A Springfield family puts the sun to work

A Springfield woman plans to cut her bill by one-third to one-half with a hot water system she installed in her Hawthorne Avenue residence last month.

The system, consisting of three solar collectors on the roof facing south, a "closed loop" which includes a pump, a thermal storage tank and a flow regulator, and a three-inch storage tank to hold the hot water.

It requires little maintenance. The solar collectors on the roof may have to be cleaned once a year, and the anti-freeze in the "closed loop" portion of the system should be checked, but requires little maintenance. The system is expected to last 20 to 25 years, Wenzel said.

She energy "in the way we're all saving money," he said. "Not only our household, according to him."

The Weiszes, however, appear to be more concerned about energy than the average citizen. They burn wood all winter, and the house is well insulated, according to John Wenzel, president of Solar-Eco Controls, manufacturer of the system.

Overall, it will provide about 65 to 75 percent of the Weiszes' hot water needs during the summer, but less during the winter, he said. The cost of the system, according to John Wenzel, president of Solar-Eco Controls, manufacturer of the system.

The hot water system will provide 95 percent of the Weiszes' hot water needs during the summer, but less during the winter, he said. That includes a dishwasher, a washing machine and enough hot water for daily showers for four adults and one infant, Shirey said.

"We haven't run out of hot water yet," he said.

However, during a rainy spell or the winter, the Weiszes will turn back to oil.

Using a relatively inexpensive system, Mr. and Mrs. Weiss saved more money on its installation with a $400 rebate from the Department of Energy and the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). They also get a tax credit of the HUD.

Students excel on skills tests

Students in the ninth and 11th grades in Union County regional high schools scored above state minimum achievement levels in both reading and math, the spokesman said. The minimum levels are 75 percent correct on the reading tests and 60 percent right on the math exams.

The percentages of students at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, Springfield, scoring above the state minimum were: ninth-grade, 82.2 percent in reading and 60.2 percent in math; 11th-grade, 90.5 percent in reading and 64.7 percent in math.

Playgrounds get a fast start in hot weather

By CRAIG CLICKENGER

The first week of Springfield summer playgrounds was ushered in by a scorching summer heat. Rather, activity and enthusiasm abounded on the part of counselors and participants in five-area parks. Familiar games, pastimes and sports were rejuvenated, enhancing the summer excitement for many local youngsters.

ALVIN PARK

The children, who also play such as Miss Zoli, Marlene Rivera, Adelle Catullo and Nicole Picciuto, add much enthusiasm to the park.

The children, enjoy playing basketball, soccer, volleyball, kickball, tennis, different-type games, like Burger and Freddy Tellez said state that, "Rock-hockey" is our favorite sport. Age and size are not important, but skill is.

Recent events included a bicycle grand prix, Medina. The children were asked to decorate their bicycles creatively and enter them in the race.

COHEN PARK

David Williams, Rosalie Buffa, Anita Perez, Jeffrey Clark and Steven Seltzer, who are all from Cohen Park, were doing art and crafts, the rest of the children were playing kickball.

Team One consisted of David Salazar, Barbara Rodriguez, Anthony Hefner, Nicholas Cicaliello, Dan Brooks, Jeffrey Brooks and David Bernick.

Their opponents were Clark Clement, Michael, Mark, Michael, Michael, Michael Lekakis and Anthony Braga.

OPINIONS—OURS, YOURS

Cause for thanks

While the town is still basking in the success of the many and various observances of the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Springfield, this is the time to express thanks for the entire community, the many men and women who worked so hard and so well to make everything happen so smoothly.

Madeleine Lancaster and Jerry Cohen were the "commanding generals," and richly merit credit who have received Bob D'Amato's support in his efforts to the beaches and is to a great measure responsible for the parkland turned in by many committee members. Terry and Martin Shuss were in charge of the ethnic heritage festival which added a special touch, refreshness and variety to the weekend's schedule.

Thanks also are due to the many municipal staff members who worked far beyond the call of duty to make the commemoration weekend a spectacular success, and particularly to the members of the Police Reserve who kept all the wheels rolling smoothly.

The community also owes its thanks to the War for Independence buffs who came from half the country to provide the realism which characterized the battle re-enactment.

There are many other members of the local committees whom we have overlooked and who deserve an equal share of the credit! To them also go our thanks, and our apologies.

The entire town helped, with its support in so many ways and with its participation. For this once, let us all share in the pleasant feeling of success.

Have a safe 4th

A press release, which crossed our desk earlier this week, brought a cloud over our Impending Fourth of July holiday.

Barry H. Dolich, MD, an assistant clinical professor of plastic surgery at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City, reminded us that safety should be on our minds:

"More than 40 percent of the reported firecracker-related accidents involve youngsters under 15 years of age. One suggestion is to explain to children that firecrackers really are small bombs, which may explode in their hands. Explosion wounds can destroy tissue from a considerable distance."

Should such a wound occur, take any dismembered part and place it in a carefully sealed plastic bag. Place the bag in a container filled with cold water and bring it to the hospital. The dismembered part must not come in contact with the water as additional damage probably will occur.

In the event of a less serious accident, seek prompt medical attention. Bits of unignited powder and debris must be thoroughly cleaned from the wound to prevent infections and scars.

Barbecue accidents are often too common, and usually are caused by carelessness. Never add a starter fluid to a burning fire, since one ember is enough to ignite the stream back to the can of fluid. When that happens, often the can becomes a bomb and explodes.

If this does happen, throw a blanket on the victim to smother the flames. Take the person to a hospital as quickly as possible.

For minor burns, such as those caused by touching a hot grill, soak the hand in cold water—notice, since the extreme temperature may cause tissue damage. After cooling, wash with soap and water, apply an antibiotic ointment and a dressing and keep it clean.

Camping offers its own set of hazards: knives, hatchets, shell or glass-lined swimming areas, to mention a few.

In most cases, a thorough cleaning of the wound with an antiseptic and the application of a bandage will suffice. If, however, bleeding is excessive, elevate the extremity and apply pressure with a clean cloth. Seek medical help immediately.

Indications that what seemed to be a minor cut is more serious include numbness and difficulty in moving the injured part. The injury might include nerve or tendon damage, and a doctor should be consulted immediately.

Puncture wounds require a thorough cleaning by a trained professional and may require tetanus shot.

Fish hooks can sometimes be removed by pushing the hook in the same direction it went in. When the barb, the pointed tip of the hook, appears, snip it off with wire cutters and pull the hook out. If the hook proves difficult to remove, leave it in place and seek an emergency room doctor.

Although not mentioned by the doctor, we are aware of the dead-injury that will probably take place on our highways.

As the doctor points out, we should all know by now, most of these accidents are caused by carelessness. Let's all be a little more cautious and have a good Fourth of July, 1980.

Watching Reservation and its imposing serenity will have a fighting chance to escape the intrusion of bulldozers and concrete involved in the planned highway expansion. I am not the only one who feels this way. In this crucial time, I'd like to express my view of opposition to the project while having a fighting chance that someone will listen. The final Environmental Impact Statement has been sent some time ago and is awaiting federal authorities for approval.

Instead of expounding on the multitude of strong technical reasons for opposing the highway, I am now dealing with the issues on a more general and reflective level. I'd like to quote Harry David Truman, whose philosophy I believe to be more pertinent today than when he lived over a century ago: "If a man walks in the woods for love of them, half of each day, he is in danger of being eaten by a bear." I believe that if we do not oppose this highway for a much, much longer time, we will be in danger of being eaten by a bear.

The little tells us, "You must shall inherit the earth." I wonder what will be left if after the speculators have had their fill? It won't be worth it to live there if we have to breathe the air that won't fit to drink. If there aren't any woods in which to walk, and if the cities are utter deserts, what then?

The question is often asked, "Should the highway be completed through the Reservation?" The answer is, "No." We must not let the highway be completed through the Reservation. A common reply is, "Well, you can't stop progress."

What about progress? I ask myself, "Is this progress?" Is technological progress the only kind important to our society? Are we concerned only with making life easier, faster and more convenient? Is progress the right of ignorance and denial?

The question is often asked, "Should the highway be completed through the Reservation?" The answer is, "No." We must not let the highway be completed through the Reservation. A common reply is, "Well, you can't stop progress."

What about progress? I ask myself, "Is this progress?" Is technological progress the only kind important to our society? Are we concerned only with making life easier, faster and more convenient? Is progress the right of ignorance and denial?

Homeowners urged to prevent burglary

"There is no such thing as a 'burglar-proof' home, but there are certain precautions that citizens can take to minimize the chance of being burglarized," says Capt. Thomas Nowelsky of the Union Township Police Crime Prevention Unit.

Colonel Clinton Pagan, state police superintendent, said, "A New Jersey homeowner should average at least one burglar alarm per house. About half of many of these burglaries occur during the summer months when families are away on vacation or traveling."

Pagan listed several precautions for homeowners:

1-Close and lock all doors, including porch, basement and garage. Use pin and tumbler cylinder locks on outside doors.

2-Connect a lamp to an automatic timer to turn lights on the home on and off each evening. Since sound is a trigger, connect a radio or TV to a timer so it can be turned on and off without leaving an inexpensive, portable burglar alarm that sounds whenever someone attempts to break in.

3-Install motion sensors and with outdoor lights to prevent the burglar from knowing that an attempted burglary would be seen. These lights can also be timer-controlled, if desired.

4-Leave all screens fastened from the inside.

5-Never leave valuables lying around; keep them in a safety deposit box.

6-Hire your police department with the help of a burglar alarm service to have it sent to your vacation address.

7-Have your post office hold all mail until your return.

8-Cancel all deliveries such as laundry, cleaning. Also, be sure to cancel the newspaper delivery or arrange to have it sent to your vacation address.

9-Have your neighbors and friends as you normally do. Closed blinds keep the sun out, but also make an effective screen for the burglar.

10-Advertise your departure and destination is dependent upon the actual location of an area of the involved public. Knowledgeable fundamental techniques of home protection will help reduce the 117,244 burglary offenses committed in New Jersey last year.

Engineering course offers a head start

On a local level, Nowelsky urged Union residents to call the Crime Prevention Unit at police headquarters (688-0700, ext. 260) if they want a crime prevention expert to help them.

"We'll send a crime prevention specialist who will make suggestions to the homeowner as to steps that can be taken to lower the risk of becoming a victim of a crime," Nowelsky said.

"There is no charge for the service and the suggestions are binding."

Nowelsky pointed out that Union is especially susceptible to burglaries because it is a "corridor community."

"People are more inclined to travel to many roads in this area like Routes 22, 23 and 74 and the Parkway," Nowelsky noted.

"These kits are available to citizens. These kits contain decals, markers and a registered number which can aid police in the recovery of a burglary victim's stolen property."

The program is being coordinated with the Union County Vocational Center.
