

Number of employed sets record for N.J.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for New Jersey was 6.9 percent in October, compared to 7.4 percent in September and 7.1 percent in August, it was reported by Herbert Binstock, regional commissioner of labor statistics who directs the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Middle Atlantic Region. Binstock said that the October jobs rate was 2.7 percentage points lower than a year ago.

Binstock pointed out that the improvement in the statewide jobless situation was accompanied by a sharp rise in the number of jobholders. At 3,317,000 in October, the number of employed New Jersey residents reached a new high, passing the 3.3 million mark for the first time. Over the last year, the number of employed was up 234,000. At 3,466,000 in October, the number of unemployed New Jersey residents was down by 82,000 or 2.5 percent since last year.

New careers for minorities and for women

The New Jersey Utilities Association recently announced plans to broaden its guidance program for women and minorities seeking careers in what it called "non-traditional, math-related fields."

Robert P. Kenney, an Elizabethtown Gas Company official and chairman of NJUA's equal employment opportunity committee, said more than 150 guidance counselors and teachers discussed the expanded program at the New Jersey Education Association convention in Atlantic City.

"For some time now, NJUA has been responding to requests from high school guidance departments to provide speakers and counselors to advise young women and minority students on how to pursue careers in math-related fields such as engineering," Kenney explained. "Now, with a few years of experience under our belts, the committee has decided to promote the service in a formal and much more active way."

SCHEDULED TO PERFORM with the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, Nov. 25 at 8:30 p.m. at Westfield High School is soprano Jessye Norman. Norman will join maestro Thomas Michael in an all Wagner program.

Writing contest planned for high school papers

The New Jersey Press Women this week announced the third annual contest for writers for high school newspapers in publishing private and parochial schools.

Student newspapers in New Jersey may submit one entry each in the three categories (news, features and editorials) which have been published during the 1978-1979 school year to Jean-Rae Turner, Box 341, Elizabeth, 07207.

The entry, a tearsheet from the newspaper, should be attached to an 8 1/2 by 11 inch sheet of typing paper. The back of the paper should contain the contact category, headline or slug of entry, name, address and telephone number of writer; name of student paper; name, address and telephone number of school; name of the journalist or English instructor or sponsor of the newspaper; names of the writer's parents or guardians and date of publication.

All entries must be postmarked by Feb. 1, 1979. A $50 U.S. Savings Bond will be awarded for first place, a $25 U.S. Savings Bond for second place and a $10 cash prize for third in each category.

First-place winners will be submitted to the National Federation of Press Women's high school writing contest.

U. S. fund cut adds to town's budget crisis

Springfield government is looking for an alternative to the solution—layoffs—planned by many other New Jersey communities in the 1979 budget squeeze between state-mandated budget "caps" and loss of federal anti-recession funds, according to Mayor William Clert.

Newark has sent notice to more than 400 municipal employees, including 200 policemen, that they will be laid off Dec. 31 because of the budget squeeze. Elizabeth municipal government also is contemplating massive layoffs.

"Of course the dollar figures are much, much smaller in a town the size of Springfield," Mayor Clert said about the federal anti-recession funds. "But proportionately we're being hit just as hard as the cities. All department heads have been warned that this is the case, and we could be faced with staff reductions (in 1979) unless they can come up with other answers."

Clert explained that Springfield this year is receiving about $5,456 in federal anti-recession funds, all allocated toward police and fire department salaries. (Wages for the police and fire departments were budgeted at more than $1 million this year.) Congress has failed to renew the anti-recession appropriations for 1979.

A state-appointed arbitrator has yet to decide how wages increases for policemen. But these would be more than $40,000 next year if policemen get a percentage comparable to that ordered for firemen. (Typically, public safety departments have the largest budgets in any municipality, officials explained, because that is where most manpower is concentrated.) Most other municipal employees will receive a 5 percent increase next year under a long-term contract.

Also, Clert said, the town already has received tentative notice that insurance coverage will rise by $250,000 to $450,000. With rising costs for utilities, gasoline and all other materials needed by municipal government, "it looks very grim," Clert said. "And we're just beginning the budget process for 1979. It can only get worse."

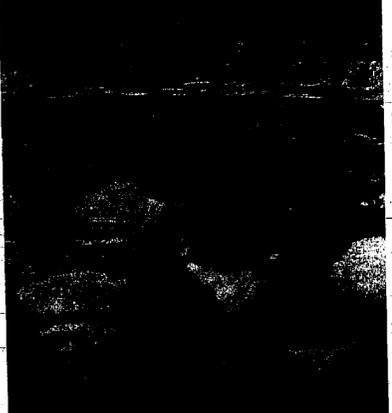

Deputy Mayor Stanley Kalish, who is an unpaid volunteer, and Walter Kozub, the township engineer, are coordinating the town's community development program. The mayor said federal revenue-sharing funds for community development do not appear to be in any sort of trouble in Washington, despite cutbacks in other aid to communities.

The community-development funds, however, can be used only for designated projects, the mayor pointed out—not to offset any shortfall in general municipal programs.

County government coordinates the community-development program for 17 municipalities, including Springfield, Berkeley Heights, Clark, Cranford, Fanwood, Garwood, Hillside, Kenilworth, Linden, New Providence, Roselle, Roselle Park, Scotch Plains, Summit, Westfield and Winfield. (Elizabeth and Union coordinate their own community-development programs.)

County Manager George Albanese and John Swindler, chairman of the county's Community Development Committee, said next Thursday is the deadline for project proposals from public agencies, citizens' groups and others in the 17 municipalities.

Ken Shatten, community-development coordinator for the county planning department, noted that this will be the first time the application process covers a three-year period, rather than just a year at a time. Under federal rules, Shatten said, neighborhood spending must be targeted where there are concentrations of lower income families.

FISCAL DILEMMA—Concerned parents pack auditorium as Springfield Board of Education begins consideration of possibly closing one elementary school for the 1979-80 school year because of continued declining enrollment, reductions in state aid and stringent state limits on local school budgets. # Town's top priorities -pavement problem, Colonial playground

Springfield's top priorities for 1979-80 are paving streets and curbing—and to get a playground for the Colonial terrace neighborhood.

The township's top priority programs in community development during the three fiscal years starting in July 1979.

Springfield government will submit applications next Thursday for $37,709 of about $12.5 million that county government expects to receive in community-development funds from the federal government during the three-year period, according to Bernard Schwartz, the township's application chairman. He said the requests will include:

- $184,709 to excavate and repave streets and to replace sidewalks and curbing during the 1979-80 fiscal year (July 1979 to July 1980). Streets that would be paved or re-paved include Center, Keeler, Brook, Clinton and Satter streets; Evergreen, Clinton and Washington avenues, Alvin terrace and Perry place.
- $138,000 to acquire a 63,280-square-foot lot in the Colonial terrace area and to improve it for use as a playground, as requested in petitions submitted to the township by a majority of neighborhood residents. The application will be for $150,000 during the 1979-80 fiscal year and for $6,000 in 1980.

Author gives children tour of making a book

The Springfield Public Library and the local elementary schools joined forces last Thursday to provide more than 80 young readers with a chance to meet a real author.

Barbara Gilton, a resident of Short Hills, contributor to such magazines as Seventeen, Co-Ed and Young World and author of several children's books, conducted a "Workshop in Growing a Book...from the Idea in the Author's Head to the Published Book."

Two consecutive programs were held for children from the James Caldwell School. One group consisted of children from kindergarten through third grade and the other of fourth and fifth graders.

Gilton, using her Abingdon Press publication, "The Boy with the Special Face," as an example, elicited responses from her audience through questioning as she explained to the younger group the importance of the title and cover of a book as well as the author's story-telling, the art of the illustrator and the contributions of editor and publisher.

With the older group, she discussed such matters as rejection slips and the different ways in which an author can cope with rejection and also the hard work of editing and revising an original manuscript.

Parents seek alternative to school closing

By ABNER GOLD

Parental emphasis seemed to have undergone a sharp change last week when the Springfield Board of Education debated its third annual round of proposals. The "budget cap" to limit property taxes and to limit state aid to bring the inner cities and other economically depressed areas closer to educational equality with the wealthier suburbs.

They also stressed that the board must now start preparing its budget for the next school year, reflecting any changes in state aid.

Both two years ago, when the discussions began, and last year, when the board made its decision more rapidly to keep all schools open, the major concern of many parents had been whether to close the Edward Walton School or James Caldwell School. Many had said, in essence, "Whatever you do, don't touch 'my' school."

This time around, however, almost all of the 200 people, crowding the auditorium in the Raymond Clubhouse, seemed to take for granted that the closing of any one school would have an adverse effect on the education of all children in the local district, from kindergarten through the eighth grade.

A detailed report to the school board, summarized in the last issue of the Board Newsletter, and distributed at the Nov. 15 meeting, emphasized that any school closing would result in a substantial increase in class size for all grades, as well as sharp reductions in specialized and individualized methods of instruction.

Parent after parent, throughout the two-hour hearing, had virtually the same comment: "We moved to Springfield, to a major extent, for the excellence of the schools. We are willing to continue paying whatever taxes are needed to continue that excellence. Why won't the state let us do so?"

They got essentially the same reply from the board.

Dec. 4 set to decide if school shuts

The Springfield Board of Education will end its series of discussions on whether to close a school next year. The discussion meeting will be at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Raymond Clubhouse Building, where previous meetings in the series also have been held. The board plans the following timetable on the issue:

At the Wednesday meeting, Dr. Fred Baruch, superintendent of the school system, will give his recommendation. Board members will hold their own discussion of the public, which spoke for several hours at a hearing Nov. 15, will be asked to limit its remarks this time to reactions to board members' comments.

At another special meeting, at 8 p.m. Monday, Dec. 4, also in the Clubhouse Building, the board hopes to make its decision on options outlined by the school system's 42-person School Reorganization Study Group. The options range from maintaining the school-organizational status quo, if finance allow it, to closing the Edward Walton or James Caldwell School, to keeping all schools open but enlarging average class sizes.

The board set up the timetable, by consensus, at its regular meeting Monday. Laura Rosenbaum, board president, had previously told the public that the school-closing issue would be decided in conjunction with talks on the budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year. Mid-January is the legal deadline for the board to submit its tentative budget to the state before the school election on April 3.

Speaking Monday night, board member Gregory Clarke said he thinks the public wants a specific target date for the public to be held.

Gym and arts top YMHA list

Gym, performing and fine arts and social groups for adults, teens and youngsters will be among activities when the YM-YWHA of Metropolitan New Jersey begins its Springfield services this winter, according to Robert Berkowitz, president of the Y.

West Orange will be a prelude to launching activities in January at Springfield, Berkeley Heights, Clark, Cranford, Fanwood, Garwood, Hillside, Kenilworth, Linden, New Providence, Roselle, Roselle Park, Scotch Plains, Summit, Westfield and Winfield. (Elizabeth and Union coordinate their own community-development programs.)

County Manager George Albanese and John Swindler, chairman of the county's Community Development Committee, said next Thursday is the deadline for project proposals from public agencies, citizens' groups and others in the 17 municipalities.

Ken Shatten, community-development coordinator for the county planning department, noted that this will be the first time the application process covers a three-year period, rather than just a year at a time. Under federal rules, Shatten said, neighborhood spending must be targeted where there are concentrations of lower income families.

Dec. 1 is deadline to file for a rebate

Thomas McCullum, the township tax assessor, this week reminded Springfield residents that Friday, Dec. 1, will be the deadline to file applications for homeowners' rebates.

McCullum said a person eligible for a rebate on a home he owned and occupied no later than Oct. 7. He said those with questions may call him at Town Hall, 376-8600.

Exit permit is sought for Soviet 'refusnik'

A campaign of letter-writing on behalf of a Russian "refusnik" has been started by members of Temple Sha'arey Shalom, Springfield.

The plight of Soviet scientist Carl Greenberg was uncovered by Beverly Lerner, president of the temple on a recent visit of Leningrad. She said Greenberg lost his position as a scientist after applying for an exit permit. He has adopted the vocation of tailor to earn a living, she added.

Temple members and the general public are being urged to write letters to congressmen and senators in the joint effort to obtain an exit permit for Greenberg.

Specific reference should be made to Carl Greenberg, Brienetsava 26, Apt. 11, Leningrad 195269, according to Lerner.

A similar campaign in 1975 was instrumental in inducing the Russian government to allow a Moscow couple to immigrate to Israel, Lerner said.

She also said that Greenberg's desire is to join members of his family now living in Israel.

Technical issue halts parking lot hearing

Giving technical grounds, the Springfield Planning Board last week declined to act on Union Investments' controversial application to construct a 25-car parking lot at 19 Colonial Terrace.

The Board of Adjustment meets regularly on the third Tuesday of each month — next on Dec. 18.

Mr. Green is survived by a brother, Walter Green.

Robert Welbeck and Mayor William Cleri, the Township Committee's representatives on the Planning Board, moved and seconded the unanimous decision to decline action on jurisdictional grounds.

Building Inspector Kolb said the next step is up to Union, which must go to the Board of Adjustment for a variance or a decision that a variance is not required.

The new high-yield, short-term certificate is yours at Investors Savings

1/4% MORE THAN U.S. TREASURY BILLS. 6-month maturity • Minimum $10,000 • Interest compounded continuously and payable at maturity • Limited Issue

Every once in a while an unusual opportunity occurs on the investment horizon. Such is the case with our new 6-month savings certificate. It pays you 1/4% more than the 6-month U.S. Treasury Bill average auction discount rate at the time you open your account. Although the effective yield (coupon equivalent) on T-Bills is higher than the discount rate, we pay 1/4% more than the discount rate and compound it continuously resulting in a higher yield at maturity than you can earn on T-Bills. These rates are unusually high right now, and we'll guarantee the rate plus 1/4% from the day you open your account through the full 6-month period. Withdrawals prior to maturity are not permitted. There are no commissions or added costs, and of course savings are insured to $40,000 by the FSLIC.

The State We're In

U.S. Conservation Foundation. The New Jersey Department of Energy has launched a program to collect and recycle used crankcase oil which energy environmentalists should applaud. Old motor oil, capable of being recycled for use again with important savings in dwindling petroleum supplies, represents a serious pollution threat if it gets into the environment. For one thing, used oil contains hydrocarbon compounds which are generally agreed, cause cancer. It is also toxic to various kinds of marine life and, by its presence on water, cuts off sunlight and photosynthesis action as well as degrading dissolved oxygen supplies. And if it gets into the environment, it can pollute water courses and ponds and lakes. What the Energy Department is doing is working to establish a widespread and consistent system of points where used motor oil can be deposited. From these places, it would be sent to the oil recycling chain through regular collection by people who buy and sell it. Collection depots could be garages, service stations or locations privately owned and maintained by interested groups, such as municipal environmental commissions.

Chinese hydroelectric power plant aided by American technology

American technology is helping to aid China to develop a self-sufficient, hydroelectric power project on the Yangtze River next year, according to Professor King C. Chen, professor of political science at Rutgers University. Begun 40 years ago, the project, "never got off the ground," Chen said. Now, with American help, he said, the Yangtze River project is expected to be completed and become a major energy source for China. Chen also reported that another group of United States experts will go to China in 1979 to organize and develop the vast coal reserves in Manchuria. Last summer, Chen said, four American companies were invited by China to advise the government on future oil exploration, including offshore drilling. Despite the sharp rise in Chinese interest in oil development, the United States at this time should not expect oil from China.

Harrison Williams

U.S. Senate. These days, when the dollar does not stretch as far as it used to and when inflation and taxes are main topics of discussion, everyone seems to aim their criticism at government programs and the "burgeoning bureaucracy." Sometimes I wish that for every complaint about over regulation and high taxes people could hear an equally compelling story about the government agencies that are doing a good job and making life a little better for Americans. I think it is imperative to look ahead, and consider the long term results of a program, rather than just what it means to your pocketbook today. For instance, job training programs, aid for the handicapped and elderly or drug abuse prevention programs are humane endeavors which will actually save money in the years to come by keeping people out of institutions and off the welfare rolls. Programs such as these help thousands of people remain contributing members of their communities.

The bionic mast with his mechanical parts may be last year's model. If research under way at the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey (CMDNJ) proves successful.

A multi-disciplinary team at the CMDNJ-Newark Medical School, Newark, has come up with a replacement for damaged tendons and ligaments which could make mere synthetic fibrous material, known as PLA-carbon, developed and currently under study in the medical school's laboratories, not only replace damaged tissue but serves as a "scaffold" around which new tissue can grow.
