Town seeks to salvage rent control ordinance

The Springfield Township Committee is investigating the possibility of revising its rent control ordinance to preserve its intent in the landmark case of Helmsley vs. the Borough of Fort Lee. The committee is also looking for a way to salvage the ordinance, which originally provided a model for local regulations.

The Township Committee, scheduled a special meeting for 8 p.m. Monday to discuss the ordinance and to consider a resolution to amend it. The committee is also looking for a way to salvage the ordinance, which originally provided a model for local regulations.

The Fort Lee ordinance is very similar to ours. In fact, ours was modeled after it," said Committee member Dr. Ruben R. Levine.

Another matter, Mayor William Cleri announced that he has asked the police department to concentrate all manpower possible on finding and arresting the person or persons responsible for the recent shooting in the area of the town's covered walkway in front of Temple Beth Ahm on Halloween night.

Describing the cross-burning as "one of the most distressing and disgusting incidents" ever to occur in Springfield, the mayor urged township residents to call police if they know or suspect who was responsible. He said cross burners should be prosecuted "to the fullest extent of the law" as public repudiation of religious persecution.

The meeting also marked the introduction of a bond ordinance to provide for the construction of a new water treatment plant. The county's proposed $7 million water-reducing basin in Lenox Park, south of Tott Lane, when she suddenly fell ill and dizzy, according to police. The car veered off the road, hit a guard rail and slid along the edge of the road, where it was overturned.

Rescue workers said she regained consciousness in time to ask that the car be towed to a nearby hospital. She was taken to Overlook Hospital, Springfield.

Joint service to lead to Interfaith Council

The annual interfaith Thanksgiving Eve service for the community will be held this year at the Springfield Episcopal United Methodist Church with the Rev. George C. Schlesinger as host minister. Dr. Ruben R. Levine, rabbi of Temple Beth Ahm, will be keynote speaker for the service at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

The service will be a prelude to further interfaith activity in our community in coming months.

Formal founding of an interfaith council is anticipated during a conference to be held at Temple Shalom in January, explained Dr. Levine, who is president of the Springfield Clergy Association. Participating churches include the First Presbyterian Church, St. James Roman Catholic Church and Antioch Baptist Church, in addition to Shalom Shalom, Beth Ahm and the Methodist Church.

The idea of such a council will be to create opportunities for meaningful discussion and open exchange of ideas and information among the various faiths in Springfield, he said.

The council is anticipated as an outgrowth of the Springfield Clergy Association's activities in the past year. The council will be a prelude to further interfaith activity in our community in coming months.

The films are part of a series of films that are being shown at the library. The films are part of a series of films that are being shown at the library.

Possible school closing under discussion again

The Springfield Board of Education, which governs public schools from kindergarten through eighth grade, was scheduled to open the latest round of public hearings last night on the possibility of closing a school or otherwise enlarging class size in response to state-imposed budget restrictions at a cost savings of about $200,000.

No decision was expected for months. An audience of about 100 listened silently Monday night when the 22-person School Reorganization Study Group released updated findings and answered board members' questions as a prelude to the opening of hearings last night.

The study group's latest 68-page report gives updated information on the potential impact of several options, such as closing the Edward Walton School or the James Caldwell School, previously discussed in 1976.

Dr. Thelma Sandmeier, principal of the Florence Gaudinier School and chairman of the study group's committee on options, noted that the report also contains data on some possibilities mentioned but not formally evaluated two years ago. These include vacating the Raymond Chisholm building, already closed as a regular school but still used for such purposes as housing central administrative offices and special services staff. No cost savings could be expected from moving central activities out of Chisholm, according to Dr. Sandmeier's committee—thus apparently eliminating this choice offered by Walton and Caldwell parents who have said that, if any school is closed, it should be their children's.

The new report also includes options that include five previously discussed in 1976. Three would close Walton, with vacant classrooms being reassigned to fourth and fifth graders currently housed there. One would close Caldwell, with its kindergarten through fifth graders being reassigned to Walton and its sixth grade to the

Arson possible cause of Dayton school fire; damage at $20,000

Springfield police and fire departments suspect arson in a blaze last Thursday that caused $20,000-$30,000 in damage to the Jonathan Dayton building in Springfield and Mountside classroom area being remodeled in house central administrative offices of the four-campus Union County Regional High School District.

Fire Chief Robert Day said the flames charred some attic beams, exposed by the remodeling project, behind the landmark clock tower that is part of the original 1936 core of the Jonathan Dayton building. The tower itself, however, escaped damage, although it was a close thing, according to Chief Day.

The automatic alarm, directly connected from the campus to the fire department a few blocks away, rang about 9 p.m. Firemen and a Dayton custodian immediately rushed to the scene.

Police said there was a broken window at the rear of the school, possibly where a culprit broke in. Officer Mike Holler is investigating the case.

Police, who sent burn samples away for analysis, are "treating this as an arson case—at least until we get back results from the state police lab."

Parsell warns on leaf fires

Springfield Police Chief George Parsell this week issued his annual warning that motorists should avoid driving into a pile of leaves—because a child might be hidden in them.

"Small children often play in the leaves, and they are not usually visible to the driver," the chief pointed out. "Parents should also warn their children of the dangers of playing in leaves."

Parsell also joined Fire Chief Robert Day in warning that it is dangerous to park a car atop a leaf leaves.

"The exhaust system can catch the leaves and set the car on fire," Parsell said. "Unfortunately, fires have also been started by vehicles driving through piles of leaves or driving into them."

Firesmen also noted that there have been several auto fires in Springfield when vehicles were parked on leaf leaves.

LIBRARY LETTERS

Double heritage

By ROSE P. SIMON
The Springfield Public Library lists the following titles among the recently received books for its SEARCH FOR IDENTITY "An Ethnic at Large" by Jerry Mangione

His addiction to reading was looked upon as a detriment to healthy living, according to his tradition-bound Sicilian parents. Gerardo Mangione (Jerry) early in his boyhood, longed to escape from his ethnic surroundings in Rochester, and to become a writer.

His budding talent began to blossom at Syracuse University, where he wrote columns for the Daily Orange. Moving on to the more sophisticated New York area, he muddled through an assortment of jobs until he joined the throngs of the unemployed during the Depression. With occasional stints at book reviewing he just managed to survive.

He recalls life in Greenwich Village, its Bohemianism, his new literary connections (Cowley, Cabell, Fisher, Sokolsky, Tresca) and his work for a publishing house. After a visit to Italy to explore his ethnic identity, he turned to government work as an agent for the Federal Writers' Project, then to a publicity job for the alien internment program.

Mangione writes entertainingly about his many friends, his several involvements to dine with the Roosevelt family, his numerous sexual adventures, the state of the union.

By the time he was 35, Jerry resolved his identity by becoming "an ethnic at large, with one foot in his Sicilian heritage, the other in the American mainstream."

UNDERCOVER AGENT "Meeting Hattie" by Hamilton E. Davis
During the 1950's, the beautiful rugged hills of Vermont became a refuge for those seeking the simple life, among them the industrialists, businessmen and drop-outs. The latter, with their relaxed life-style, they refused to work, used soft drugs, etc.) became offensive neighbors to the Establishment.

When Paul Lawrence—an undercover narcotics agent—came up with a long list of arrests, the accused the young people of trafficking heavily in heroin and cocaine, the citizens were duly impressed, but the accused protested angrily.

Davis traces the checkered career of Lawrence up to his general discharge from the Army in 1966, to his job in the Burlington Police Department, to the Vermont State Police, to police chief in Vergennes.

From there he turned up in St. Albans as an undercover agent. With the emergence of damaging bits of information, he became an extraordinary man.

Taxation: Myths, realities

A personal spending tax

This is the ninth in a series of 15 articles exploring "Taxation: Myths and Realities." In this article, William D. Andrews, professor of law at Harvard University, discusses a tax on personal spending, which he sees as preferable to our current income tax. This series was written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and is published by this newspaper in cooperation with Union College.

By WILLIAM D. ANDREWS
One way to eliminate distortions and inequities in the income tax would be to replace it with a graduated personal tax on total annual spending rather than on annual income.

The proposed tax is usually called a progressive spending tax, but is also known as a consumption tax. It would eliminate disparities such as the following:
Last year, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Wilson had $20,000 income, mostly from his salary. Wilson used $2,500 to repay a $20,000 mortgage, $2,000 for retirement, paid $2,000 income tax and had about $13,100 left to live on.

The Horace Smiths had $15,000 income, mostly interest on savings totaling about $20,000. They fell no need to add to their savings, so their total income was available for taxes and living expenses. Their tax was $1,700, leaving them approximately the same amount to live as the Smiths, $13,300—despite their smaller income.

Since the Smiths and Wilsons were living on similar amounts, why should they not pay similar amounts of tax, based on their total household spending (approximately $13,000) rather than on income?

A personal spending tax, like the income tax, would be paid by individuals, not business firms. A personal spending tax—again like the income tax—would also be progressive, applying at higher rates for people spending more. If one person spent twice as much as another, the graduated rate schedule would make the tax more than twice as high.

Exemptions would protect low-spending persons against any tax at all. Because a spending tax would not distort people's choices about saving versus spending, as the income tax does, it might lead to a better rate of saving and investment of capital than the income tax.

It formerly was thought that personal spending would be harder to measure than income, and that a spending tax would be impractical despite its theoretical advantages. Opponents said it could be computed simply as income minus savings, plus withdrawals from savings.

A taxpayer would report income from all sources, add other receipts from business and investment transactions, subtract all business and investment expenses, and compute the tax on the resulting cash-flow figure.

In practice, the spending tax would closely resemble the personal income tax, modified to treat business and investment receipts and expenditures as currently taxable or deductible.

Consider, for example, a sale of shares of stock. Under existing law, this requires computing gain or loss, based on the cost of the shares to the taxpayer (or the donor, if received as a gift) and adjusted for intervening stock dividends.

A spending tax, however, would simply take the sale proceeds into account as funds available for current spending without reference to original cost or subsequent adjustments. Costs incurred in earlier years would have been deducted then and not carried forward to year to year.

Many of the most difficult technical aspects of the income tax would be eliminated by adopting a spending tax. They include: determining gain or loss on sales of property; special treatment accorded capital gains and losses, determining depreciation allowances, distinguishing between current and capital expenditure and treatment of various borrowing and other credit transactions; and increased future spending income by 100 per year.

The judge said that Oliver meets all the criteria for receiving benefits except that he is male. He was married to the insured person for at least 20 years, has never remarried and is at least 62 years old. Retirement benefits Judge Conti ruled that to be denied benefits solely because of sex is unconstitutional.
The court ordered that benefits to Mr. Oliver are to begin immediately without regard to any possible appeal to a higher court.

Going Strong

For many people, putting in their 20 years on the job and retiring at 55 is their ultimate goal. This is not the case of Mrs. Fehr, who is still working full-time every day, and she still maintains her own home, knits, gardens, sews, and is known to be a gourmet cook. "I really like to do in my spare time is travel," says Mrs. Fehr. "I have visited England, Ireland, Scotland, Portugal, Spain, Mexico and Hawaii, and that's a lot. I'd still like to see."

Sometimes she and a friend drive up and down the east coast, taking back roads away from the normal tourist highways, and it isn't an enough section for Mrs. Fehr. "I have two children, six grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.
Work is not all there is to Mrs. Fehr's life, though. She still finds time to do quite a few of the things she enjoys. Along with being very active in her local church and various clubs, she still maintains her own home, knits, gardens, sews, and is known to be a gourmet cook. "I really like to do in my spare time is travel," says Mrs. Fehr. "I have visited England, Ireland, Scotland, Portugal, Spain, Mexico and Hawaii, and that's a lot. I'd still like to see."

Her job in the technical department supplies her with varied responsibility. "I've been in the field for 20 years, and I've had a lot of interesting assignments," Mrs. Fehr originally went to work to supplement her income, but her job developed into a meaningful and challenging field of her life.
"As to whether I can or even want to reach a decision."

'JACY' is created by agencies merger

The Eastern-Union County YM-YWHA, the Plainfield Jewish Community Center, and the Y&Y-WHA of Greater Westfield announced the merger of the three agencies into one to be called the Jewish Association of Central New Jersey (JACY).

The affiliation is the result of a two year effort of a merger committee representing all three centers. Some members of that committee included Donald Whitten, Chairman; Alan Simberloff, of the Jewish Federation of Central New Jersey; Dan Morris and Al Dobrof, of the National Jewish Welfare Board; and the Executive Directors and Presidents of the three agencies involved along with other board members.

March update for master plan at local college

An eight-person master plan committee has been appointed by Dr. Saul Orkin, president to develop "an updated five-year plan" for Union College, Cranford.

In appointing the master plan committee, Dr. Orkin asked the group to submit the plan to him by Feb. 15, 1979, so he may present it to the board of trustees in March. "Although the time frame is tight, I believe it is reasonable," Dr. Orkin said. "Considerable background data are available from earlier studies, as well as from the recently completed master plan of the Union County Coordinating Agency for Higher Education. Further, in order to dovetail our planning with the state master plan, it is necessary to adhere to the Department of Higher Education's schedule which requires quick action on our part."

Dr. Orkin said the Master Plan Committee will prepare summary planning statements in the areas of role and mission of the institution in the context of the State Department of Higher Education's statewide plan; the College's enrollment and degree awarded goals; demographic profile of Union County; the College's academic planning, including program focus, proposed new programs, programs to be discontinued, major alterations in existing programs, major alterations in instructional techniques and modes, changes in basic skills testing and basic skills programs, and major modifications of academic standards regulations; projected changes in required resources for faculty and facilities; projected changes in student support services, and administrative structure and operations; projected budget increases by major categories of expenditures; and a monitoring system to determine how the goals and changes will be monitored and evaluated.

Elizabeth site leased for UC Skills Center

Union College will lease 23,215 square feet of the Thomas & Betts Company plant, 10 Butler St., Elizabeth, for a skills center to serve Union County residents, it was announced by Dr. Saul Orkin, president.

The major function of the center, which will be administered by Union College in conjunction with Union County Technical Institute, will be to prepare students for positions in a variety of jobs where employment opportunities exist, according to Dr. Leonard F. Krizan, vice president for academic affairs at Union College. "I was pleased to learn that Union College will lease a portion of the plant for its skills center," said Mayor Thomas G. Dunn. "We have a special interest in this CECA-sponsored center, since it will provide many high-quality occupational skills training programs for our citizens as well as basic skills training, counseling and job placement services."

The Thomas & Betts Company and Union College have signed a three-year lease for the space with an option to

"We have an enormous amount of confidence in the cars we're selling. And with good reason. The Rabbit, Diesel, and Scirocco Performance with a Volkswagen is measured with a stop watch and a calendar. We not only want to know how fast it will go, but more importantly, how long it will last. And when you build a car to last, you can't build it cheap. It just doesn't work. At least it doesn't work... long time. With Volkswagen, you get a car that isn't going to become obsolete in a hurry. It has features like fuel injection, that keeps it get the most from regular gasoline. And you get Volkswagen's solid engineering. And safety features like our passive restraint seat belt system that every car will have by 1984. We want to be sure that both you and your Volkswagen will be around for a long time. There's one other thing that can contribute enormously to the life of a Volkswagen. And that's a Jersey Pro. He has the kind of service that can help make every mile a better one with his uniquely professional, and highly sophisticated service orientation. So, come and see us for a good, long lasting car. One that won't need replacing for a good, long time. It may not be the least expensive car you buy, but it may well be the most economical car you've ever owned. In the long run. Rule change hikes benefits for pensioners

In deciding whether or not to delay retirement, the fact that it could increase Social Security checks may or may not be significant, depending on one's circumstances, according to Robert Willmuth, District manager of Social Security Administration.

The 1977 Social Security amendments increased the amount of special credits for people who delay retirement after age 65 from 2 to 3 percent for each year after age 65 starting with 1982. Thus, a person who retires at age 68 would find his or her Social Security check 9 percent higher than it would have been otherwise.

The law also was changed to make such credits applicable to widow's or widower's benefits at the death of a worker starting in June 1978. Social Security studies show that money is the biggest single factor affecting the decision whether to retire. To this extent, the law also delays retirement also will find that after reaching 65 he can earn more and still keep all of his Social Security benefits.

Here's how it works. For 1978, people under 65 can earn up to $3,240 without affecting their Social Security checks, but after reaching age 65 they can earn up to $4,000 without affecting benefits. The annual exempt amount for people age 65 and over is scheduled to go up to $500 each year for the next three years, and thereafter increases with increases in wage levels. For people who retire before age 65, the exempt amount will increase with wage levels, a somewhat lower rate of increase.

In 1982 the age of which the retirement test no longer applies will drop from 72 to 70, enabling people 70 or older who want to work to earn as much as they can without affecting their social security checks.

As under the old law, any earnings over the annual exempt amount cause a reduction in the Social Security check of $1 for each $2 in earnings above the exempt amount.

Anyone can obtain more information about retirement benefits by contacting the Elizabeth Social Security office located in Westminister ave. Elizabeth. The telephone number is 800-722-1111.

Teen Talk

By PATRICK DUDGEON

A recent study helps prove what many teenagers have been trying to tell their parents for ages: Most young adults know the essential facts concerning proper health practice, accident prevention and emergency care. However, the research also performed by the National Assessment of Education Progress, also indicates that youngsters have some gaps that need filling. For example, about 88 percent of the 17-year-olds interviewed knew that a Pap smear is used to detect cervical cancer in women. But more than half of the youngsters remained under the illusion that Pap smears were also used as a test for venereal disease. Another interesting finding from the multiple-choice survey of 9,000 17-year-olds and adults 26 to 65 was that only one-third of the teenagers knew table salt was the best thing to use to put out a grease fire. Thankfully, only two

Terminal is building history-making plant

The recent announcement by scientists at Princeton University of breakthroughs on a fusion process that would produce pollution-free electric power and lessen our dependence on fossil fuels such as oil and coal has focused attention on the construction of the world's largest magnetic fusion reactor.

Work is in progress on the $225-million Tokamak Fusion Test Reactor (TFTR) at Princeton University's Forrestal Campus.

Terminal Construction Corp., Wood-Ridge, N.J., is building the $25-million structure that will house the reactor. When completed, it will house the TFTR device. The project is funded by the U.S. Department of Energy. Scientists say when the reactor is put into operation, it will be capable of harnessing confined thermo-nuclear reactions generating temperatures of up to 100 million degrees and will upgrade. From time to time more than 3,000 scientists from around the world will work in the Tokamak complex.

Terminal's job is to build a massive reinforced concrete wall structure for radiation shielding and a three-foot-thick concrete floor slab that can hold a load of 3,500 pounds per square foot.

Anthony M. Dinallo, president of Terminal Construction, says he is putting in 220,000 square feet of floor area for the building which will contain about seven million cubic feet of space.

"It has to be one of the most unusual buildings we've ever worked on," he says. "It will have heavily shielded testing rooms, a computer control center, a back-up computer room, offices and laboratories. The test reactor will be in a 110-by-114-foot room with walls four feet-thick and about 55 feet high. Three walls will be cast in place and the fourth will be built of removable concrete blocks with post-tensioned reinforcing so the room can be expanded."

According to the Terminal Construction U.S. Department of Energy is the contracting officer.

WIDE LIVING—New 114-foot "double-wide" model homes at South Wind in Jackson combine traditional design and charm of site-built ranch style homes with lower cost easy maintenance of manufactured models. Two-bedroom homes start at $11,990; other models to $21,500.

South Wind unveils a double-wide home

Pick a nice, clear autumn day very soon and drive out to South Wind—the gracious, well-established adult mobile home community located on Route 528 in Jackson. As you sweep past the imposing entrance of the South Wind, your first impression will be of an immaculate, beautifully landscaped community set along paved avenues. Stop wide, paved avenues. Stop wide, paved avenues. Stop wide, paved avenues.

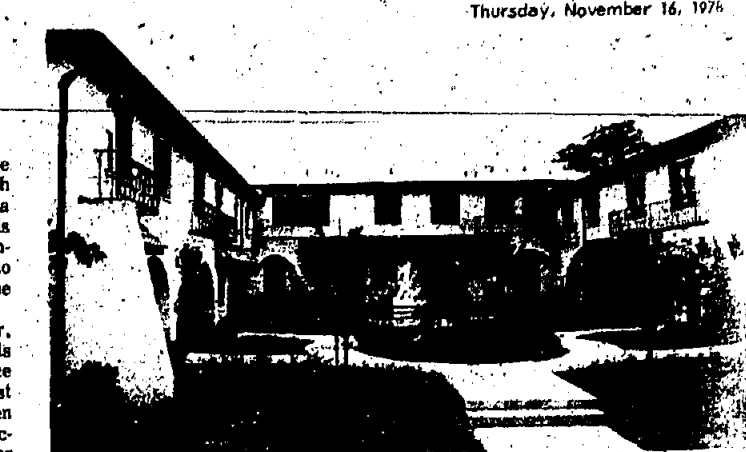

The new South Wind double-wide model looks like a site-built ranch home, both indoors and out. The exterior has handsome house-type siding, a peak shingled roof and unique house-size doors and large windows to let in plenty of light. The overstated log features a concrete patio behind the back door—a full South Wind's models do. Then go up the front steps through the door to a

A secret that wasn't: Sherborne big seller

The Sherborne, a new two-bedroom model, was introduced at Crestwood Village last June. It was introduced without benefit of a sample home for visitors to inspect or advertising yet in three months, 24 Sherbornes were sold, almost 92 percent of the available supply, solely by word of mouth and from floorplans only.

Today, a handsome new sample, a solid reality, is open for inspection in the exhibit area of the Ocean County Retirement Community, and the builder stands ready to provide sufficient homes to supply the demand, according to Ted Boyer, resident sales manager.

The Sherborne was planned to provide the CONVENT MEWS—Spanish styled townhouse community in the Convent Station area of Morristown shows this courtyard scene of completed homes. Priced at $84,990 the community is under way with construction of its final phase of 70 townhouses.

Convent Mews plans new unit construction

Convent Mews, the 130-unit luxury condominium townhouse community in Convent Station has announced plans for the construction of its final phase of 70 townhouses. To date, 60 homes have been sold and occupied.

Weather permitting, foundation work for 35 townhouses is anticipated before winter frost with delivery of completed homes expected early in the spring. The remaining 34 homes will be started during the spring with late summer of 1979 deliveries projected. Announcement was made by Tony Ross, division manager for the building corporation, Wintergreen, Inc. of Union.

According to Ross, Convent Mews offers the most completely luxurious 2-bedroom townhouses in the Morristown area with the most comprehensive list of items normally considered "extras" included in the price of every Convent Mews townhouse.

For example, continued Ross, "our homes include a huge brick fireplace, a complete eat-in kitchen right down to the refrigerator and built-in dishwasher, a moose tiled foyer entrance, 2 1/2 baths

Shore homes termed bargain in Barnegat

With the median price for a three bedroom home reported to be more than $40,000 in today's market, it is remarkable to find a small community in Barnegat offering the same home at $24,990.

This "bargain in home ownership" is found at Barnegat Woods, a small community of attached homes in Barnegat, a seaside township of Ocean County. The 2-bedroom home in the same community is a ranch, priced at only $24,990.

These spacious homes with features such as wall-to-wall carpeting and above-specification insulation included in the basic low prices make it possible to own a home without being burdened by the maintenance costs of condominium amenities. Because Barnegat Woods is not a condominium, each home is sold with its own land - private parking at the front, rear lawn and sodded rear lawn large enough for parties and the pleasure of outdoor living in summertime. A storage shed at the rear provides an extra space for lawn and garden implements as well as patio and outdoor furniture.

Nearness to the Barnegat Bly. Elementary School makes Barnegat Woods an excellent buy for a one-parent family. The homes are built along quiet streets and cul-de-sacs, and it is a short walk to the elementary school. School buses pick up children to the local intermediate and high schools.

The low sales price is based on many factors, one of which is that Barnegat Woods is situated in a "hidden" location that is a little hard to find the first time.

Coach finds a few bright spots as Dayton team loses to Verona

By MIKE MEIKNER
The Dayton Bulldogs dropped their seventh game Saturday, falling to Verona, 14-8. The Bulldogs, coached by Angelo Senese, are now 6-7 and have begun practicing for the season finale against West-Orange on Thanksgiving Day.

Dayton engineered two impressive scoring drives during the game. The first came in the second period and was capped by a four-yard Larry Irene touchdown run. The longer pass was a 20-yard completion from Al Preziosi to Nick Caricato. The big play was a 20-yard completion from Al Preziosi to Nick Caricato.

A TEST DRIVE ONLY A BMW DEALER WOULD HAVE THE NERVE TO SUGGEST.

Because you can't test drive a BMW 320i on the great race circuits where it was perfected—Le Mans, Monte Carlo or the Nürburgring, for example—we'd like to suggest you put it to almost as perilous a test: the thoroughfares of metropolitan New York.

Whether you're passing eighteen-wheel trucks on a two lane highway, jockeying for the lead position out of a toll booth or weaving nimbly through the traffic and potholes so uniquely indigenous to our area, the BMW 320i—fuel-injected, with independent suspension—reacts with a speed and agility that will spoil you for any other car.
