Taxes pile up Town seeking $190,000

By VICTORIA VREELAND

Another year of delinquent tax bills accumulated in the Springfield Tax Collector's office as tax appeals filed by East Coast Condo Tech, the owner of Troy Hills Village Condominiums, remain in litigation.

According to Township Attorney Anthony D'Alessio, a number of other matters involving the township and East Coast have been consolidated into one Superior Court suit.

Corinne Eckmann, tax collector, reports East Coast has outstanding taxes of about $190,000 for the years 1982, 1983 and 1984.

Recently, East Coast received a court order signed by Superior Court Judge Milton Feller to prohibit its properties from going on tax sale for 1983.

According to Eckmann, some tax payments were received for 1983 and 1984 when the township obtained a court order to require the owners to pay a tax surcharge, received from tenants, directly to the township.

In June 1983, the Township Committee revised its rent control ordinance to eliminate tax surcharges, but to allow for annual maximum increases of 7.5 percent.

The ordinance is one of the issues which East Coast is challenging in Superior Court. According to Morris Schnitzer, attorney for East Coast, the ordinance is unconstitutional because it doesn't allow a fair return on the property.

Schnitzer said the 1.5 percent increase from the former 6 percent allowable annual increase does not compensate for the loss of the tax surcharges to cover annual tax increases.

The suit was delayed while the owners applied to the Rent Leveling Board for a hardship increase. The increase was denied by the board, whose decision was upheld by the township committee in October. The members of the committee unanimously agreed that the hardship factor was not proven.

The denial of the hardship increase is another issue in the suit, D'Alessio said.

As of Feb. 1, tax records indicate that East Coast is six months delinquent on tax payments on some of its units. In similar situations, the Township Committee has appointed Eckmann "collector of rents."

Eckmann said taxes from Troy Village became delinquent when the present owners bought the complex from Troy Ltd. in 1981, the same time the property was converted to condominiums and the township

Man hurt in air crash

A Springfield resident who was injured in a private plane crash Sunday was listed in fair condition Tuesday in the Somerset Medical Center, Somerville.

Warren Mischler, 44, of Lang Terrace, suffered two broken ankles and facial lacerations when his single-engine Cessna 182 crashed shortly after takeoff from Kupper Airport, Hillsborough, about 3:30 p.m. according to Lawrence Moody, of the Bureau of Inspection and Aircraft Operations, N.J. Division of Aeronautics. Mischler was the only person in the aircraft.

Moody said there is "no determination yet" as to what caused the accident, but he added that a number of factors are being considered.

Officer cleared in shooting

Members of a county grand jury who reviewed the November shooting of a Scotch Plains man by a Springfield patrolman decided last week there was no evidence to indict the officer, according to police.

Patrolman Jeffrey Vreeland shot Paul Myska, 20, on Briar Hills Circle after an extensive automobile chase in which Myska allegedly tried to run down Vreeland.

Myska was shot near the left shoulder and hospitalized for a week in Overlook Hospital, Summit.

For one thing, Moody said, there was "an indication of snow on the wing."

"Witnesses seem to think the engine was running alright," he said.

According to Moody, Mischler's plane had reached a height of about 75 to 100 feet when difficulties apparently began. The plane reportedly dipped to the left as it began to descend. It crashed in a field, still on airport property.

Moody said the National Transportation Safety Board, Washington, D.C., will conduct a "paper" investigation of the FAA's district investigation. Results will not be known for about three months, Moody said.

Myska was indicted by a grand jury Jan. 3 which charged him with two counts of third-degree aggravated assault, one count of fourth-degree assault, possession of a controlled dangerous substance and resisting arrest.

According to William Daniel, assistant Union County prosecutor, a pre-trial conference for Myska will be held in Superior Court Law Division March 4. At that time, a trial date will be set, Daniel said.

Right-to-know supporters plan action

By KETHE A. DRUMBORE

Proponents of the recently watered-down New Jersey "Right-to-Know" law have decided to take a new route to get to manufacturing firms—a route that, if successful, would make local governments and residents aware of just what manufacturers are doing in their towns.

State Sen. Daniel J. Dalton, D-4, said legislation is currently being put together that would require all manufacturers to provide local government agencies, particularly police and fire departments, with a list of on-site chemicals and materials.

The manufacturers would also be required to provide that same information to community residents, Dalton said.

No date has been set as to when the proposed law will be presented to the Legislature, he said.

Dalton is the author of the revised "Right-to-Know" law, which went into effect Aug. 28, and was considered to be the toughest state employee-awareness law of the 16 on the books at that time.

The law required that nearly 43,000 New Jersey employers submit reports by Feb. 15 to the state Health Department's Occupational Health Program, the state Department of Environmental Protection, county health departments and local health, police and fire departments on any use of 2,000 substances that the state considered hazardous.

The substances were listed in a 144-page book that was provided to each employer.

The substances were categorized as either carcinogenic (cancer-causing chemicals); mutagenic (causing physical change in chromosome relationships or fundamental changes in genes); teratogenic (causing abnormalities in growth or structure); fourth-degree flammable; third-degree flammable; fourth-degree reactive; third-degree reactive; second-degree reactive and corrosive.

Examples ran from such common substances as coal dust, ammonia, and silver to more uncommon substances as nitrogen mustard and trimethylhexamethylenediamine.

Employers were required to clearly identify and label all containers holding these substances. If an employer was unable to identify the substances in any material or chemical, he had six months to investigate and properly label the containers.

Employers also had to provide training programs by March 1, that would inform employees on the correct handling procedures for hazardous substances and to make copies of the submitted reports available to employees on request.

The law referred to both manufacturing and non-manufacturing firms, and covered an estimated 1.2 million employees.

The purpose of the reports was to protect the health of both the public and employees by making them aware of possible exposure to these substances.

According to 1984 state Health Department estimates, 1,200 New Jerseyans are diagnosed as cancer patients annually as a result of exposure to workplace chemicals and another 1,300 are hospitalized.

President Applebaum treats two positions very seriously

By VICTORIA VREELAND

Stuart Applebaum takes his job as president of the Springfield Board of Education very seriously. But there's something else he considers equally important, and that is his commitment to retarded citizens.

Applebaum was elected president of the Essex Unit of the New Jersey Association for Retarded Citizens in June for a two-year term. He joined the organization about six years ago at the request of a friend, and got hooked.

Unlike other members, Applebaum did not join because of a personal experience with retardation, but rather on account of being blessed with so-called "normalcy."

When he originally agreed to serve on the Essex Unit's board of directors, Applebaum admits he did not know what he was getting into.

One day, he heard that the Canton Club, one of the social groups of the organization, was having an outing at Taylor Park in Millburn.

Applebaum went to the park, along with his two children, to observe the group's activities. Once there, he found himself standing alone while his kids dashed to join a ballgame in progress.

Applebaum said the experience was a revelation for him. He was both happy and surprised that his children didn't shun the "abnormalities" of the retarded children. Instead, they were oblivious to any differences as they laughed and ran about.

From that moment, the pleasantly surprised father pledged to work for the rights of the retarded. The first step was to become a member of the Essex Unit. He has since been elected to the board of directors and is currently serving as president.

Applebaum was elected to the board of directors last fall, he was elected president of the board.

plan to help others, has helped himself. "It's self-gratifying. I like doing something for someone other than myself."

Evidently, Applebaum's wife shares her husband's philosophy. Randi Applebaum belongs to the "Candle Lighters," a fund-raising organization for the retarded citizens association.

At a young age, Applebaum was already planning to be a civic-minded, successful family man. He got married and went to college after three years in the Navy. He graduated with a business degree.

Applebaum laughs when he recalls that his son went to his college graduation.

After college, he joined an insurance agency in Millburn and seven years later, bought it and became president. He's been in the business 15 years and employs his wife as office manager.

He and Randi live in an apartment in the "Five and a Half" town before they were able to afford their first home in Springfield in 1978.

A year and a half ago, they moved to a larger home on Millburn Road. Applebaum did not waste any time before he got involved in municipal affairs. He served on the board of directors of the Millburn Rotary Club.

Applebaum was elected to the board of directors last fall, he was elected president of the board.

He also served as president of the got involved with the Essex Unit. "Somebody else can do the job that I did there, I get more self-satisfaction out of doing this," he says.

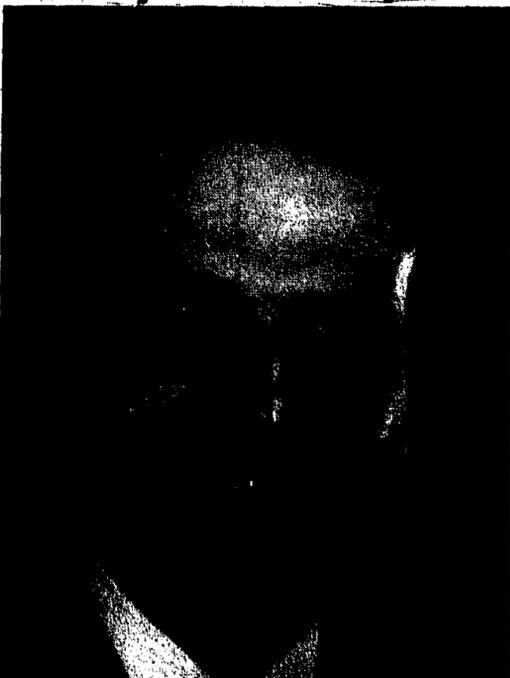

Applebaum enjoys living in Springfield because of the township's diversity. "There is a good young constituency and some great seniors." He plans to stay involved in the community, "but only if people think I have a contribution to make. I don't want to be active just to be there."

Between school board matters, his business, and work for retarded citizens, it doesn't seem like there would be much time for the Applebaum family. Apparently, they understand.

"My wife and kids are the rudder that guides me. They keep things in perspective," he says.

Applebaum realizes that it will be a long haul before his association can reach and aid the entire retarded population. He believes that once the public's perception of retardation is broadened, there will be more acceptance and financial help for its victims.

"First, we have to make the public aware that retarded people who need help are out there, and second, we have to let them know they are not a threat."

STUART APPLEBAUM

Probe centers on resolutions

By TIMOTHY OWENS

An investigation by the prosecutor's office of alleged improprieties on the part of the Union County council centers on five resolutions adopted by the county Board of Chosen Freeholders.

The allegations of improprieties, made by County Manager Louis J. Coletti, concern County Counsel Robert C. Doherty's handling of the resolutions to appropriate funds. Coletti, in a letter to County Prosecutor John Stamler dated Jan. 24 and made public late last week, alleged that the resolutions were not reviewed by the county's finance office.

The resolutions, the latest of which was approved by the freeholder board last July 12, include a $30,000 appropriation for the ad-hoc committee on John E. Runnells Hospital, a $13,100 appropriation to Memorial General Hospital (MGH) in Union for the development of a long-range plan, a resolution to retain a firm to conduct an audit of the county purchasing department, a $45,500 appropriation to retain MGH for consulting services, and a resolution authorizing budget transfers of certain appropriations.

In the letter, Coletti alleged that the failure to send the resolutions through the proper channels could possibly violate the county's administrative code.

Stamler was unavailable for comment Tuesday. Assistant Prosecutor Richard Rodbari, in answer to inquiries regarding how long the investigation might take and what penalties could be involved for violations of the county's administrative code, would only say that "the matter is under review."

Doherty said that he didn't know why he had been singled out by Coletti, but that he had "a lot of suspicions."

"It is one of those political things," Doherty said. "I have a political position and I have to expect that things like this will occur."

Noting that the allegations involved "administrative procedures," the counsel said, "nothing criminal is involved here."

He called the allegations "totally surprising," Doherty said that when he was informed of the prosecutor's investigation, "You could have knocked me over with a feather."

He added that he was considering filing a defamation suit against Coletti, "unless there is a public relation," but would not act until the prosecutor's investigation is concluded. He said that he is optimistic about the result of the investigation. "I have nothing to fear."

Doherty, whose term as county counsel expires next year, was appointed to the post in January 1981

Dems' caucus slated Feb. 20

Union County Democrats will hold a caucus at 8 p.m. Feb. 20 to elect delegates to a gubernatorial-year party conference in Atlantic City March 3-5.

Though the delegates will be chosen by the county committeemen and women, County Chairman Anthony Amalfie said that the meeting, at the Polish National Home at 300 Roselle St., Linden, will be open to the public.

Union County will send 72 district delegates and 24 delegates at large to the state conference, which is expected to consider a platform for the 1985 election as well as candidates for the party nomination for governor.

Some potential gubernatorial candidates also are expected to attend the county caucus, Amalfie said.

Additional information on the state conference, which will be held at Resorts International, and on the delegate selection process is available from the Union County Democratic Committee, 289-8406, or Kate Litvack at State Democratic Headquarters, 1-609-399-3387.

reassessed the property at $16,948,900—more than doubling its former value.

East Coast initiated appeals in state Tax Court which are still outstanding.

According to Edward Rosenblum, the township's attorney in the tax court cases, East Coast was an appeal for 1981 because the court ruled the conversion was protected under the Freeze Act of 1979.

The Freeze Act states that a judgment by a tax court shall be binding on the municipality for the assessment year and for two years following it, except in cases where the value of the property is changed after the assessment.

According to tax records, the Troy Hills property was valued at about $7.5 million at the time of the township's last revaluation in 1974. Troy L.I.D. appealed the assessment, and in 1979, it was awarded a $1 million deduction.

Because of the '79 ruling, under the Freeze Act, Troy's assessment had to remain at $6.6 million for that year and the two following years.

In 1981, following the conversion which divided the property into 342 separate units, the township reassessed the property at $16,948,900—more than doubling its former value.

Schultz said his client has not offered a "formal appraisal" of its share of the property's worth. He said East Coast has asked for a reduction, "based on the triple value ratio."

In 1982, the company was awarded $100,000 less, and as a result of the 1981 appeal, tax appeals for 1982, 1983 and 1984 are pending.

A major portion of the current litigation involves about 75 senior citizens at Troy Village who are still in rental units. According to Leonard Zucker, attorney for the tenants association at Troy Village, the seniors are protected under the "Protective Tenancy Act," which was enacted in July 1981.

The state's Protective Tenancy Act for senior citizens and the disabled provides that anyone who is totally or permanently disabled, or over the age of 62, who has lived on the premises two years prior to the conversion and who makes one-third less than the average county income, can remain on the premises for 40 years.

Originally, 142 tenants filed the suit, but at the time of trial, the number had dwindled to less than 100 because of residents who moved, died, or purchased their condominiums.

The tenants were represented by the state public advocate and an assistant state attorney general who were involved because of the national precedents of the case.

The seniors lost their first round in federal district court where a judge ruled that the Protective Tenancy Act was not applicable because it was enacted after the conversion.

However, they were victorious on an appeal in the U.S. District Court of Appeals when the court ruled that the law, passed about five months after the conversion, could be made retroactive.

According to tax records, the Troy Hills property was valued at about $7.5 million at the time of the township's last revaluation in 1974. Troy L.I.D. appealed the assessment, and in 1979, it was awarded a $1 million deduction.

Because of the '79 ruling, under the Freeze Act, Troy's assessment had to remain at $6.6 million for that year and the two following years.

In 1981, following the conversion which divided the property into 342 separate units, the township

Zucker said the seniors who did not qualify under the protective tenancy act will be leaving in April when a four-year grace period expires.

East Coast is also challenging the constitutionality of the state protective tenancy act.

According to Schultz, his concerns are whether his client has been denied a constitutional guarantee for a fair return on its property by the township committee, the rent leveling board and by the retroaction of protective tenancy act and its rent control clause.

The trial on the consolidated matters is expected to be held in June.

Board discusses programs

The Springfield Board of Education was expected to discuss a number of proposed new programs at its conference meeting last night, according to Board President Stuart Applebaum.

One of the programs scheduled for discussion, after-school enrichment, has been proposed by parents, and if approved, will be sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association.

Applebaum said that primarily arts courses will be offered with a fee, but final details have not been resolved.

The board was also expected to discuss a final discussion of participation in the Middle States Evaluation program. Applebaum said the district's membership in the program is expected to be approved at the regular meeting Wednesday.

Other discussion items were to include a proposed revision to substitute teachers' pay after 20 days of service and the appointment of a consultant to formulate a revised master plan for the district.

Applebaum said the proposed increase for substitutes will be for one-to-hundredth of the base teachers' salary.

He expected the board to develop a resolution concerning the district's policy and involvement in cases of missing children. He also expected staffing additions for the 1985-86 school year would be discussed.

Police tips for parents

The Springfield Police Department has issued a set of safety tips for parents designed to protect children at home and away from home. Police said parents should instruct their children:

- To memorize their name and address, including city and state.
- To memorize their phone number, including area code.
- To use lock publication and dial telephones to make emergency local and long distance calls and to reach the operator.
- To check in with you or a neighbor immediately after arriving home.
- To never go into your home if a door is ajar or a window is broken.
- How to work your home's door and window locks and to lock them when they're home alone.
- How to get out of the home quickly in case of fire.
- How to answer the doorbell and telephone when they're home alone.
- Not to go into anyone else's home without your permission.
- Never to go anywhere with another adult, even one who says you have sent him or her. Adopt a family code word to be used if you have to ask a third party to pick up your children.
- That a stranger is someone neither you nor they know well.
- That if they feel they're being followed, either on foot or by car, to run to the nearest public place, neighbor, or "Safe house."

Tax aid for elderly available

Tax counseling for the elderly and Volunteer Income Tax Assistance will be offered at the Springfield Library beginning Monday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and continuing March 4, 11, 18 and 25, and April 1, 8 and 12.

Trained volunteers will help individuals age 60 and older in preparing their tax returns. There is no charge for this service.

Persons desiring assistance with their federal and state income tax returns should make an appointment by calling the Springfield Library at 376-4930 during library hours, noon to 9 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. Taxpayers availing themselves of this service are requested to bring a copy of their 1983 tax return together with their W-2 and 1099 forms.

Woman is charged with theft of purse

A 24-year-old Middlesex woman was arrested last week after she allegedly stole a pocketbook, which contained a checkbook, and then attempted to cash one of the checks, Springfield police said.

Marianna Natioli was charged with theft, receiving stolen property and carrying a dangerous weapon.

According to Detective Sgt. William Chisholm, Natioli allegedly stole a pocketbook from an employee in World of Tite, Route 22, at about 3:30 p.m., and then crossed the street to the United Counties Trust Company, where she attempted to cash a check in the purse.

Natioli was released in the custody of the Union County chief probation officer.

Richard Schwartz, 33, of Toms River was arrested Jan. 29 and charged with obstructing a government function, receiving a stolen motor vehicle, receiving a stolen instrument and possession of drug paraphernalia by Patrolman Daniel Maitland on Jan. 28.

Michael Hulera, 27, of Linden, was charged with driving while under the influence and possession of an open container of alcohol on Route 22 Sunday by Patrolman Ivan Shapow. Samuel Manganello, 23, of West Orange, was arrested Jan. 30 after he was involved in an altercation on Morris Avenue and Alvin Terrace, according to police reports. He was charged with obstructing a government function and arrested by Patrolman Peter Davis, Rick Miles and Ivan Shapow.

A Municipal Court Monday night in West New York man was fined $765 by Judge Robert Wolchek when he pleaded guilty to driving while on the suspended list. He was also sentenced to one day in jail and received a six-month revocation.

James Ballis, 61, of Florida, was fined $150 when he pleaded guilty to driving while under the influence and was fined a total of $265, along with a $100 state-mandated surcharge for the offense.

Vols at hospice listed

Memorial General Hospital has announced a total of 11 persons, including two Springfield residents, have completed its first Oncology/Hospice volunteer training sessions.

The first class of graduates participated in a 10-week session which exposed each individual to such topics as the concept of hospice, the family, aging and other related information.

"This first class of Oncology/Hospice volunteers will quickly become an integral part of our efforts to provide comfort and dignity to terminally ill patients," said Mary Beth McGrath. "Their service will certainly enhance our program, and we welcome them to our team."

The following individuals have completed their training and are now part of Memorial General Hospital's Oncology/Hospice team. Graduates from Springfield are Renee Chesley and Barbara Meyer. Some of the duties assumed by the newly trained volunteers will include visiting patients at home and in the hospital, transporting them to the doctor, assisting with grocery shopping or light housework, participating in diversional activities such as games, cards or reading, giving comfort and companionship to the patient during his or her remaining days and providing solace to family members during the period of bereavement.

Persons wishing to enroll in the next series of Oncology/Hospice volunteer training sessions may call 687-1900, Ext. 2224.

Election trends

The first stage of the April Board of Education election is under way. Members of the community who are interested in running have two weeks to file an application at the board office. We urge all qualified individuals to duly consider the opportunity to guide the township's education system. We also urge all candidates to break from the past.

The last few Springfield board elections, by virtue of their early starting date and long campaigns on multiple issues, have surpassed other township events in terms of community interest and, unfortunately, in terms of divisiveness.

Although such elections are supposed to be non-partisan, two resident groups presented slates of candidates when discussions on closing township schools began — C.A.U.S.E. (Citizens Alliance for Unifying Springfield Education) and C.A.R.E. (Citizen Association for Responsible Education). The two groups saturated the campaigns with their philosophies and promises.

In last year's election, a new low was reached when members of these "adult" civic groups resorted to writing letters containing ethnic slurs and threats to the opposition.

Members of the current board appear to have renounced their former political affiliations; it's been a while since the names C.A.U.S.E. and C.A.R.E. have even been mentioned. We hope that this marks a new — and permanent — trend.

A successful candidate does not have to have C.A.U.S.E. or C.A.R.E. propped behind his or her name, and we emphasize the her.

Recently, Board President Stuart Applebaum said, "I strongly believe that the restructuring and reunification of our board of education was the most important development of 1984 and I am proud to have played a part."

Part of this "restructuring" was the board's removal of its president and only female member, Barbara Adler, last June. Adler subsequently resigned from the board.

Female representation on the current board is nil. While the board's composition had nothing to do with the state's finding, the district was cited by the state Department of Education for falling short in its Affirmative Action employment practices. Having female representation on the board will be an important symbol of the district's commitment to equal opportunity for all.

The upcoming election is the opportune time for residents to bury the hatchet and elect those individuals who demonstrate a sincere and selfless interest in wanting to contribute, and who have something to contribute to Springfield's educational system.

The state Parent-Teacher Association has suggested qualifications for candidates of local school boards. Among the recommendations are a "sincere interest in the improvement of the educational process, totally divorced from possibilities of self-advancement and personal reward; possession of sufficient moral stamina to take courageous action when necessary for the good of the schools despite outside pressures; a demonstrable record of high concern for community improvement with consequent earned community respect, and freedom from partisan politics, with a willingness to make the welfare of children and community the basis of all decisions."

The last qualification is the ideal motivation for school board candidacy. We hope all candidates carefully examine their reasons for running, the solemn responsibility of the office and the amount of personal time the commitment requires.

Vacation blues
I heard that this is the last mid-winter vacation we are having. I think this very unfair. Many grandparents live in the warm climate and Christmas and February are the only two vacations we see them. I am in the fourth grade in Sandeek School. I think February vacation should continue year.

Reflections on reaching the age of 45

By GERRY DI GESU
I've always been happy when my birthday rolled around because it was a day to celebrate and reassess where my life was headed. Thirty was OK. By marrying young, I felt as if there had been much emotional growth in the 10 years since I became a bride. Even 35 wasn't bad. I experienced my first pregnancy and looked forward to a new phase of my life. Forty was an important birthday. My daughter started school and my two sons were old enough to be self-sufficient and help me. "Life begins at 40" held even more meaning.

Then I was going to be 45. For the first time in my life I didn't want to celebrate a birthday. I didn't want to be 45 — five years away from 50. All of a sudden, 50 sounded old and I felt as if I was starting on the downhill swing of life, a place I didn't want to be.

CPAs offer a quiz to test tax trivia IQ
Taxes certainly are not trivial; if you treat them lightly, you are bound to be pursued by the government. However, the New Jersey Society of Certified Public Accountants thought you might enjoy playing a game of tax trivia to help raise your tax IQ. Can you answer the following questions without peeking at the answers at the end?

1. If you don't itemize deductions, but you do give to charity, the maximum amount you can deduct for a charitable contribution is: (A) 25 percent of contributions up to $100. (B) 25 percent of contributions up to $300. (C) The full amount of any contributing less than $200. (D) You may only deduct a charitable contribution if you itemize deductions.
2. What is the maximum contribution a single person can make to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA)? (A) $2,000. (B) $2,250. (C) $1,000. (D) Only married persons may contribute to an IRA.
3. Every taxpayer is allowed one of these; but a blind taxpayer 65 or older is allowed three. What is it? (A) True or False. Sixty percent of a long-term capital gain is not taxed, but a short-term gain is fully taxable.
4. True or False. The cost of a new car is deductible.
5. Find the pair of deductible items — only one pair is deductible. (A) Dog licenses, bar examination fees. (B) Adoption costs, commuting expenses. (C) Bad personal debt, investment guides. (D) Life searches, excise taxes.
6. True or False. If you hire two jobs, the cost of commuting from your first to your second job is deductible.
7. True or False. While interest rates are high, the IRS has raised the interest rate it charges on overdue taxes — and pays on overdue refunds. (A) True or False. You can take an itemized deduction for any medical expense that exceeds 5 percent of your adjusted gross income.

There's an easiness about life that wasn't present before, an acceptance of what is and not constantly wishing for how it should be. I call myself a cynical idealist and leave it at that. It's not that I especially like the system, but have learned to work within and around it in a way that suits me. My values and principles haven't changed, they're still often contrary to the majority, but no longer do I spend feverish hours trying to convince you that my point of view is right. Now I can say with ease, "OK, that's the way you feel!"

I hope my children have noticed a softening in my attitudes because it's there. I won't compromise values I cherish and hope to pass on to them, but try more gently to point out why my feelings are important rather than "you better think this way because I'm your mother."

When my daughter wants to wear a "punk" style outfit, I can say go ahead without preaching how foolish I think the style is. She's neat and clean, a good girl and this phase will also pass. It's easier for both of us.

It's a delight to watch my sons mature — apparently — having assimilated most of the basic values and faith I've tried to impart to them. I know they live in a totally different world from the one in which I spent my teens and realize that many compromises are needed in order to survive, but it's reassuring to know they have a core of faith and principles on which to draw when the going gets tough.

My children have experienced the death of all their grandparents within the past few years, a very difficult time for our family. Yet this hurt drew us closer together. They learned how to pitch in and help unselfishly through long, heart-breaking months of illness. They helped each other draw on hidden strengths and share in a commitment of love. I became acutely aware of my own mortality and underwent a deep re-evaluation on the direction and meaning of my own life.

Even in death, though, there can be growth and benefits. We sorely miss the faces of our loved ones around the dining room table, especially at holiday time. But these places are being filled by members of a new, extended family. It's been a joy to reach out to others who are alone or whose family has diminished to unite and share new traditions, warmth and love.

I think sustaining a successful marriage where both partners can continue to grow and thrive is one of life's most difficult jobs. My husband and I have had rocky times over the years as countless others have, but there's something quite wonderful and reassuring to have an emotional, physical and spiritual communion with a mate of almost 25 years and the realization that whatever the future holds, our love can surmount any crisis.

So being 45 isn't bad after all. The blunt edges of life have smoothed out and life is easier to get through the day. I'm looking forward with great hope and joy to the next 45 years.

Correction

An editorial on an Assembly bill to raise starting salaries for teachers, entitled "Laudable, but..." which appeared on this page Jan. 17, incorrectly stated that teachers currently receiving less than the new minimum would not be raised to that level. According to a spokesman for Assemblyman Joseph V. Doria Jr., the bill's sponsors do not intend that teachers become "slaw." All teachers would receive the state minimum salary level.

AT&T official heads tribute

William Kaufman, director of Springfield operations for AT&T Technology Systems, will serve as chairman of the sixth annual Tribute to Women and Industry (TWIN) awards.

Sponsored by the YWCA of Plainfield/North Plainfield, the awards honor successful businesswomen for their accomplishments in executive, managerial and professional roles, and recognize companies whose policies encourage the advancement of women in business and industry.

The 1985 TWIN awards will be presented May 16 at the Town and Campus, West Orange.

Corporations interested in participating in this year's TWIN project should contact the YWCA at 766-3380.

Filler nominated for scholar award

Fred Filler of Mountainside has been nominated for New Jersey's first class of distinguished scholars. He was notified of the nomination by T. Edward Hollander, state chancellor of higher education.

The Distinguished Scholars Program, signed into law by Gov. Thomas Kean last year, was created to recognize the state's outstanding students. It provides for a $1,000 annual scholarship award for up to four years of undergraduate study at a state college or university, and is renewable if the student continues to make satisfactory academic progress.

Filler attends Union Catholic Regional High School.

Y swim teacher retires

They can be found doing the backstroke at the Summit Pool in July; the crawl at Long Beach Island; the breaststroke in Nantuxet Sound; or diving in Marlborough — and Sue Kaufman gave them all these experiences at the Summit YWCA.

Kaufman, Summit YWCA head water instructor, who has taught swimming at the YWCA since its pool opened in 1969, retired last month. She and her husband, Everett, long-time residents of Springfield, have moved to Florida.

More than 100 persons attended a recent dinner honoring her at the YWCA. A son also thanked her for her "feel that if a child can swim it alleviates a lot of problems," says Kaufman. "I want to make them safe in the water. I'm not as concerned how the stroke looks as long as they stay afloat. Refining the stroke comes later."

Under her guidance, the YW has developed "special classes" for the neurologically-impaired children or children who need more personalized attention and function better in smaller classes.

She also taught swimming at the Brooklake Daycamp in Florham Park for 21 years.

allow them to become involved in performing dental procedures on models. They learn about nutrition, proper tooth brushing and problems that bad habits such as thumb sucking can cause. The response by the fourth graders has always been one of interest and excitement, and both the classroom teachers and school nurses report of increased enthusiasm and awareness after the annual dentist's visit." Kaswiner and Hammer always receive lovely drawings and thank you notes from the children.

Kaswiner is co-chairman of Children's Dental Health Month for the Union County Dental Society. He is an orthodontist in Springfield who has been in practice with his father for seven years. Kaswiner is also chairman of the Orthodontic Department of Newark Beth Israel Medical Center.

Hammer is a general dentist in Springfield. He established his practice 10 years ago after serving four years of duty in the armed services. He resides in Springfield with his wife, and three children, who all attend Springfield public schools.

Overlook M.D. named UMDNJ trustee

Michael Bernstein, M.D., chairman of Medical Education and director of Internal Medicine at Overlook Hospital, has been named as a trustee of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey (Newark, Piscataway and Camden).

Dr. Bernstein was nominated by Gov. Thomas Kean and his nomination was given unanimous approval by the Senate.

Bernstein also has begun a six-year term as a regent of the American College of Physicians. He was elected in April 1984 to the governing body of the 60,000-member physician organization, which serves as the "academic arm of internal medicine" promoting "high standards in medical education, medical practice and medical research."

As a member of the board of trustees of the state's medical schools for the next three years, Bernstein will be involved in setting standards and establishing policies for the training of physicians, dentists, and nurses, on both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

"This position provides me the opportunity to be of help in promoting the growth of the state medical schools," Bernstein explained.

He brings to the trusteeship many years of experience in teaching young physicians and in developing medical education programs. He is a full professor at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, with which Overlook Hospital is affiliated and has been program director and chairman of Overlook's Internal Medicine Residency program since 1973. He also has been an attending physician in Internal Medicine and Cardiology at Overlook for 25 years.

Bernstein has been involved in the Internal Medicine Residency Program both as an administrator and a teacher since its inception, molding it into a highly attractive program sought after by graduate physicians. He took on the additional chairmanship of Medical Education at Overlook in 1983 bringing all postgraduate education under his supervision. Hundreds of medical school graduates apply each year for about 100 positions in Overlook's seven residency programs.

DR. MICHAEL BERNSTEIN
Three elected by instructors

Wurgaft, a senior member of Javerbaum & Wurgaft, P.A., won an award of about $500,000 on behalf of a client who was struck by a vehicle after she left a nightclub where she had become intoxicated. The Springfield attorney argued that the client was served alcoholic beverages despite being visibly intoxicated, in violation of the duty owed by the establishment to its patrons. It was on that basis that a verdict was returned against the nightclub and its employees. A settlement had previously been effected against the driver of the vehicle.

Wurgaft is a partner in Javerbaum & Wurgaft, a firm with offices in Springfield and in Newark. The principals, who are certified civil attorneys, practice throughout New Jersey. Much of their practice is devoted to representing persons who have sustained significant personal injuries in automobile accidents, from medical malpractice or from defective products.

"We're trying to bring back broad-based physician who spends meaningful time with his patient. We are encouraging more physicians to enter the field of general internal medicine and are providing more expertise in the field of gerontology. Because New Jersey has the 10th oldest population in the nation, medical students and residents here require more special training in the single and team approach to the care of older citizens."

Bernstein was a governor of the American College of Physicians for five years before being elected to the 18-member board of regents.

As a regent of the largest organization of internists and allied subspecialists in the world, Bernstein is involved in policy-making including national-level academic policies, and contributes his expertise to all the accrediting bodies of internal medicine.

Bernstein was a Phi Beta Kappa student at New York University and a 1953 graduate of New York Medical College. His postgraduate work in Gastroenterology, Internal Medicine and Cardiology was done at Manhattan Veterans Hospital (Cornell) Division, Montefiore Hospital and Beth Israel Hospital, all in New York City. He then entered private practice in Internal Medicine in Summit and Millburn until joining Overlook to develop the residency program.

A case that was successfully prosecuted by a Springfield firm was the subject of attention recently in "Jury Verdict" Research, a national publication.

That review described a verdict achieved by Springfield attorney Jack Wurgaft on behalf of an injured client as one of national significance.

Red Cross to hold blood drive Friday

The Eastern Union County Chapter of the American Red Cross will hold a blood drive tomorrow at the chapter house, 203 West Jersey St., Elizabeth. Co-sponsored by New Jersey Blood Services, the drive will be open to the public from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Anyone between the ages of 17 and 65, weighing at least 110 pounds and in good health can donate blood. Further information is available from the Eastern Union County Red Cross at 339-2500.

Toddlers prepared for new sibling

To prepare little ones for the new baby, Overlook Hospital in Summit is offering a new program, Toddler Sibling Preparation.

The program is given on Saturdays from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Parents discuss closely-spaced children, learn how to prepare the toddler for the new sibling, and discuss how to deal with a toddler's negative reaction. Parents and children also visit the nursery and maternity unit.

The next class will be held Saturday. There is a $15 fee for the family, and class size is limited.

Overlook Hospital also offers a Prepared Sibling course for children ages 9 to 12 and a monthly breastfeeding class for expectant couples, whether they have decided to breastfeed or not. The next class will be held Wednesday from 8 to 10 p.m.

Fathers as well as mothers are encouraged to attend the session. After a film, discussion will include physiology of breastfeeding, advantages and disadvantages, diet and nutrition, coping with common problems and breastfeeding and the plus adjustment to the expanding family will be discussed. The next series begins tomorrow. Couples should sign up six weeks before their due date.

Interested persons may register for any of the above programs by calling the Health Education Department at 522-2963.

The dinner was held at the Galloping Hill Restaurant, 5 Points, Union.

Wacker has worked as the editor of the Rolling Roundhouse, a newspaper put out by the Union County Volunteer 227, 40/8 for the past 17 years. The Rolling Roundhouse lists all the important events and articles important to the American Legion and the 40/8, which is the

Library column

She's no stranger to mid-life

By ROSE P. SIMON

Following are reviews of some books currently available at the Springfield Public Library.

LOOK AT MIDDLE AGE
"It's a Stranger Here Myself," by Joan Scobey.

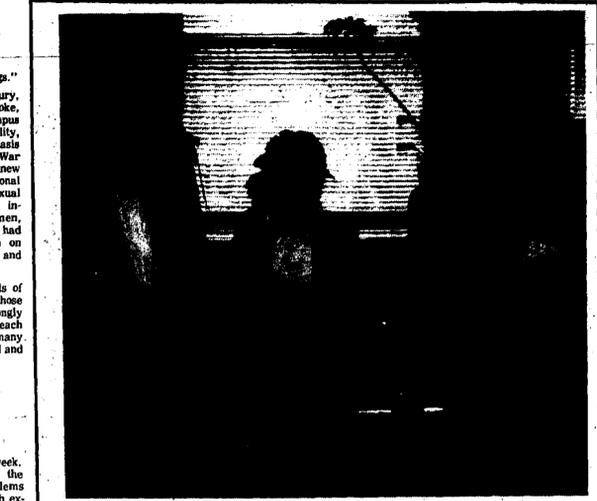

Middle-age may come on swiftly or stealthily, but there isn't any way it will be welcome. In any case, Scobey succeeds in portraying this "epiphany" sometimes seriously, but often cheerfully and humorously (to soften the blow). Her own recognition of having "arrived" was when she was invited to her 30th college reunion while she had been feeling like 27. She indicates that each person becomes aware of mid-life differently, and for various reasons.

Parents feel the generation gap when a child leaves for college, or announces that he is living with a girlfriend, or is joining the Peace Corps in Africa. When the children are married — or no longer living at home — there are often difficult adjustments to keep the parents' marriage in equilibrium (careers, extra-marital relationships, divorce). Quoting from professional sources, such as psychologists, psychiatrists, sociologists, medical men, friends, famous people, the author illustrates and confirms her own theories about the middle years (40 to 50), analyzing the problems and offering guidance.

Scobey refers to the pains and aches that come with aging, the current mania for fitness to prove one's youthfulness through tennis, jogging, swimming, etc., taking high risks in business and physical activities, the need for men to take stock, the women's move toward independence and autonomy, coping with generational affiliations, and coming to terms with death.

A HISTORY OF WOMEN'S COLLEGES
"Alma Mater," by Helen Lefkowitz Horowitz.

Horowitz, now associate professor of history at Scripps College, Claremont, Calif., has written a history of the original Seven Sisters colleges (Mount Holyoke, Vassar, Wellesley, Smith, Radcliffe, Bryn Mawr and Barnard) and their "offspring" — (Bennington, Sarah

The Red Cross senior citizens program provides a place for seniors to gather for social activities, such as bridge, crafts and sewing.

Faith marks 20 years at counseling agency

Milton Faith, executive director of Youth and Family Counseling Service, Westfield, recently celebrated his 20th year at the agency.

David McCormack, president of the agency's board, explained that Faith took over as director in 1964 with the goal in mind of establishing a permanent home for the counseling service, in existence since 1918.

Faith is a graduate of New York University and was employed at the Child Guidance Clinic of the Oranges and Maplewood. He became director of the adolescent program at the clinic and was consultant at the League for Family Service in Bloomfield.

In 1964, Youth and Family Counseling Service was situated in a suite of offices at 26 Prospect St. The service moved to its present location at 233 Prospect St. in 1966 and has grown into a viable, vital family counseling, and mental health resource. Presently, it is staffed by 10 professional clinicians and is open five days and three evenings a week. "It is interesting to notice the change in primary problems referred to the agency," Faith explained. "Originally, the agency met with two-parent, intact families. The conflicts centered on length of hair, black leather jackets, marital stress after one to five years of marriage, dating problems, depression and aggressive and hostile behavior."

Faith contrasts this with the increase in emergent and crisis situations. The cases the center is handling now include a majority in which the mother works, a total of 60 percent involving single parent homes, and numerous couples who have been married longer periods of time — five to 25 years.

He added, "We are noting more depression, anxiety and self-destructive behavior — overdosing on drugs and alcohol exist in many situations." He notes that increasingly professionals are able to identify problems in young children and families are encouraged to seek professional help, at a much earlier stage.

Local students receive distinction

In local college news, the following students were awarded degrees or received honors for academic distinction:

Clinty S. Freund of Ridge Drive, MountainSide, received her bachelor of science degree in consumer and family science from Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind., in graduation ceremonies Dec. 22.

John Randolph Enders of MountainSide was named to the dean's list at Westminster Choir College, Princeton, for the fall semester. Enders is a junior studying voice performance and pedagogy.

Walter Dawydiak and Michael Kossor of Kenilworth were both named to the dean's list at the New Jersey Institute of Technology, Newark, for the fall semester. The NJIT dean's list requires a minimum grade point average of 3.0 based on a four-point scale.

Stephen N. Solomon of MountainSide was named to the honors list at Westminster Choir College, Princeton, for the fall semester. Enders is a junior studying voice performance and pedagogy.

Dickinson University, Teaneck, Soloman satisfied the honors list requirements by maintaining a minimum 3.5 grade point average.

James K. Darceus, of Central Avenue, MountainSide, was named to the dean's list at Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, Penn. A senior, Darceus was one of 80 undergraduates named to the dean's list at Bloomsburg for the fall semester, in satisfying the minimum 3.5 grade point average standard.

each year with occupational-related diseases.

An 11-member Worker and Community Right-to-Know Advisory Council was set up to oversee compliance with the law.

The law, however, ran into trouble as soon as it went into effect.

In August, a broad-based group of manufacturers and businesses, calling themselves the Chemical Industry Council of New Jersey and New Jersey Business and Industry Association, filed suit to stop the law. Their argument was that the law conflicted with federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) standards concerning the same matters.

The group later filed a second suit on the grounds that the law would require costly environmental surveys, the disclosure of trade secrets and duplicative labeling, reports and training programs.

On Dec. 20, the New Jersey Right-to-Know Coalition, made up of 70 environmental and labor groups, accused the state's chemical industry of refusing to provide employees, emergency agencies and the general public with hazardous substance information. The coalition contended that group members were, following OSHA standards and ignoring the new law. At that time, Rick Engler, associate director of the Philadelphia area project on occupational safety and health, said that group members were delaying the filing of required forms until the suit was settled despite the fact that the law was in effect.

The group countered that information was being provided to emergency agencies and that they were supporting a new legislative proposal by state Sen. Raymond Lesniak, D-20, that would set up a Hazardous Materials Advisory Council. The purpose of the council would be to define the risks of exposure to hazardous materials and increase preparedness to deal with emergencies involving the materials.

That council, under Debevoise's ruling, a propane-producer does not have to file a report with state, county or local agencies, but a warehouse that uses propane to run its forklifts does.

Non-manufacturing firms are also required to provide substance-handling training for their employees and also make substance reports available to employees on demand.

One basis for Debevoise's decision was that state officials had never sought federal approval of their regulations. Without clear-cut federal backing, state statutes are pre-empted wherever they are inconsistent with federal law, according to Debevoise.

The decision released nearly 14,000 employees in the state from the right-to-know law.

"We had expected the court challenge from the beginning," Dalton said. "What we didn't expect

As the accusations kept the law in the limelight throughout 1984, the suit filed by the industry and business groups was heard in January.

U.S. District Court Judge Dickinson Debevoise ruled that manufacturing firms were exempt from the law.

In effect, his ruling now requires that non-manufacturing firms, or users, file a full disclosure with the appropriate agencies on-site substances while exempting manufacturers, or producers, from the law.

For example, under Debevoise's ruling, a propane-producer does not have to file a report with state, county or local agencies, but a warehouse that uses propane to run its forklifts does.

Non-manufacturing firms are also required to provide substance-handling training for their employees and also make substance reports available to employees on demand.

One basis for Debevoise's decision was that state officials had never sought federal approval of their regulations. Without clear-cut federal backing, state statutes are pre-empted wherever they are inconsistent with federal law, according to Debevoise.

The decision released nearly 14,000 employees in the state from the right-to-know law.

"We had expected the court challenge from the beginning," Dalton said. "What we didn't expect was that the judge's opinion would be so devastating to employees. We thought the manufacturing portions of the law would be left in."

Dalton added that OSHA regulations are much less stringent than what the state law called for.

Most non-manufacturing firms are complying with the law, Dalton said.

Towns battle snow

One of the month's typical snow storms dumped about 3 to 6 inches of the white stuff on Union County Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service.

Warnings of the storm, which were reported throughout Monday, paid off for local municipal road departments which reported no major problems with snow removal.

The snow began falling about 4 p.m. and didn't let up until after midnight, causing schools in Springfield, Mountainside and Kenilworth, including the regional high schools, to close yesterday.

Billy Trivett of Springfield's Road Department said seven plows operated around the clock Tuesday to clear local streets. As of 9:30 a.m. yesterday, Trivett said there was only about an hour's worth of plowing left to do.

"We're in pretty good shape," Trivett commented, "we haven't gotten any complaints yet."

Springfield police reported no major accidents due to the snowfall.

The right-to-know Coalition filed an appeal in federal court the day after Debevoise's decision. An appeal date has not yet been set, however.

The federal judge's opinion has been appealed to the 3rd District court," Dalton said, "and federal judges have been overturned before."

While waiting for the appeal hearing, Dalton has begun work on the new community legislation.

Heart group offers 'Pops'

Richard Lloyd, manager of public relations for New Jersey Blue Cross, has announced that Blue Cross-Blue Shield offices will participate in the American Heart Association's "Lollies for Life" program this month.

Designed to coincide with Valentine's Day remembrances, the program offers 5-inch, red, heart-shaped lollipops to employees at $3 each or two for $5.

"Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Jersey is happy to support this American Heart Association Heart Month activity," Lloyd said. "Our organizations share a common interest in that we are both concerned with improving the health of our New Jersey population."

Arrangements for the sale of "Lollies for Life" can be made by calling 376-3838.

Public officials in Mountainide said snow removal also went smoothly there. Several trucks went out about 3 a.m. and reported no major problems.

Not only did Frank Morro, superintendent of the Road Department in Kenilworth, not mind the snow, he enjoyed it. "It makes the town look nice, well, it makes it look clean anyway," he said. Morro said five plows went out at midnight and by the morning rush hour yesterday, all streets were passable. "The equipment worked well and we had no problems," he said. Morro said the plows were to go out again when residents moved their cars off the streets. A traveler's warning was still in effect throughout yesterday while weathercasters predicted more snow.

The juror's duty

A day of decision... or soap operas

By ELIZABETH SEP
(Editor's note: This is the second part of a two-part series on the jury duty system in Union County.)

It's 8:15 a.m. in the Union County Courthouse. Nearly 200 jurors sit quietly in the assignment judge's chambers wondering what the day has in store for them. Will they be chosen for a trial or will they spend their two days of service watching soap operas and game shows?

REPORTING FOR DUTY
The door swings open and in walks Walter Garthwaite, the Union County jury manager. For each group of new jurors the routine is the same - Garthwaite spends a few minutes telling them what they will be expected to do before showing them a slide presentation and introducing them to the assignment judge.

The jurors are then sworn-in by Walter Halpin, county clerk.
The jury manager introduces Edward W. Beglin Jr., the superior court assignment judge. Beglin assures the jurors that they are not expected to be lawyers or judges, or "superhuman or perfect."

"You, in effect, become collaborators in judgement with the judge that sits on the bench. You will be expected to do what's right, just and fair... to serve with integrity and impartiality."

Assignment Judge Edward Beglin

You will be expected to do what's right, just and fair... to serve with integrity and impartiality," he tells the jurors.

"You have the powers of decision over human affairs not given to anyone else," the judge added.

The jurors are then escorted to their lounge on the fourth floor - the room where they spend their time reading, watching television or napping while waiting to be chosen for a trial.

After taking roll call, Garthwaite instructs the jurors to wear the paper "badges" which identify them as jurors and all times so that all employees are aware of their status.

Wearing the badge eliminates the possibility of a mistrial," he tells the jurors, adding that the cost of a mistrial would be $3,000 to $6,000 per day.

Garthwaite said his department started using paper labels printed out by the computer to save money because badges were being taken home by jurors at a rate of 1,200 per month as souvenirs.

For this vital service they provide, jurors are paid $5 per day and 2 cents per mile for their traveling expenses. The 2 cents per mile, dating back to 1896, was estimated on the basis of how much it would cost jurors to feed their horses, Garthwaite noted.

The mileage is calculated by the county, according to Garthwaite, who said that, the distance is measured from a resident's local post office to the county courthouse.

Well aware of the meager stipend jurors receive as pay, the county and state are working on a law that would raise the pay for jury duty to $10 per day with no mileage compensation, Garthwaite said. The new law also would prohibit employers from taking the jury duty pay from their employees.

A time clock, located in the rear of the lounge, is provided for jurors whose employers require proof that they served. His staff began this procedure to cut down on some of its paperwork, Garthwaite said.

When jurors are excused earlier than 4 p.m. - which is when the courts usually close for the day - they get credit for a full day, Garthwaite said.

In no instance will the staff of the jury management office tell employers when an employee left the courthouse for the day, he added.

"If they are excused early in the day, I tell them that they should go back to work. But I think most of them rather go to Atlantic City," Garthwaite joked.

CALLING IN
There is a chance that some prospective jurors may find out the night before they are expected to report for jury duty that they won't be needed. Jurors are asked to call a special number after 4

"You have the powers of decision over human affairs not given to anyone else."

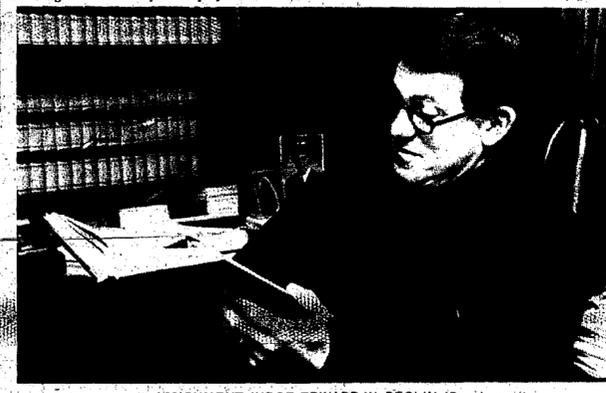

Judge Beglin

p.m. and a recorded message recites the numbers of the jurors who are expected to report for duty the next morning.

The call-in system is not unique to Union County, but Garthwaite's stand-by juror system is the only one of its kind in the state. Those who have been designated stand-by jurors are told to report to work and then call the jury management office later in the morning to find out if they will be needed.

If Garthwaite finds that he doesn't have

Happiness blooms at WISE care center

By ADA BRUNNER

They come from throughout Union County: from Union Township, Roselle Park, Roselle, Linden and other communities. They bring with them a cloud of sadness, growing out of loneliness and out of the guilt that comes from knowing that they are a burden on those they love most.

But at WISE, the sadness is cured. Companionship puts an end to the loneliness and the guilt is lifted as they realize they are no longer such a heavy burden on their families.

WISE stands for Wellness, Independence and Social Interaction for the Elderly. It is a day care center for senior citizens conducted by Memorial General Hospital at the United Methodist Church in Union.

Now well into its second year of operation, WISE has 40 clients who come two or three days a week, and in a few cases as often as five days a week.

Some of them are post-stroke patients, some are recovering from fractured hips, some are simply forgetful. But while they may have some physical disabilities, and may at times be confused, they are not there for therapy.

"We don't offer therapy," said Susan Chasnoff, director of day care and family service for Memorial General.

What the center does offer is an outgrowth of a program begun at the hospital some years ago, when a senior citizens ambulatory care center was begun to provide some social services as well as health screenings to the elderly, Chasnoff said.

It was a natural development for a hospital at which more than 60 percent of the population is over the age of 60, she noted.

But it was only a start. With so many elderly people in the area, providing services that will enable them to avoid permanent institutionalization is "vital," Chasnoff pointed out.

As a result, on Sept. 26, 1983, Memorial General opened the new WISE facility in rooms at the church at Overlook and Berwyn terraces.

Funding came in part from the Memorial General Hospital Foundation and in part from others sources, including the Union County Division on Aging and the Adult Community Development Corp., which operates the Ehrhart Gardens senior citizens housing complex in Union Township.

"The clients who came were often the victims of loneliness. Though living with their families, they seldom went out. Sometimes, if family members worked, they were left alone for much of the day, with their only human contacts coming from neighbors who looked in occasionally. One woman isolated herself totally, not even coming out of her room for meals, Chasnoff said.

Many also came from households suffering from

A double dose of guilt, Chasnoff added. The old people themselves felt guilty about being a burden on their families; the family members felt guilty about their desire to be free of that burden for at least a few hours a week.

While some of the clients showed some "hesitancy" about attending the center at first, they soon became adjusted to the home-style setting, Chasnoff said.

At the center, "they do a lot of reminiscing," she reported.

But there are other, more organized, activities as well.

"They have gone on trips to the Morris and Newark museums, to shopping centers and to the Tuleback Zoo in West Orange; they have taken part in joint programs with other senior citizens facilities, such as those at the Jewish Community Center on Green Lane in Union; they have taken part in men's and women's discussion groups which look at such timely topics as "Men's Changing Roles," and they have conducted fund-raisers for the Statue of Liberty renovation.

Last summer, participants in the center program planted a garden in a plot of land behind the church parking lot. "We had salad coming out of our ears," Chasnoff said.

And throughout the year, "we do a lot of cooking and baking," she reported.

These programs are conducted under the supervision of a professional staff that includes, in addition to Chasnoff, Peter West, coordinator; Susan Butler, social worker; Mary Kay Smith, program therapist; Mary Strohlein, housekeeper, and Sam Blas and Fred Fuhrmann, drivers of the van that provides transportation for most of the clients.

In addition, "we have a super staff of volunteers," Chasnoff added. "Trained by Chasnoff and Butler, they work 'one on one' with the clients.

"With the help of the staff, the men and women at the center 'really make it their home,'" Chasnoff said.

A few clients have left because "they become bored," she reported; one dropped out of the program because he went into politics; one became seriously ill. "But nobody left because they didn't like the program," Chasnoff said.

"The way the clients feel about the center is contagious," she added.

"If you're down, drop by the day care center for just a few minutes," she said. "You'll really be on a high."

Plans being made for Fitness Festival

Preparations are under way throughout Union County for the American Cancer Society's second annual Fitness Festival Sunday, Feb. 24, at the Westfield YMCA, 138 Ferris Place, Westfield, from 2 to 4 p.m.

Health Instructors Heidi Bett of New Woman and Elaine James of Contempo Women, both in Union, will lead members of their clubs in Fitness Festivals at each of their locations on Saturday, Feb. 23.

Marian Villani, chairperson, said the purpose of the festival is to promote good health and to raise funds for the Cancer Society's programs in research, education and patient service.

No experience is required to take part in this event. Participants are asked to obtain sponsors, who will pledge financial support for their efforts. The participant who raises the most money over $1,500 will win a trip for two to Paradise Island in the Bahamas. Other prizes include T-shirts, portable stereos, cameras, color televisions and video cassette recorders.

The instructor of the health club

According to Franklin Feider, president of the Linden civic group, the association was formed in 1980 by "Buddy" Schreiber to do charitable work.

Much of the activity has been centered around Children's Specialized Hospital, explained Betty Ann Schaller of Linden, executive director and niece of the founder.

THE UNION COUNTY HEALTH OFFICERS' Association has announced that a "Breast Self-Examination Program for Women" will be offered on a monthly basis through Union County College during the spring semester. The program is a cooperative effort of the Health Officers' Association, the Division of Continuing Education and Community Services of Union County College and the Visiting Nurse and Health Services of Elizabeth.

The program will consist of lecture, film, practice on hand-held health education models and a question and answer period conducted by a health educator of the Visiting Nurse and Health Services of Elizabeth.

The program is free to county residents. Individual sessions are on Tuesday, 7-8:30 p.m.; Wednesday, March 13, 7-8:30 p.m.; Tuesday, April 16, 7-8:30 p.m.; Saturday, May 11, 10-11:30 a.m.

Further information is available from the Union County College's Division of Continuing Education and Community Services, 276-2600 Ext. 286 or 238. Applications will be available at the Linden Board of Health North Wood Avenue.

THE BODY SHOP, an exercise and fitness program for men and women will open at the Jewish Community Center, Green Lane, Union, Monday. The program, set to music, will concentrate on muscle tone, flexibility, spot reducing, strength and fun. The class ends with relaxation exercise.

Designed for people at all levels of fitness, the program will run at noon and evenings, Monday through Thursday. A special "beginner's" class, designed for older adults, new mothers and the very sedentary, will be held on Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9:30 to 10:15. Additional information is available by calling 289-8115.

Ken Clayton, owner of Union Roller World skating rink in Union, has announced that he will be host to skating to music, special events and games throughout the day. "Besides being fun, rollerskating is good for your heart," said Clayton. "It involves almost all of your body's muscles, especially your heart."

Skating is one of the activities recommended by the American Heart Association for the promotion of cardiovascular health.

Anyone interested in participating or seeking information about the roll-a-thon can call Roller World at 964-4790.

HEALTH & FITNESS

THE CHARLES "BUDDY" SCHREIBER Civic Association of Linden is sponsoring a station in memory of its founder in the Fitness Trail under construction in Mountainside.

The trail, a project of Children's Specialized Hospital in cooperation with the Union County Board of Freeholders and the Borough of Mountainside, is being built on property behind the hospital and Borough Hall. It will contain 18 exercise stations for able-bodied individuals and 10 for non-ambulatory people. All 28 stations will be wheelchair accessible.

According to Franklin Feider, president of the Linden civic group, the association was formed in 1980 by "Buddy" Schreiber to do charitable work.

Much of the activity has been centered around Children's Specialized Hospital, explained Betty Ann Schaller of Linden, executive director and niece of the founder.

Free spay, neutering available

The Animal Alliance Welfare League of New Jersey, in conjunction with Kindness Kennels of Rahway, is offering free spaying and neutering to the first 25 dogs, puppies, cats or kittens eight months or older adopted from Kindness Kennels beginning Monday.

A spokesman for Animal Alliance said the program is being offered because many who would like to own a pet hesitate because of the high cost of food and veterinary care.

"This program is being offered by the league as an incentive for people to adopt one or more of the homeless pets housed at the kennel, and to make the decision to adopt easier by offering free spaying or neutering. All animals adopted from Kindness Kennels have already had their initial shots," the spokesman said.

Animal Alliance is a nonprofit organization with no paid members. Anyone wishing to donate to the league, either money or time, should contact Animal Alliance Welfare League, P.O. Box 688, Hillside 07035. A low-cost spaying and neutering program is in effect 365 days a year. Those wishing more information can call 874-5881 or 354-6537.

Rummage sale set

People for Animals will hold a rummage sale Feb. 16, to raise funds for homeless strays and low cost spay/neuter clinics from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Emanuel United Church of Christ, at the corner of Lincoln and Nye Place, Irvington.

Those who want to donate items for the rummage sale can drop them off at the People for Animals clinic at 433 Hillside Ave., Hillside.

Further information is available by calling 874-5881 or 354-6537.

'Long Day's Journey' to open in Bloomfield

Eugene O'Neill's "A Long Day's Journey into Night" will open a five-week run at the Actors Cafe Theater in residence at Bloomfield College, Franklin and Fremont streets, Bloomfield, Feb. 15 at 8 p.m. and will play every Friday and Saturday night through March 16 at 8 p.m.

This is considered one of the greatest plays written by O'Neill and it concerns his painful memories of a period when at 23 he had to go to a sanitarium for tuberculosis. It was also the time when his mother was addicted to morphine and reflects the effect it had on him, his father and his other brother, Jamie.

David G. Kennedy, producer-director, also will star in the play. Reservations can be made by calling 629-7663.

The next production will be Agatha Christie's "The Unexpected Guest" March 22 through April 20.

Driver dancers set

"Harry, Dance and Other Works by Senia Drivers" will appear at Montclair State College, Upper Montclair, tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Memorial auditorium, Montclair State College, Upper Montclair.

"Harry" is a company of five dancers directed by Driver. Her dancers dance in bare feet and do pirouettes on their heads.

Auditions planned

All parts are open in Agatha Christie's "The Unexpected Guest," and will be cast Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Actors Cafe Theater, in residence at Bloomfield College, Franklin and Fremont streets.

Rehearsals will begin Feb. 18 on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The production is set for March 22 to April 27. Additional information can be obtained by calling David G. Kennedy at 629-7662.

Long play staged

The Club Bene Dinner Theater, Rt. 35, Sayreville is presenting the Broadway comedy, "Never Too Late," by Sumner Ather Long, directed by Joseph Remblax, now to March 17. Additional information can be obtained by calling 727-3000.

INTRODUCING ACCENTS™ THE PERMANENT LASHLINER

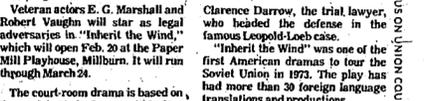

Accents is a new oculo-plastic technique which adds permanent color and highlights to your eyelids. Accents reduces make-up time by accenting your eyelids with a microscopically applied eye liner pigment. This procedure is done in the doctor's office by an ophthalmic surgeon.

Accents is particularly suitable for persons who want to reduce their makeup time or who have difficulty applying eye liner.

For further information on a free Accents brochure, please contact:

'Inherit Wind' to begin Paper Mill run Feb. 20

E. G. MARSHALL

Veteran actors E. G. Marshall and Robert Vaughn will star as legal adversaries in "Inherit the Wind," which will open Feb. 20 at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn. It will run through March 24.

The court-room drama is based on the celebrated Scopes "Monkey Trial" of the middle 1920s. The trial had tested the Tennessee law forbidding the teaching of Darwin's theory of evolution in the schools.

Marshall will portray the orator William Jennings Bryan, three-time nominee for President of the United States, and Vaughn will portray Clarence Darrow, the trial lawyer, who headed the defense in the famous Leopold-Loeb case.

"Inherit the Wind" was one of the first American dramas to tour the Soviet Union in 1973. The play has had more than 30 foreign language translations and productions.

The final two plays of the Paper Mill season will be Jerome Kern's stage musical, "Show Boat," which will open April 10 and run through May 12, and "Evita," the Tony Award-winning best musical, opening May 22 and ending June 30.

Additional information can be obtained by calling 376-4343.

Night of opera at Community Center

The Jewish Community Center of Central New Jersey will present "A Night of Opera: Excerpts from Puccini's 'Madama Butterfly,'" as performed by stars of the New York City Opera and arranged by the Jersey Lyric Opera. The performance will be held at the Martine Avenue Building, 1391 Martine Ave., Scotch Plains, Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the Green Lane-Lebau, Union and Martine Avenue buildings.

Chamber orchestra concert

Concerto Soloists of Philadelphia, a chamber orchestra, will perform works by five composers beginning at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Wilkins Theater at Kean College of New Jersey, Union.

Concerto Soloists, which first appeared in 1964, includes 18 strings and harpsichord with brass, woodwind and percussion when required. Players alternate in their supporting and starring roles in both ensemble and solo performances.

Modeled after the orchestras of Bach and Mozart, the chamber group performs baroque and classical music and seeks out lesser known compositions of the 18th and 20th centuries as well as contemporary works.

Sponsors of the event include the Council for Part-time students, Student Organization, Inc., the Alumni Association and Kean College.

Polish group to give recital

The Polish Cultural Foundation of New Jersey, Springfield, will sponsor a lecture-recital on "Szymanowski: The man and His Music" Feb. 16 at 8 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerzy Papadopoulos of Montclair. Walter Legawiec of Mountainside, violinist, lecturer and composer, will be accompanied on the piano by Paul Kuefer.

The program will include six Kurpie songs opus 58 transcribed for violin and piano by Legawiec.

Semmel's art on exhibition

The large figurative paintings of Joan Semmel, will be on exhibit at Union County College's Tomasulo Art Gallery on the Cranford Campus through Feb. 22.

The exhibit is another in a series of art exhibits brought to the community by UCC. In recent months the works of such artists as Paul Sarkisian and Audrey Flack also have been exhibited.

The Tomasulo Gallery, located in the Mackay Library, is open to the public free of charge Mondays through Saturdays from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and Mondays through Thursdays from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

VALENTINE DAY

DINING IDEAS

Historical tour planned

A free anniversary party and tour of New Jersey's oldest historical institution will be sponsored by the New Jersey Historical Society's Women Branch on Wednesday, Feb. 13, at 9:30 a.m. at 230 Broadway, Newark.

The program is being planned in observance of the New Jersey Historical Society's 140th anniversary, which will be celebrated this month.

The day's events will include a cake-cutting ceremony commemorating the society's 140 years.

Those interested should call 463-3939 for reservations.
