Library memorial for Mary Manuel

Mary E. Manuel, former head of technical services and cataloger for more than 25 years at the Springfield Public Library, died this month at St. Barnabas Hospital.

The library will honor her by adding a revolving stand for jazz records in the adult section of the library. Donations from Mrs. Manuel's friends are being accepted for the stand, according to Helen Francis, director of the library.

Mrs. Manuel started her career as a library volunteer in 1950. The public library at that time was in the old Sarah Bailey House. It was later renovated to the present building which now serves as a civic center.

In 1964, she became a library employee and, in 1967, a certified professional librarian. Her library course work was done through the University of Minnesota, at the New Jersey College for Women, now Douglas College, where she majored in psychology and philosophy.

From the beginning of her career, Mrs. Manuel showed a particular interest and aptitude for cataloging, according to Helen Reyner, former library director. She was in charge of that work during her entire library career.

The library board of trustees cited her for her outstanding efficiency and conscientiousness on many occasions. Mrs. Manuel was one of the organizing members of the Chapter and Organizational Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR). Her activities in the DAR made her an invaluable resource on the history and activities of Springfield, according to a spokesperson for the DAR.

Francis noted that Mrs. Manuel also was a very well-informed jazz enthusiast. Mrs. Manuel resigned from the library in March because of ill health. The library board of trustees wrote her when she resigned that "we know that much of the continuity and the development of the library collection is due to your broad range of knowledge. Because of your meticulous concern with the card catalogue reflect our holdings faithfully, the citizens of Springfield are indebted to you for their ease in locating all kinds of material."

Mrs. Manuel is survived by her husband and Joseph Country Club Lane, Springfield; a son, Jeffrey; a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Harrison, and two grand-children.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at the funeral home of Dr. J. J. Gorman, 1000 N. 10th St., Springfield. Burial will be in the Garden of the Holy Spirit, 1000 N. 10th St., Springfield.

OPINION OURS, YOURS

Paths of history Letters

Every working person is entitled to a vacation—the longer and more glamorous the better. That is a simple proposition heavily endorsed by every worker. This year's problem is that there several auxiliary problems to aggravate the basic problem.

These are: a shortage of fuel and a patriotic obligation not to use a lot of it going any place, and a shortage of money in these inflationary times to do anything when we get there.

We therefore suggest several points of historic interest where we can go right in New Jersey.

An exciting trip for the office worker is to Broadway in Paterson. It was in a modest office building there in 1903 that the first office manager told the gang at the water cooler to break it up and get back to work.

There also is a marker along the beach just south of the Long Branch pier. This commemorates the day in 1897 when Henry Repple became the first person in U.S. history to lose a hairpiece in the surf.

The Jersey Shore is replete with places of national interest. There is the quiet Inlet just north of Wildwood where, in 1911, the first picnic luncheon was eaten by an alligator swept north from the Gulf Stream. Unfortunately, he was done in by some potato salad which had been standing too long in the sun.

Another instructive visit would be the beautiful forest just past Newton where 36 Boy Scouts, their scoutmaster and assistant scoutmaster got lost in 1922 while coming back from skinnydipping. They were rescued later that afternoon by a blindfolded bloodhound.

Then, for those families who have not had enough of historic New Jersey, there is the 18th Century mansion in Menham where George Washington did not sleep. It seems their daughter and her family were in for the week from Danbury, Conn., and there just was no more room.

Congressman

Rinaldo

A Federal Department of Energy survey showing that gasoline supplies should be abundant this summer is good news for motorists. The situation is due to cutting gasoline costs and a combination of factors that have served to stretch out supplies.

Americans are spared for energy far in excess of what seemed possible two years ago. In 1978, gasoline consumption was running at a time when the oil-producing countries (OPEC) were cutting production and hoarding prices.

Last year in New Jersey, gasoline consumption fell 10 percent as motorists cut down on driving, switched to smaller cars and became more conscious of the energy saving ethic that is taking root in America. The mild winter also helped to ease the fuel supply crunch that led to long gas lines last summer.

Although Congress has mandated more miles per gallon for automobiles, the manufacturers still have not approached the fuel efficiency standards that some foreign cars offer. In fact, the House Government Operations Sub-committee on Environment, Energy and Natural Resources found that the mileage claims of U.S. auto manufacturers are exaggerated and the most new cars sold in the U.S. do not meet the on-road fuel efficiency standards.

However, a combination of foreign competition and capital investment incentives is spurring the U.S. auto industry to design improved mileage cars that should start rolling off the assembly lines in 1991.

Enormous fuel savings also can be achieved in reshaping the nation's food distribution system. Each load of California lettuce delivered to New York and New Jersey costs an average 15 cents just to cover the costs of fuel for delivery. Food growing specialists claim that 75 percent of the fruits and vegetables consumed in the New York-New Jersey area can be grown locally during six months of the year.

If the trend continues, conservation may accelerate even more sharply in the decade ahead.

Letters to the editor must be received no later than 1 p.m. on the Friday preceding the date of the issue in which they are to appear. They should not exceed 300 words and should be typed with double spacing between all lines and all in capital letters, please. All letters must include a written signature, a complete address and a phone number (for verification purposes only). The writer's name will be withheld only in most unusual circumstances, and in the editor's discretion. This newspaper reserves the right to edit or reject any letter.

WHAT PRICE IT IS? The following letter was written to the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders:

With increasing frequency, I have been reading newspaper articles in which supposedly responsible Union County and City of Summit government officials are quoted as having said that it is right of the public to have to be about-to-be published environmental impact statement are approved, the State Homeowner and its land will be purchased and added to the County's Hidden Valley Park.

The impression given in the newspaper articles is that something is being worked out in an agreement between the county and the state.

These statements amaze me, because nobody has ever discussed these plans with us, and we are the owners of the Sayre Homestead.

As an historical landmark of Union County, the most unique asset of the Sayre Homestead is its setting. Overlooking a lake and surrounded by woodlands and the remains of the old Sayre estate, it is the only house of its vintage in the county which can give the visitor a sense of its original environment.

My husband and I are deeply interested in its future preservation. To use the Sayre Homestead as a park, the bargaining process which would leave it overlooking a highway is a travesty and a disgrace to the county.

We were greatly encouraged by a courageous stand taken by the Board of Freeholders in opposition to the Department of Transportation's plans which would ravish such a large part of the county's few remaining "wilderness" areas.

We feel opposition is important enough that it can cause the Department of Transportation to consider realistic alternatives instead of proposing those which were obviously designed to frighten and terrify the public.

Nearly 1000 New Jersey residents have applied for energy efficiency audits to cut down on residential waste of fuel. Heating and electric bills could be lowered by $3 billion a year through proper insulation.

Three years ago, Congress passed legislation to encourage more weatherization of homes. But so far, the Carter administration has been able to spend only one-third of the available $491 million on the program. Only 144,000 of 15 million qualified homes have been insulated.

Using federal funds to assist with the weatherization of eligible homes would cost an estimated $1.8 billion. Compare that with the $30 billion in federal subsidies for home heating assistance. Obviously, it makes more sense to concentrate on weatherization.

Reacting to higher fuel costs and to the national need to conserve, Americans overall are finally responding to the energy shortage.

Last year, energy consumption in the United States was 10 percent less than in 1973 in terms of the energy needed to produce each dollar of our gross national product. A year ago, during the short-term months of May and June, the supply of gasoline was running about 200 million gallons a day—about two gallons a day for every car and truck on the road. A year earlier, those vehicles had been using an average of 2.75 gallons a day.

Currently, the supply of gasoline is only about 280 million gallons a day, and the number of cars has increased. The statistics through early May of this year indicate that Americans are now using about 1.8 gallons a day for each vehicle. The typical motorist now buys five gallons for every six bought two years ago.

If the trend continues, conservation may accelerate even more sharply in the decade ahead.

IT'S BEEN LIKE THIS EVER SINCE THE GAS SHORTAGE.

Rules offered on house buying and on avoiding a foreclosure

By JUDITH G. RHODES In the county where I live, there have been scores of foreclosures on houses. Statistically, the occurrence of a foreclosure is five to seven more likely because of lack of income rather than death. Should you not have disability insurance, you definitely should consider buying it as a homeowner or potential homeowner. Your insurance should include a feature that provides an automatic increase each year to help keep pace with the rising value in property.

Since many people are considering the purchase of a new home, you might keep these suggestions in mind: 1. Find a reputable real estate agent. 2. Learn property values so that when it comes time to buy, you will be familiar with the prices of the area you are considering.

3. Make certain your credit is adequate through pre-qualifying. 4. Know the new rights and your rights when you apply for a loan. 5. Don't figure your finances so closely that you are without an emergency cushion.

6. Don't sign any document until you have read it thoroughly. 7. Don't forget to add taxes and insurance when calculating your monthly outlay.

8. Consider settling for less than your dream house on your first purchase. Look at it as an investment toward your dream home. 9. When looking at model homes, remember you are getting the bare bones house, not the professionally decorated one.

10. Prepare a list of reasonable features you feel you must have in a house and take it with you when intake hunting. 11. When purchasing an old house, check the age of the house, the condition of the plumbing, major appliances, especially the water heater, the roof, and the storm drainage system. 12. Don't be afraid to ask questions and continue asking until you receive an answer that satisfies you.

Q. What does it mean to register a security?—V.N., Springfield, Ill. A. There are two different meanings when discussing registering a security. Registering a security which is sold to the public means that the corporation or underwriter is prepping the prospectus in which the company can tell all interested parties that it has decided to go public.

Registering a security also means without any political interference. That sounds like a good way to get things done, and it is. Unfortunately, it also is a way of getting wrong things done right before our eyes. If fate and an authority take that direction.

Political authorities like the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, for just one classic example, can and frequently do run with their own momentum, passing their own bad interests. The same applies to sewer authorities, which have a way of constantly looking for new business.

Now, think of an authority getting established to control the fate of toxic wastes in New Jersey. It would be empowered to not decisively get things done, but it would be almost out of reach of public inputs on how it does these things. People could complain, but the authority's listening could be nothing more than symbolic.

There is something basically dangerous about an army of government which is not easily accountable to the public it serves. With elected officials, who can have their own set of problems, at least the people can get their own revenue bonds without overburdening everybody with new taxes (although in the final analysis, we wind up paying somehow, anyway) and because they can do their own thing.

Generally, legislation which is being spurred by shocking realizations of environmental rot in this state we're in is intelligent, and properly addresses the overall situation. Except that I'm afraid the pendulum effect may lock us into a situation which in the long run could tend to defend the overall goals of needed new legislation.

The Byrnie administration's bill to create the mechanism for coping with swamps for and about toxic and hazardous wastes.

The pendulum effect is my name for that familiar phenomenon, the politician suddenly galvanized into action by a need—selected or "strategic" electorate. Where he formerly did nothing, now he's liable to do other too much, or perhaps the wrong thing, in this state, visibly do something.

In the context of toxic wastes, which is the context in which New Jersey is coming to be identified, the pendulum effect can be noted now around the State House in Trenton as officialdom, elected and appointed, sets forth to do something.

Tynan profiles quintet of famous entertainers

By ROSE P. SIMON
The Springfield Public Library lists the following titles among the recently-received books.

TYNAN'S FIVE FAVORITES

By Kenneth Tynan
The author has selected five of his favorite people in the entertainment world as subjects for profiles. His "Show People" series consists of five books: "Show People," "The Show People," "The Show People," "The Show People," and "The Show People."

Richardson rose to stardom as a versatile, dependable, constantly surprising performer. According to John Gielgud, "He prepares his work with the utmost intensity." Stoppard, Czech emigre to England, is one of its "cool, apolitical stylists," professing no certainty about anything. Among his works are: "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead," "Jumpers," "Travesties" and "Every Good Boy Deserves Favors."

In Israel, Bove has seen proof that success is attainable—if we are willing to assume the $22 billion price tag (over a period of 10 years); to pursue our failing efforts will cost us more than $10 billion annually. His plan offers five steps to achieve the overall solution to the "problem of disability," linking all four problems. These steps must all be taken together.

The author reviews the development in specific areas of disability: spinal cord injury, blindness, deafness, amputation, speech impairment, mental retardation. He offers suggestions for change and the necessary removal of barriers to achieve it. Educational and vocational rehabilitation programs are discussed, and organization of "cohort" groups are proposed.

By Kay Shaw Nelson
While living and traveling in various lands, Nelson learned a great deal about one-dish cookery, much of it having evolved over the centuries, flavored by national tastes. Ingredients are not unusual, and are mainly moderately priced; directions for preparation are which may be rounded out with a salad and a simple dessert.

Each category is introduced by relevant historical and background material, and helpful suggestions are made on preparation and cooking. The origin of sandwiches goes back to centuries ago, when slabs of bread were used instead of plates. Since then they have taken many unique forms, and are extremely popular for numerous occasions. They are easy to make, nutritious, attractive and inexpensive.

Soups (age-old favorites) are also traced back to the Biblical reference "a potage of lentils." Curries, associated with the East, consist of native spices, herbs, seeds, combined with meat, poultry, seafood, vegetables, and eggs. Malaysia, Pakistan, Indonesia, Maldives, South Africa, Bengal, Georgia, Madras and Australia all represented.

MEXICO'S FOREMOST POET
"A Draft of Shadows."
By Octavio Paz
While Paz and his Mexican ambassador to India (1962-1963) he wrote some of the poems in Part I of this collection. The second section contains poems written when he returned to Mexico, after an absence of several years. These represent his disappointment and disgust upon seeing the deterioration of Mexico City. In Part III the poet meditates on his childhood and adolescence, and in Part IV he offers his most recent poems. This is a bilingual presentation of some of the poems of Mexico's foremost poet and essayist.

The following are excerpts of pieces from Part I: "The world, a double blossom, opens its petals of having come. Joy of being here" and "The sky took out its braids and its braids were unraveled rivers/ the rivers swallowed villages, death and life were jumbled." Part II: "Syllables are incoherent. And they are plants: their roots fracture—silence—their branches/built houses of sound."

By Frank Bove
None of our present government methods have had any impact upon existing problems: "those of ever-rising inflation, persistent poverty, increasing burdensome government, and the growing longevity of our people." Dr. Bove's goal has been to find a way "toward independence for 38 million disabled and elderly people," to be able to work, to become at least partially self-sustaining contributors to our economy. He asserts that he has found no panacea, but he believes that he has discovered a logical starting point.

State drop is noted

During the last decade, the number of New Jersey residents employed in blue collar jobs fell by 81,000 or 7.3 percent, Samuel M. Ehrenhalt, regional commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, told the Management Conference at Seton Hall University, South Orange, during the same period, Ehrenhalt indicated, the number of persons employed in white collar and service jobs rose 560,000 or 33.1 percent. Ehrenhalt said nationally the number of employed in blue collar jobs rose 3.8 million or 13.6 percent, in the white collar and service sectors, the increase was 15.8 million or 24.1 percent. Ehrenhalt attributed the contrasting pattern of employment change in blue collar jobs to differences in employment trends in goods-producing industries. Between 1969 and 1979, he indicated, the employment in New Jersey's goods-producing industries dropped 5.5 percent, largely in the state's manufacturing sector which declined to 800,000 jobs in 1979. Nationally goods-producing employment was up 0.1 percent over the decade. Ehrenhalt pointed out that the drop in the proportion of those employed in blue collar jobs in New Jersey, from nearly two in five a decade ago to less than one of three in 1979, was greater than the national. For the nation as a whole, the proportion of those employed in blue collar jobs declined from 36.2 percent to 32.1 percent over the decade. In New Jersey, the decline was from 39.4 percent to 31.2 percent between 1969 and 1979. A longer term look at New Jersey and national industry employment trends also reflects the relative weakness in the state's goods-producing sector. Between 1969 and 1979, he indicated, the state's goods-producing sector grew 136 percent nationally, lagged behind the national. In contrast, he noted that government

Jobless rate drops for area

Ehrenhalt, regional commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The April 1980 jobless rate for the area was 6.7 percent to 7.0 percent.

MODERN CANDY INDUSTRY

The beginning of the modern candy industry occurred in 1470 in Venice when a candy maker learned to refine sugar. In American Colonial times the colonists used maple tree sap to make sugar, thus providing candy for the people.
