER A NEW $28,000 "Comprehensive Stroke Care and Educational Program" at hospitals in Monmouth and Ocean Counties with 1,375 total stroke admissions a year will work together to improve care for most patients. In a related new $5,000 "Professional and Patient Stroke Educational Program," 10 Bergen County hospitals will produce video tape case histories of stroke patients for the education of physicians, nurses, patients and families.

In another new $31,000 program for "Decentralized RN and LPN Cardiac Nurse Training," registered and Certified Nurse Nurses will be trained for specific duties in hospital coronary care units.

The Regional Medical Program also is

Dr. Murray F. Buell retired as professor of botany.

He returned from the Rutgers University Department of Botany, what he has been doing since he retired from the University of Minnesota. He is now teaching courses in ecology at the University of Minnesota in St. Paul. In the spring, he will be teaching at Yale University.

People who know and admire Dr. Buell are not surprised at his way of "retiring."

His retirement course of a time when his major interest - ecology - has become a household word. He recalls that when he became an ecologist many years ago, only a few professional knew the word, or cared.

Dr. Buell's interest in the environment existed long before he arrived at Rutgers in 1946 as assistant professor of botany. In that year Dr. Marston A. Johnson, who later became dean of the Rutgers Graduate School, brought him to the University with the express desire of establishing a program in ecology.

Twenty years later, as a result of his efforts at infecting others with his enthusiasm, Rutgers is pre-eminent in the scientific world as a source of ecological talent. He reviewed the education of 11 doctoral and 32 master's students in ecology, and he has supervised the process he also attracted others to Rutgers to work in ecology under biologists who shared his interest.

Judgment by his peers has confirmed the reputation of Dr. Buell. He was a president of the Ecological Society of America which elected him last year as "Eminent Ecologist for 1970."

He was also president of the New Jersey Academy of Science. Last year he received the Lindback Award for distinguished research from the Rutgers Advisory Board for Research and Graduate Education.

In quiet, unassuming manner he has been able to attract to Rutgers the best in his field. He has been able to attract to Rutgers the best in his field. He has been able to attract to Rutgers the best in his field.

FAVORITE SETTING - Dr. Murray F. Buell, Rutgers University ecologist, retired last week after 25 years in the Department of Botany. His interest in ecology, which has made Rutgers a center for education and research in the subject, began long before he took the helm of the department. He plans to continue a busy schedule of teaching and research at Minnesota and Yale.

from which others in the department were able to finance research starting for him.

When he was named "Eminent Ecologist for 1970," the citation pointed out that he has been active "where his ecological knowledge could lead to more public education." Such citations are increasingly rare, and it is good to know that someone like Dr. Murray Buell has been available to help make them.

Area offices to administer federal fund

Administration of the Land and Water Conservation Fund, the largest federal grant-in-aid program for acquisition and development of public park, open space and recreation lands and waters, has been further decentralized.

All responsibility for grant-in-aid projects, review and approval, except compliance, reserve and statewide comprehensive planning projects, now rests with the six regional offices of the Department's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, which administers the program.

Roland R. Handley, regional director of the Bureau's Northeast Regional Office in Philadelphia, said, "This decentralization in implementation of the fund's local government made as close to those governmental units as possible. This authority should enable us to better serve the public."

The Northeast Regional Office of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation has obligated more than $4 million in 50 percent matching grants to the State and their political subdivisions in the Northeast Region since the Land and Water Conservation Fund program became operational in 1965.

During this period, Blue Cross, as a fiscal intermediary for the program, processed over 12 million Medicare claims. The plan serves as intermediary for 34 New Jersey hospitals, which represent approximately 72 percent of the almost 50,000 hospital beds in the state, as well as more than 50 extended care facilities and home health agencies.

In addition to processing claims, Blue Cross, as intermediary, also must determine benefit eligibility, interpret benefits, review utilization, audit providers of care, and consult with and give technical assistance to providers.

State calls rise in non-farm jobs tops in 5 years

Nonfarm wage and salary employment in New Jersey rose 25,000 in May to 2,500,000, according to a preliminary estimate by the New Jersey Department of Labor and Industry's Division of Planning and Research.

This figure, which excludes farm, domestic, self-employed, and unpaid family workers) has been increasing each month since February during the spring. The current gain, on the other hand, is greater than seasonally expected and the largest April-to-May increase in the last five years.

Commenting on the report, Ronald M. Heymann, commissioner of the N.J. Department of Labor and Industry, said, "I am still concerned about the job market situation in general and the particular difficulties we are having with summer employment for youth and job for veterans. If next month's data are good, confirming that the May rise was not a fluke then I may take a more optimistic stand."

Most of the May rise occurred in non-manufacturing where seasonally expanding retail trade and services and construction activities helped boost employment by 18,300. The increase of 7,700 in the manufacturing sector, the first gain since February, reflected a rise of 4,000 workers in non-durable goods industries and 2,000 among producers of durable goods.

Weekly earnings of factory production workers rose $1.30 in May to an all-time high of $12.45. Hourly earnings gained 2 cents to $3.60 while the week's workweek, by Bureau of Economic Analysis, rose to 40.4 hours.

A new peak of $10.29 in the weekly earnings

14,000 new high school grads seek jobs in N.J.

Thoughts of the 14,000 graduates of the 1971 high schools in New Jersey, many of whom are seeking permanent employment, are being shared by the State Department of Labor and Industry.

Polking out that most of these young people are registered with local State Training and Employment Service Offices around the state, Heymann urged employers to look for young people to fill permanent jobs to meet their needs. "Employment Placement Offices as soon as possible."

"After completing 13 years of hard school work and study, it must be most discouraging to these youngsters that there is no work available for them," Heymann said. "We are doing everything possible to place them in jobs, but we cannot succeed if we do not have the full cooperation of employers."

The report on the plans of the State Training and Employment Service Offices, published by the Labor and Industry Department's Office of Statistics and Planning, appears in the current issue of "New Jersey Economic Indicators."

Inductions suspended during July

Colonial Joseph T. Avella, state director of Selective Service, said this week that New Jersey would not induct young men during July or until national headquarters notifies him to resume inductions.

These instructions were received from Dr. Carlos Ferrer, director of Selective Service, and included an order to suspend all graduation physical examinations scheduled to take place in New Jersey during this period. However, the local boards will be permitted to process all registrants, mail inquiries and requests for deferments, especially for registrants who are within five days of their birthday are required to register for draft.

"Contrary to what you may have heard, the Military Selective Service Act of 1964, as amended, did not suspend inductions during July or August," Avella said. "Only the induction of registrants in Section 1(c) of the act is suspended at that time."

Elks outscore Wilpat team in highlight of week's men's softball league action

The second half of the Springfield men's softball season started off on the wrong foot for Wilpat. The Elks combined timely hitting and good pitching by Jack Phillips to hold on for a 4-1 victory over the strong Wilpat team. The Elks opened the scoring in the first inning with two runs on hits by Walt Vaccantini and Walt Bahoff for a 2-0 lead.

The score remained the same for five innings as the Elks pitcher allowed only four hits. In the sixth, Larry Doyle of Wilpat produced their only run of a solo homer over the right-center field fence.

In the bottom of the sixth the Elks added two more insurance runs on a single and a walk, an error and the long left field fence by Wayne Bisbal.

Losing pitcher Don Kinsler allowed the Elks only five hits in a five effort game. Wilpat manager Mike Kinsler said his team will be back in the field on Friday.

The Springfield Recreation Department will sponsor a tennis tournament in the following areas:
- Boys' Singles (15 through 12)
- Men's Singles (18 and over)
- Mixed Doubles (18 and over)
Anyone interested in entering the tournament should fill out the following application and return it to the Recreation Department before July 9.
