State takeover

The concept seems fairly justifiable: a school district that is unable to provide quality education for its students is faced with a state takeover. School board officials — including the superintendent and board of education - are relieved of their jobs by a specially-appointed state ad-

That's what Governor Thomas Kean and State Education Commissioner Saul Cooperman believe is the only cure to what ails a few school districts in the state deemed to be

There are many people who believe that situations in which children are being denied a proper education warrant a state

What is disturbing is the way Cooperman has testified before a joint legislative committee about wanting, "literally, to have control." That kind of terminology is more apt to frighten would-be supporters, rather than gain their acceptance.

We believe some changes should be made before this becomes law. Legislative oversight committees could assist in the "takeovers.

We urge that several qualified people have a hand in restructuring any "troubled" district, and not just one stateappointed commissioner. As one assemblywoman asked Cooperman, ''Who's going to monitor you?'

Election could 'open the window further'

As a resident and taxpayer with both family obligations and a demanding ob, I have little time to keep up with the local campaign for seats on the Township Committee. As in years past, I rely on the candidates' literature and your newspaper for information. I don't mind reading the material, but I lo mind being fooled around with.

The two-party issue raised this year by the local Democratic candidates must be their way of fooling around with me, because I remember what the Last year, the Republicans quoted Democrat Ed Fanning's statement to the Springfield Leader in 1984: "... the two-party issue is important... If some surrounding communities have all-Republican governing bodies, they must be satisfied. They keep electing Republicans and their towns nove steadily ahead.

If the two Republican candidates for Township Committee win election his year, Democrat Ed Fanning will still be there next year to cry "foul." If the Springfield Leader could be happy with and endorse a 5-0 Township Committee last year, it should be doing handsprings this year over the Democrats stress concern for 'future'

Sy Mullman and Bill Welsch, Democratic candidates for the Springfield Township Committee, have issued a statement emphasizing their concern for

The candidates noted that they are concerned about the future. "We have already made quite clear our opposition to the use of the Houdaille Quarry as either a dump site or an amphitheafer. Such uses would only bring traffic, noise, pollution and crime to Springfield. But there are other critical issues facing springfield — now and in the future. "Foremost is the need for twoparty government. Checks and balances are essential to quality,

Museum artist intimates life in his paintings

For Alejandro Anreus, art is life and life has been pretty

The 26-year-old Cuban-born Elizabeth resident enjoys the best of both worlds of his vocation. A research associate at the Montclair Art Museum, he is a working painter who has already received some critical and commercial success. He also writes a bi-monthly col umn on the visual arts for La Voz of Elizabeth.

And to top it all off, Anreus has just been awarded a $7,500 fellowship from the Oscar B Cintas Foundation, which proides financial assistance to artists of Cuban birth or heritage. Anreus works in all the media, producing vividly - sometimes harshly - emotional canvases that; even to the artist, are constantly changing in meaning. Critics have described his work as neo-figurative or expressionist.

"I started out being motivated by grand themes, Anreus says, creating "art that reflected social problems." Gradually his focus shifted. His interest now is in conveying everyday perceptions and the role that memory plays in those important because I came here (to the United States) when was 10 years old.'.'Anreus says. "I have a whole life I left behind in Cuba and I can only maintain contact with it through memory."

A painting in acrylics titled "My Grandfather is Remembered," painted early this year, is lush with a tropical back ground of jutting palm trees, verdantly green hills and a mystically deep blue sky. The grandfather figure in the foreground is solid, but with face obscured in shadow.

"I'm haunted by his image," Anreus savs. His memories of Cuba translate beyond the palm trees and the greenery of the tropics. Anreus tries to capture "the slow and meditative pace...of what it's like to be there." The painter tackles day-today themes and dreams as in just-completed="The-Fad-ing Memory of Desire," an eerily dark and light study of an , encounter-between a man and a woman, "He is about-to-touch her, but I think she'll stop him." Anreus says. "The problem with this painting is I don't know if she is really there or is a figment of his imagination.' Anreus began studying art at age 13 and credits his high school art teacher. Michael Tagliaferro, with clinching his desire to undertake painting and art as a profession.

"He turned me around from a kid with basic talent to someone who wanted it (art) as a vocation," Anreus says. Tagliaferro, who lives in Glen Ridge, still teaches in Elizabeth High School. Anreus joined the Art Stutists Issaac Soyer and Anthony Palumbo. He also studied printmaking in Mexico with Jose Luis Cuevas. At Kean College in Union he majored in art history because "I didn't have any clear ideas of what an artist is or his role in society. Not to mention it's how I make my living." he grins.

Anreus gained a perspective on history and on the art that is produced by history through Professor Alan Wallach, now a Smithsonian fellow. "The artist is not locked in an ivory tower," he says. "But neither can he be

-with plenty of contradictions." Quoting Camus, Anreus re-

The painter has enjoyed some commercial success, especially in Michigan, where he is represented by a gallery. His work is Detroit Institute of Art there. Exhibits in Miami and Puerto while one-man shows in Morristown and at Rutgers in New Brunswick have been critically acclaimed.

At show's end, one finds oneself doing a sing-a-long with the entire cast as all its members biast away at the tune, "You Gotta Have Heart." All the way up the aisle, to the parking lot, into one's car and the jammed up traffic before getting onto the street, one is happily shricking, "You Gotta Have Heart."

The play is about the disheartened Washington Senators, who cannot seem to win a baseball game and would give anything to beat the New York Yankees. One overusiastic fan, a middle-aged real estate agent named Joe Boyd, played by Don Wonder, exclaims oudly that he would give his soul if the Senators could beat "those damn

The Devil turns middle-aged Joe into a young, exceptionally talented ball player called Joe Hardy played by Davis Gaines, who takes the baseball world by surprise and puts the Washington Senators back on the map.

The only problem is that deep in his heart, Joe misses his middle-aged wife, his "old girl," Patti on her doorstep and eventually as her boarder as she herself mourns her "old boy, Joe.'

Enter - the Devil's seductive lisciple, red-headed Lola, sexily played by Alyson Reed, who at empts to seduce young Joe, as sho curls herself around him like a serpent, a la Rita Hayworth, and lets ilm know in no uncertain terms that Whatever Lola Wants, Lola Gets." Mr. Applegate goes to undue
