Seniors have a 'field day'

By JOHN A. GAVIN

"What's the score?" shouted Joan Lupo as she cocked her arm back to shoot a shuffleboard puck down the smooth cement-finished court. As her friend, Yolanda Kubicka, gazed over her shoulder, Lupo was already plotting where her next shot would go.

However, as Lupo's shot weakly glanced against another puck, knocking it out of the score box, both ladies chuckled in astonishment. Although the awkward shot left them even further behind in the scoring, they had plenty to laugh about.

They, along with about 150 other senior citizens, were participants in the second annual Springfield Senior Citizens Olympics. The event, held Friday behind the Sarah Bailey Civic Center, featured bocce, shot putting, loop the bottle and a ball-tossing-by-mouth game. It was clearly a day for the seniors, whether they were participants or just spectators.

"It's wonderful. I always go for this type of thing," said Kubicka about having a special olympics for seniors. "The turnout's been very good. We even have our cheerleaders here cheering us on."

For Kubicka and Lupo, both great grandmothers, the event was clearly a day of excitement as they skipped around the lawn looking for new contests to enter.

However, the participants weren't the only ones excited about the event. August Caprio said he was happy "helping out." Although Caprio, a retired regional school district supervisor, didn't participate in any games, he was supportive of the others.

"It's another way to keep the senior citizens young, young at heart," Caprio said as he strolled around the lawn with note-pad in hand.

"Ironically, when Theresa Herkalo, the senior citizen coordinator, came up with the idea of an olympics two years ago, she said she was just making a "passing suggestion" and never thought the seniors would be interested. However, she said they "loved the idea" and made many of the plans themselves.

In fact, one of those planners, Madelyn Lancaster, said she came up with the idea of the mouth game reading a magazine article. The mouth game, a contest where participants have to toss a ball by mouth in a basket with a matching name, was popular among seniors with limited mobility.

Lancaster, a tall, energetic woman, helps out as Herkalo's assistant in addition to being secretary for the group. Before retiring, she was a bookkeeper for her husband's business and still uses her clerical skills organizing numerous trips and outings.

"She's so active, she tires me out sometimes," joked Herkalo. "Sometimes I have to tell her to go home and lie down."

Coordinating trips and functions for the seniors is no easy task. Herkalo says there are 600 active members, locally with a minimum age of 60. Consequently, the membership is so large that the organization is broken down into six smaller meeting groups. Currently, there are at least 15 pending trips listed on the civic center bulletin board ranging from a week-long excursion to California to the upcoming state fair in Cherry Hill.

But on Friday, everyone had their minds on the olympics. Just like the quadrennial games, the senior's event started with a participant running with a lighted torch and ended with awards and trophies. In between those times, however, oldsters had a chance to play, talk and eat together, thoroughly enjoying the years they worked long and hard to see.

"I think it's terrific," said Dorothy Williams as she launched a shot put down a measuring tape. "The people come out, even those who can only sit. When you have something like this, it brings everybody together."

Police nab 3 suspects in hold-ups

By JOHN A. GAVIN

The arrest of three men suspected of holding up the Carteret Savings Bank on Morris Avenue has helped police in the solving of more than 25 robberies within the last two years over a six-county area, according to Herbert H. Tate Jr., Essex County prosecutor.

A joint federal, state and local task force investigation on the wave of supermarket robberies in central and northern New Jersey has led to the arrest of three of the four men suspected in the Springfield robbery.

Arrested were Al Tazig, Watson, 26, 300 Tuxedo Parkway, Newark; Robert McNeal, 27, 85 Willoughby St., Newark; and Samuel Bennett, 30, 20 Hollywood Ave., East Orange. Another suspect, Jerome Springer of 1259 St. George Ave., Roselle, remains at large.

The men were arrested on May 22 in a pre-dawn raid by state police detectives, the FBI and local police. Police said they recovered two handguns, a sawed-off shotgun and approximately $4,500 in cash at Bennett's residence.

"As a result of intelligence information from the New Jersey State Police, the Essex County Prosecutor's Office and local police units, we were able to get them," said Detective Robert Mason of the Springfield police department. "When we showed a photo line-up, a number of witnesses were able to identify them."

On May 15, two of the suspects, armed with handguns, entered the bank in the Shop Rite supermarket. According to reports, one of the suspects approached a customer from behind a teller window and put his gun to her head and announced the robbery. The other handit went through the door connecting the lobby to the teller area and emptied the cash drawers and vault of its contents. Police said at least $10,000 was taken from the bank.

The suspects have also been charged with the December 1986 robbery of the Kings Supermarket in Millburn and the May 3 robbery of a Pathmark supermarket in South Orange. In addition, the men have been charged in the robbery of a McDonald's restaurant last month in Union.

According to Tate, there have been 23 supermarket robberies within a six-county area since January 1986. Additional charges have been filed in Essex, Hudson, Bergen, Middlesex and Passaic counties relating to robberies of supermarkets and two jewelry stores.

Board picks coaches

By JOHN A. GAVIN

Union County Regional High School Board members Tuesday approved the appointment of two coaches within the school system for next season.

George Hansen will become the boys basketball coach at David Brearley Regional High School and John LeDonne will become the head football coach at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School. The board members unanimously approved the decisions.

Hansen had been the assistant boys basketball coach at Brearley for five years. He is replacing Bill Berger who resigned after four years.

LeDonne takes over the coaching spot that Tony Policare vacated four months ago. Policare had been the head coach for five years.

LeDonne had been the assistant coach at Madison High School in Morris County for four years. Prior to that, he had been an assistant coach at Fairleigh Dickinson University in University. In addition, in 1978-79 he served as head football coach at Pope Pius High School in Passaic, a school which has now closed.

In another move, regional school board members formerly honored Bob Taylor for his selection as "teacher of the year" in the regional district. Taylor, who is the head football coach at Brearley, said he felt special gratification winning such an award as a coach.

"I was very honored by the award," explained Taylor, who attended the meeting with his wife, Annette, and two children. "I think it's an unusual award for a person in our department because most of the time we are more aligned with our athletic role than our role as an educator. We try to combine the responsibility academically and athletically to produce students who have talent in both areas."

Taylor, who has been at Brearley 13 years, has won the state championship the last two years. He has a bachelor's and master's degree from Trenton State College.

The award is run by the Commissioner of Education. Taylor will compete against other regional winners for the state honor.

In another move, the board approved the appointment of Clifford Lautherhahn as student assistance counselor for next season. Lautherhahn, who is a guidance counselor at Dayton, will work as counselor in all four schools in the Drug-Free Schools and Community Act Program.

In other business board members approved awarding bids, for industrial art supplies and home economic supplies for the four high schools and beauty and culture supplies for two of the high schools.

Board members unanimously approved 23 bids totaling $30,627.57 for industrial supplies and eight bids totaling $2,953.88 for home economics supplies. In addition, board members approved four bids totaling $4,883.44 for beauty supplies for Arthur L. Johnson and Brearly High School.

Nozza awarded for efforts

By JOHN A. GAVIN

When New Jersey residents see heavy equipment operators, operating engineers, and laborers wearing special protective clothing and using precautionary techniques at hazardous waste disposal sites throughout the state, they can thank Springfield's Pete Nozza.

Nozza, an analyst for the N.J. Department of Labor's Office of Customized Training and Technical Services, developed a training program for the department that emphasizes safety and health while working at waste disposal sites.

Nozza, who is based in Trenton, develops high technology training programs within the department to upgrade the skills of the labor force. He said the safety techniques he devised for the waste disposal program are "extremely critical because it affects the health and safety of anybody who works at a hazardous waste site."

"There are many very toxic chemicals that are either buried, in a lagoon, or whatever that have to be cleaned up," Nozza explained. "The workers are exposed to the vapors and whatever other toxic conditions these chemicals create so health and safety is extremely important."

For his efforts, Nozza recently received the annual "Accomplishment Award," which along with awards for "Public Service" and "Heroism" are presented by Gov. Thomas Kean to outstanding state employees. In fact, a senate resolution initiated by state Senator Louis Bassano was passed recognizing Nozza's professional expertise and commitment to the disposal of hazardous waste materials.

However, Nozza said he had a deeper gratification than winning the award. Nozza, a life-long New Jersey resident, said he has seen environmental abuse and was glad to personally be involved in waste disposal training.

"It's a very personal concern that I have; particularly for cleaning up hazardous waste sites here in New Jersey," Nozza said. "As a youngster growing up in Elizabethtown, I saw indiscriminate dumping and even at that very early age, just from the smells and the appearance of the chemicals, I knew that there was something radically wrong dumping that stuff into open fields."

Consequently, when the Alliance for Action Committee on Hazardous Waste approached the labor department in 1984 about a training course to enhance the state's ability to clean up hazardous waste, Nozza jumped at the opportunity.

At that time, Nozza said there were "no existing training programs of the type I wanted." In addition, he said most of the contractors working in the state were out-of-staters who brought in their own technicians and labor force.

Once assigned to the project, Nozza researched various training programs throughout the country before devising his plan. Nozza conferred with officials in the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, the U.S. and N.J. Department of Environmental Protection and the Army Corps of Engineers.

Nozza's course, "A Cooperative Effort in Preparing Trainees for Hazardous and Toxic Waste Site Operations," was jointly written with Dr. Thomas F. Dalton of the New Jersey Institute of Technology. The course, which is a comprehensive two-week training class, emphasizes health and safety procedures, site planning, protective equipment, transportation and disposal.

Nozza said the program is "unique" because it combines classroom training, hands-on training and field exercises. In addition, Nozza said trainees were able to practice in actual hazardous waste conditions using a heavy equipment operation training facility.

"We were able to simulate actual hazardous waste sites," Nozza said about using the Dayton facility. "We buried drums and tanks and created scenarios where we trained the personnel to perform specific activities that they would perform at a hazardous waste site."

Nozza said that his program is different from any hazardous waste training program in the country. Recently, he was invited to Washington, D.C., to present a paper on his program to a national conference sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency, the Tennessee Valley Authority and Pollution Engineering Magazine. In addition, televised accounts of his program have been shown throughout the country and in France.

Although Nozza's accomplishments have been recognized throughout the world, he said his biggest satisfaction has been doing something to combat the hazardous waste problem at home.

"I'm very much concerned about the future of New Jersey and concerned about the economy of the state," said Nozza. "I'm a New Jersey native, my children are here and my grandchildren are here."

"I'm very much concerned about the environment. And I will do whatever I possibly can to see that we develop a healthy environment for our future generations."

HONOREE—Springfield resident Pete Nozza receives a Senate Resolution from State Senator C. Louis Bassano, R-21st district, citing him for accomplishments with the Department of Labor.

Condition critical

The critical nature of the solid waste disposal crisis in New Jersey has prompted our legislators to institute mandatory recycling throughout New Jersey — a good move.

To comply with that legislation, Union County has come up with a sound regional recycling program aimed at reducing the volume of trash produced within its boundaries — another good move.

One of the keys to the county's solid waste management plan is the establishment and operation of a recycling center where three recyclable materials — glass, newspapers and aluminum — can be brought, processed and stored until sold. And therein lies the problem.

The County Utilities Authority has found what it believes is the ideal site for the center in a warehouse on Cox Street in Roselle — a move not looked upon favorably by Roselle officials, who reacted to the news by passing an ordinance prohibiting "this kind of operation" in the borough. Officials believe heavy truck traffic and vermin and insect infestation will have a detrimental effect on life in the small borough.

What is needed is for cooler heads to prevail and for residents and officials of Roselle to consider the following:

* The CUA notified borough officials of their plans to locate the recycling center in town as a courtesy to them — no variance or special permit is necessary. After being notified by the county authority, the borough passed an ordinance banning it and threatening not to issue a certificate of occupancy.

* The county has spent a lot of time speaking to officials about the facility and has now delayed the tentative opening date by two or three months to further explain the operation to residents.

* Roselle, like 14 other municipalities in Union County, has its own recycling program, in which one material, aluminum cans, is recycled. Under the mandatory recycling legislation, each community in the state must have a plan to recycle three materials by July 31, 1988. Will borough officials be able to handle the storing and selling of newspapers and glass in addition to the aluminum it now recycles? Perhaps it would be in the best interests of the community for Roselle, and the rest of the municipalities in the county, to join the regional program, along with Springfield, Union, Westfield, Summit, Cranford and Winfield.

* Recycling programs in Camden and Somerset counties are reporting success because of the cooperation of town officials and residents. A recycling center in the center of New Providence reportedly has not caused any problems for that community. Recycling can't succeed without cooperation from the people who are producing the trash.

* According to the CUA, recyclable materials, which will be picked up at curbside in special buckets, must be cleaned out and separated or they will not be taken. This stipulation has worked in Camden County, where homeowners who do not recycle don't have their garbage collected.

* The Roselle site is the only one of 18 sites in Union County which meets criteria set by the CUA for a recycling center: it is near mass transportation; convenient to the Union County Occupational Center, located in Roselle, which will provide staff for the center; has adequate space for storage of materials and has an adequate amount of space for trucks to drop off their loads and turn around.

* Finally, if all communities in Union County were to pass ordinances prohibiting operation of a county recycling center, how would the county comply with the state mandate?

We don't expect the plan to be popular with Roselle residents. But officials and residents alike should be aware of the critical nature of the problem and take into consideration that recycling is an efficient, economical and sound alternative to reducing some of the waste we produce.

Instead of expending energy to hinder the county plan, which is now on hold until the end of the summer, borough officials and the CUA should try to reach a compromise.

The CUA might offer the borough some incentives in the form of jobs at the center for Roselle residents, aid for road repairs or tax credits for being host to the facility.

The situation becomes more critical with each passing day. The Edgeboro and Hackensack landfills are on the verge of closing. The Resource Recovery plant being constructed in Rahway is not expected to open until 1990.

While recycling won't eliminate the need for disposal of trash at landfills or resource recovery centers, it will reduce the volume of garbage produced. That's better than nothing.

Without it, Union County could be swimming in its garbage all year long.

Was it necessary

What ever happened to news sensitivity? Did the television media need to so graphically describe the terrible death of the young boy in Brooklyn's Prospect Park Zoo? Did the world — and more importantly did his mother, loved ones and friends — need to know the polar bear had partially eaten the child?

Within hours of the tragic event, television interviewers were eliciting the gruesome details from medical examiners and police. It was determined that a hastily-performed autopsy would be necessary to learn whether the bear had also devoured the victim's two companions.

Within minutes, it appeared, from one newscast to the other the reports issued forth that the stomach contents had shown the partial remains of only one child.

Good grief! Were those frightful details absolutely necessary for the general public to hear? Has everyone been so desensitized by films such as "Jaws" and the writings of Steven King, that real-life drama has to be given nightmarish treatment?

How many youngsters have been terrified needlessly? How many parents have been filled with dread at the potential of losing a child in so violent a manner?

The tragic death of the little boy could have been said to have been the result of his being mauled and killed by the polar bear. Less colorful, but just as final. Certainly there would have been more dignity afforded the victim's family, rather than the shocking three-ring circus the news media provided.

'OOPS! SHASTA GOT THE ICE CREAM! Merryin Pinch looks worried but brother Fred knows they can get more at the annual strawberry festival continuing today from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in Connecticut Farms Presbyterian Church, Union.

Tips on filing for Social Security

Picture this... The time has finally come; you're almost 65. After 40 years of hard work, you're ready to retire. You head for your local Social Security office to apply for benefits. But when you get to the window at the monthly benefit check, it is much less than you anticipated. What happened?

It could have been any number of things. Perhaps you didn't give your employer your correct Social Security number. Or maybe your employer made a mistake when reporting your income. Then again, maybe it was the Social Security Administration who credited your earnings to someone else's Social Security record.

Sheer numbers tell the story. The Social Security Administration has well over 100 million Social Security contributors on file and each year receives some 200 million reports from employers and self-employed persons.

The New Jersey Society of Certified Public Accountants advises that there are a number of simple, preventive steps you may take to protect the benefits you are entitled to.

First, always exercise care when reporting your Social Security number to your employer. Keep your Social Security card handy and refer to it when supplying your number to an employer. If you lose your card, contact your Social Security office for a replacement.

Another good check is to verify the correctness of the W-2 you receive from your employer. Be sure your name, address and Social Security number appear correctly. The box marked "FICA Wages" should show the total earnings from which your employer withheld Social Security taxes. This is the amount of earnings that is entered on your Social Security record.

If any of the information on your W-2 is not correct, you must immediately notify your employer who should issue a corrected W-2. It's a good idea to keep all pay slips, check stubs and W-2 forms as proof of your contributions.

As a further precaution, you should periodically request a check of your Social Security record, a measure the Social Security Administration itself recommends you do at least every three years. Just call, visit or write your local Social Security office and ask for form SSA-7064PC, "Request for Statement of Earnings." The form is simple, you fill in your name, address, Social Security number, date of birth, signature and, if applicable, any other name or number you may have used.

As an added feature, you may also request an estimate of the monthly benefit you'll be entitled to when you reach 65 by writing on the card, "Please furnish benefit estimate." Of course, this estimate will only be used on the amount of earnings you currently have credited. So if your retirement is a long way off, this information isn't going to be very meaningful.

In six to eight weeks after mailing your card to the Social Security Administration, you'll receive a computerized statement showing all the earnings that have been credited up to the date stated. There is generally a one-to-two year lag in posting entries. The amounts credited for the three or four most recent years will be shown as separate yearly totals, while the amounts earned in previous years are shown as a lump sum. All earnings are added and shown as a grand total.

Compare the earnings shown for the most recent years with the amounts reported on your W-2s or self-employment records. If you suspect an error, contact your Social Security office immediately. In most cases, the official time limit for correcting mistakes on your earnings record is three years, three months and fifteen days after the year in which the wages were paid or self-employed income earned. Although there are exceptions to these time limits, it is in your best interest to check your record on a regular basis and promptly notify the Social Security Administration of any errors.

It will be up to you to provide the records necessary to substantiate your claim of an error. The Social Security Administration will need your employment records, including issues of employers, dates of employment and wages received. You'll be asked to show those W-2 forms you've been saving. By following these simple measures you can ensure that, when the time comes, you will get the benefits you are entitled to. With 97 percent of all workers said to have earnings covered by Social Security, almost every worker in America is a consumer of Social Security. # Garbage barge's plight no joke

For almost eight weeks people have watched as a barge loaded with garbage from Italy, Long Island, floats aimlessly between the Atlantic Seaboard and the Gulf of Mexico. This 3,000-ton barge of homeless garbage has been the subject of many news items and the butt of countless jokes. But the truth is that this garbage is indicative of a serious problem.

In fact, as Joanna Underwood, executive director of Inform, an environmental research group says, "We are running out of landfills and we really have no option but to come up with a responsible and sensible strategy to manage the incredible amount of garbage our society produces."

According to Underwood, some 410,000 tons of garbage are generated daily in this country — twice the amount of other countries with similar standards of living. Of that, 90 percent goes into our diminishing landfills, 8 percent is recycled and 2 percent is burned.

Underwood recently addressed the concerned citizens of Linden on environmental issues there.

The problem is obviously reaching crisis proportions and Inform doesn't see any time ago to study how the problem is approached and dealt with abroad. In Japan recently, Dr. Allen Herzkowitz, Inform's solid waste expert, found remarkable differences in solid waste management, reflecting a comprehensive approach that is lacking in the United States.

Among these differences are: CUA Serious commitment to recycling across the country, resulting in over 58 percent recycling of cans, bottles, newspapers, etc. CUA emphasis on pollution control, using every available method to make garbage incinerators as clean and safe as possible.

Extensive worker training for those working in and managing incinerators. Carefully planned and monitored landfills.

These findings are the result of visits to eight resource recovery plants in Japan and interviews and briefings with more than 30 Japanese government, industry, and environmental officials. The findings will be published in a report this summer.

In addition, Inform studied European plants and published a report, "Garbage Burning: Lessons From Europe," documenting the stringent environmental protection programs in place in five countries.

"Garbage Burning: Lessons From Europe," documenting the stringent environmental protection programs in place in five countries. "With the public eye so keenly focused on the national garbage crisis, perhaps it is a good time to take a more serious look not just at the problem — but at possible solutions," says Joanna Underwood. Inform has done extensive research in this crucial area and is interested in providing it to those concerned with this topic in the media and in the public.

Both Dr. Herzkowitz and Joanna Underwood are available for interviews. More information can be obtained by contacting Suzanne Wilson, media associate, (212) 689-4040.

Inform is a non-profit environmental research group whose purpose is to explore practices that cause serious environmental problems and then to evaluate particular constructive steps that may be taken by corporations, utilities and communities to reduce or eliminate these problems. In addition to their other research topics, Inform has been working for three years on solid waste management.

Their experiences and those of several other of the state's entrepreneurs are highlighted in the authority's 1986 annual report. The report examines the state's changing economy and the authority's contribution to New Jersey's growth. Particular attention is paid to the ailing manufacturing sector, the growing high technology and service industries, business expansion in the cities, agriculture, tourism and the film industry.

According to the report's financial highlights, the authority stimulated $55 million in private investment in 1986 through its various financing programs. This was achieved through $485 million in authority financing which are expected to add more than 6,000 permanent jobs and 7,900 construction jobs to New Jersey's labor market.

1986 was a challenge year for the authority due to the impact of pending and approved federal legislation on its Industrial Development Bond program. "Although proposed and final restrictions severely hampered the authority's ability to match the two previous years of billion dollar assistance," reports Authority Executive Director James J. Hughes Jr., "1986 still was a successful year in which notable achievements were recorded in all programs."

The authority continued to be the largest single issuer of small issue IDBs in the nation, issuing $179 million for 179 business projects. Since 1975, the EDA has issued about $1.2 billion in IDBs for almost 3,900 projects leading to more than $3.5 billion in private investment, 110,000 permanent jobs and approximately $4.2 billion in tax revenues. The activities of the authority's direct loan and loan guarantee programs, Trade Adjustment Assistance Center, and Urban Industrial Parks program are also highlighted in the report. Some program highlights for 1986 include: More than $12 million in direct loan and loan guarantees were provided to 45 small business projects, leading to the creation of 1,500 jobs while generating more than $25 million in private investment. The authority's award-winning Seaport Industrial Center in Elizabeth was completed with all public improvements dedicated to the city. The eight businesses located in the center are expected to yield $37 million in private investment, create an estimated 1,530 permanent jobs and generate $600,000 in annual tax revenues. Improvements were also completed at the authority's Airport Industrial Center in Newark which, when fully developed, is expected to provide 800 jobs.

Despite the suspension of the trade assistance center's operations until August 1986 due to federal funding uncertainties, the center still was able to assist 50 manufacturers in efforts to combat import competition. It also arranged more than $400,000 in consulting assistance for 20 companies. The report also contains a listing, by county, of all business projects which received financing assistance through the authority. Copies of the report are available from the Director of Public Affairs, 200 South Warren St., Capital Plaza One, CN-990, Trenton, 08625.

Rinaldo: U.S. school decline hurts

A senior member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo, R-N.J., today said U.S. competitiveness in world markets will continue to decline in the absence of a greater commitment to education and product improvement.

"Increased emphasis on education and a national resolve to restore pride in the 'Made in U.S.A.' label are critical to this nation's leadership in the international arena in the years ahead," Rinaldo said. "While the trade bill approved by the House will help assure freer and fairer trade, we need to turn out more scientists and engineers to develop the technology that will give the nation that all-important competitive edge."

The New Jersey Republican said he favors increasing funding for the National Science Foundation from $1.89 billion to $2.2 billion over the next five years. The foundation provides 25 percent of all federal support to the nation's colleges and universities for basic research.

He also called for congressional approval of legislation allowing individuals to make tax deductible contributions to education savings accounts to pay for a college education. The Rinaldo-backed bill would permit individuals to contribute up to $1,000 annually to education savings accounts.

"The higher priority we give to education the more vibrant our science and technology enterprise," Rinaldo said. "New technology will drive productivity and determine competitiveness. Since World War II, new technology has been responsible for nearly half of all productivity increases more than those due to more capital, more education, or any other single factor."

He noted that while productivity in the United States remains higher in absolute terms than anywhere else, in relative terms it has declined rapidly. From 1973 to 1983, U.S. productivity rose at an annual rate of three-tenths of one percent, while Britain's annual gain was almost five times that, and French and German productivity rose seven times as fast. Japan's rate was nine times and Korea's 15 times higher than the U.S. rate.

Education has been a factor in the productivity trend, according to Rinaldo, who said only about seven out of every thousand American students receive degrees in engineering, while in Japan the figure is 40.

"At the graduate level, over 50 percent of all engineering doctorates awarded by American universities since 1980 have gone to non-U.S. students," the congressman said, adding, "Foreign students have taken 30 to 40 percent of the doctorates in mathematics and physics in recent years, while the number of degrees to U.S. citizens is declining."

He said funding to the National Science Foundation is critical in the competitiveness campaign.

A completely unique shop

The last thing anyone might expect to find in a flea market is a store specializing in electronic keyboards, electric guitars and grandfather clocks.

Then again, the American Music Shop in the Union Marketplace isn't just another shop.

"This is a pretty unique little setup," said Bob Eilers of Toms River, who has been in business for a total of four years.

"There's nothing like this in a flea market," said Eilers.

The shop also carries a complete line of novelty items, coffee mugs, key chains and other memorabilia, all musically related.

And there is one other aspect of Eilers' business that makes it unusual.

"My major lines are American-made," he said. Although he does sell some high-priced items, the bulk of the merchandise in the American Music Shop is geared toward the younger crowd.

The store, for example, sells "some name brands, B.C. Rich guitars, Yamaha and Casio keyboards, but mostly discount brands."

Guitars start at the low price of $29.

"This is a beginner shop," Eilers explained. "We just try to keep everything to the beginner."

"I go towards the parents' side of it," Eilers said. "I say start with something small and then work their way up."

Eilers, though, doesn't stop at just selling the instruments. Each Saturday and Sunday, there are instruction classes from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Whenever we sell a piano or a keyboard, the lessons are free," Eilers said. "It's really quite unique."

And, the shop offers full-value tradeup on instruments for a full year after the initial purchase, so a parent buying an instrument can receive credit for the initial purchase price toward the purchase of a new instrument if the child shows an interest in progressing further in his musical training.

Most of all, however, Eilers tries to make the experience of buying and learning to play a new instrument, as well as the purchase of a clock, an enjoyable one for all involved.

"We make it fun," said Eilers, who also runs several other similar shops. "Heirlooms and music and all that is supposed to be fun."

Eilers clearly enjoys what he is doing. At the shop last Friday, he moved from one instrument to another, fiddling with the keyboards and lovingly strumming the guitars.

That attitude goes hand-in-hand with Eilers' overall philosophy toward young musicians and collectors.

"The overall philosophy could be summed up in one sentence: We're a shop for future musicians and family heirlooms," Eilers explained.

The American Music Shop is open Friday, Saturday and Sunday during the regular hours of the Union Marketplace on Springfield Avenue, Union.

White smash in superb Mill show

By BEA SMITH

Richard White, romantic lead in musicals and operettas, and a very special favorite at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, says his favorite show is "Annie Get Your Gun," which he opened in last week.

"My favorite show," he says between rehearsals of "Annie" at the Minskoff Theater in New York City, "is the one I'm doing at the present time. I've done so many fine musicals that each one is the best at the time I'm doing it."

"And," he says in a melodic southern drawl, "I feel the same about the musical numbers I have to do. With 'Annie Get Your Gun,'" he laughs, "we have one Irving Berlin hit after another. So, right now my favorite number is 'My Defenses Are Down,' which I just finished rehearsing with an enormous male chorus, and the sounds are terrific."

Later, perhaps, White might sound off on "There's No Business Like Show Business," or "They Say It's Wonderful" or "I've Got the Sun in the Morning" or "The Girl That I Marry." He might even consider the numbers presented by his lovable and talented co-star, Judy Kaye, who plays the leading role, as his second favorites. Her musical numbers include "Doin' What Comes Naturally" and "You Can't Get a Man With A Gun."

"Judy and I have done 'Annie' before; she in Miami, and I in Orange, Tex."

"It's a real big show," says White. "There are lots of sets and five costumes. But we have it down pretty well, even if it is complicated. Everything is going real well," he says assuringly.

It seems an enormous production such as the 41-year-old "Annie Get Your Gun" cannot be outdated. Originally, the stage version of Annie Oakley, the sharpshooter, containing a book by Herbert and Dorothy Fields and music and lyrics by Berlin, was brought to Broadway in 1946. It starred Ethel Mermaid as Annie and Ray Middleton as Frank Butler.

In fact, even before then, there was an early straight film version called "Annie Oakley" and starring Barbara Stanwyck in the title role.

"That was a little before my time," muses White. "Even though I don't like to see another production of what I'm doing or about to be doing, I did manage to see a tape of part of a version of 'Annie' with Mary Martin and John Raitt. It was just a little changed."

"Even though I don't like to look at movie versions of stage productions before I do them, a while back, I did see some film clips of Judy Garland doing 'Annie Get Your Gun.'"

White was talking about the film which began in 1950 with Garland in the lead. She did about a quarter of the movie for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer then had a nervous breakdown. The studio had to borrow Betty Hutton from Paramount Pictures and the film was made from scratch. It turned out to be one of the best MGM musicals and one of the best performances by Hutton.

"Actually," says White, "it's more interesting to work on a musical without looking at any previous production. You can create additional ideas. Otherwise, it's too much of a temptation. And you find you're using their ideas."

White is extremely pleased with his leading lady in the Paper Mill production of "Annie Get Your Gun."

"She is just wonderful! She has a wonderful attitude, she's very talented and she's a delightful person. Do you know that she got married just before rehearsals began? She married David Green. He's an actor, I believe."

The musical will be at the Paper Mill for six weeks, and White says this is his fifth time at the Paper Mill. "It's wonderful. It's like being back home in Oak Ridge, Tenn. Everybody is like part of a family. Actually, it's only a half-hour from my home in New York City, where I live with my wife, Sharon Halley, a choreographer, and our daughter, Amanda. It

She was exactly what the writers had written their musicals for. She's a joy to work with. I miss her. We haven't done a show in about a year, and we really like each other. I'm hoping that we can work together some time soon."

way revival of "The Most Happy Fella" and opposite Estelle Parsons in the Off-Broadway production of "Elizabeth and Essex," he also toured the United States as Lun Tha in the late Yul Brynner's company of "The King and I." He appeared in makes it nice and easy to get to and from the theater."

At the Paper Mill, White has starred in "Desert Song," "Carousel," "Show Boat" and "The New Moon." At the Millburn theater, he was paired with Judith MacCauley, another operatic singer, and they complemented each other so well in some of the productions that Paper Mill audiences were nicknaming them the new Nelson Eddy-Jeanette MacDonald team.

"I would love to do another show with Judith," White sighs. "I loved working with her at the Paper Mill. Judith is such an immaculate star.

White, who came to this production directly after a nine-week run at New York City Opera, where he did "South Pacific," had been asked by Beverly Sills to join him at City Opera after she had seen him do "Desert Song" at the Paper Mill. He made his New York City Opera debut as Tommy in "Brigadoon," followed by Robert in "The New Moon." "After 'Annie,'" said White, "I'll be going to Pittsburgh to do '1776,' then back to New York City Opera to appear as the Red Shadow in 'Desert Song.'"

White has appeared as Giorgio Tozzi in the Broad-regional theaters and opera companies around the country.

Would he like to appear in the movies, too?

"Absolutely," he exclaims. "I would love to do a film. But I need to be out on the coast for that. And right now, I have to take it as it comes. I hope to be in both places eventually."

"I've never done television, but I'm hoping to do that too. A lot of people have gotten experience doing soaps. The soap operas are as good as a training ground for actors."

'Annie' is top 'gun' tribute

By BEA SMYTH
The Paper Mill Playhouse's revival of the 41-year-old Irving Berlin-Herbert and Dorothy Fields musical, "Annie Get Your Gun," is a fantastic musical production that should teach Broadway a few lessons! It's this reviewer's favorite show, made better by the Paper Mill people and a real tribute to the 99-year-old Berlin, who has given audiences so much happiness through years of music.

And amazingly, the musical does not date itself; it holds its own after 41 more years.

One can blame it on Berlin, the Paper Mill, Judy Kaye, Richard White and the entire marvelous-sounding cast if members of the audience feel compelled to belt out "There's No Business Like Show Business" all the way to their cars following the explosive musical, ear-ringing climax of the show, and all the way home, sing and gesture at the top of their voices, "You Can't Get A Man With A Gun," or "The Girl That I Married" or "My Defenses Are Down" or "They Say It's Wonderful" or "I Got the Sun in the Morning" or "Anything You Can Do" or "I'm An Indian, Too."

It's a rube! It's a carnival. It's a wild west show! It's "Annie Get Your Gun," as cowboys, cowgirls and Indians race up and down the aisles to get the Millburn audiences into a willy festive mood.

White, an amazingly talented young man, a special favorite of Paper Mill audiences, with a God-given operatic voice that seems to sound better and better with each role, is the perfect Frank Butler; handsome, smooth-talking, sharp-shooting star of the touring Buffalo Bill Rodeo. His voice and his talents cause one to nearly forget the performances of his predecessors, Ray Middleton, who originated the role on Broadway in 1946, or stage performer, John Raitt, or even Howard Keel, who played the role in the movie version. It's during a July tour of the show and a stopover in the outskirts of Cincinnati in the late 1800s that the legendary Butler finds his match in a sharper-shooting ragamuffin of a girl, legendary Annie Oakley, beautifully played by Kaye, another Mill favorite.

Kaye, whose melodic operatic voice, very nearly matches White's, is physically reminiscent of Ethel Merman, who originated the role on Broadway. She portrays Annie with vim and vigor, spritely over with some sweet-sour vinegar and an overly-sensitive cream pudding.

The supporting cast, including Mary Ellen Ashley as Dolly Tate, Anthony DiIova as Chief Sitting Bull, Larry Grey as Charlie Davenport, Kenneth Kantor as Buffalo Bill and Christopher Wynkoop as Pawnee Bill, is exceptional. The youngsters on stage are delightful to behold and automatically find themselves upstaging the actors. And the voices of the entire "Annie" production are a joy to experience and appreciate.

Interestingly, and historically, Oakley and Butler had New Jersey roots. They built a home in Nutley in 1892, and according to Paper Mill information, the Annie Oakley archival material was provided by the Nutley Historical Society.

The costumes are colorful, sparkling, imaginative, thanks to Guy Geoly, costume designer, and Alice S. Hughes, costume coordinator. The scenery is so authentic that once more, at the Mill, it is vying for prominence with the rest of the creative qualities of the entire production. This time, thanks to Robert O'Hearn, scenic designer, and David Kissel, lighting designer. One scene is more original and outstanding than another, particularly, the 19th-century hotel in Ohio, the Pullman, packed in an Overland steam train, the fairgrounds at Minneapolis, Minn., the arena of the Big Top, the deck of a cattle boat, the spectacular-looking ballroom of the Hotel Brewster, the first route to Governor's Island, and Governor's Island itself. Congratulations, Paper Mill!

Also to be congratulated are D. J. Glagol, choreographer, who is making his Paper Mill debut with "Annie," and does an exceptionally fine job in the complicated "I'm An Indian, Too" scene, the marvelous musical director, Jim Coleman, and most of all, the inimitable director, Robert Johanson.

It appears to this reviewer that every one of Berlin's unique musical numbers is a favorite and that one cannot select just one from "Annie Get Your Gun," so, when members of the cast are rushed through one particular tune, omitting some very funny choruses, a reviewer can become very disappointed. The only flaw, it seems, is what appears to be a rush-through of "Doin' What Comes Natur'ly," rather than the original presentation of the outstanding number. Slow down and add to this musical number, Paper Mill, and you'll have an absolutely perfect end of season production.

Sadly, one must wonder when one will ever again see "Annie Get Your Gun." A temporary solution is to return to the Paper Mill again and again until the show closes on June 28.

After that, everything points to Angelo De Rossi, executive producer. A repeat performance next season? Or, how about the season after next?

His 15-minute break is up, and he turns back to another musical rehearsal. The orchestra music is tuning up for another big number, "There's No Business Like Show Business," and White stands tall and ready.

Atlantic City is set for summer

By TONY AUGUST
Memorial Day usually means kicking off the summer season and summer means resorts, and fun and water and that spells Atlantic City. Of course in these modern times they celebrate Memorial Day a week or so ahead of when I was a kid but it's okay it gets here faster. The point is summer is starting up right in the face and this promises to be the best one ever on the boardwalk in Atlantic City.

Now that Showboat has flexed its family concept muscles and is into its second month the rest of the hotels are outdoing themselves competing for your "yankee dollar." I mean the hotel casinos are gang'ho with entertainment goodies on every level including fabulous lounge acts, art exhibits, and innovative and creative promotions including big "Hollywood On Tour" festival. All this and the usual freshes; and comps, only this year on a much bigger scale.

Practically every hotel casino is upping the freebie lure and all this is good for you. I'll try to tip you off on where you can get the best for least. If you read this column you know that I have opinions on everything and no quibbles about sharing them with you. I think I know what I'm talking about and I'll be suggesting and recommending shows, acts, places and people to see and go to.

Casino confidential

Of course you don't have to listen to everything I suggest but you ought to listen to most of what I recommend. Nobody is perfect but 90 percent adds up to an A average. That is a Toney A, of course. For example: I strongly recommend you go to the Sands Hotel & Casino/Country Club for its salute to Hollywood on its 100th anniversary. Marilyn Monroe, Humphrey Bogart, Judy Garland, Clark Gable and many more Hollywood legends is featured in Universal Studios "Hollywood On Tour" exhibit, which opened for an extended run on June 1.

You'll see priceless treasures like Bogie's trenchcoat from Casablanca, Marilyn Monroe's shocking pink gown from "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes", Elvis Presley's blue velvet suit from "Viva Las Vegas" and Judy

Garland's ruby slippers from "The Wizard of Oz." I know this is one summer feature you'll love. I mean the price is right, it's free. You'll find the exhibit in the Red Carpet Winners Cafe on the first level of the Sands. "Hooney For Hollywood."

Another great show is "Sugar Babies" and you can catch it this summer in Atlantic City. You won't get Mickey Rooney and Ann Miller but Carol Lawrence is strictly a professional entertainer. You remember Carol Lawrence, "West Side Story" and Robert Gould's ex. Rip Taylor isn't Mickey Rooney but he's more than adequate for this burlesque fare.

Before I forget, the "War At The Shore", Jerry Conroy and Michael Spinks will bang heads June 15 and try and knock each other into the Atlantic Ocean at Trump Plaza's Convention Hall. Try and make this one. I'm betting Spinks is getting in over his head. There's much more but I'm out of space. Have fun this summer spend your vacation and some of your money in the best resort playground in the country, on the Boardwalk of Atlantic City.

BASKETMAKER Pamela Janus will teach her art June 11 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Washington Rock Girl Scout Council Building. For information, call 736-5831.

Plan basket-making class

Learn to make the traditional wall basket in just one evening. Pamela Janus will be in Westfield at the Washington Rock Girl Scout Council Building, 201 Grove St. June 11, 7 to 10 p.m. to teach basket making.

The Colonial Wall and Bobbin Basket was hung on the framework of the weavers loom. It made easy access to bobbins and shuttles. This attractive basket was also called a "comb basket" and hung on the wall next to the wash stand. It has many uses.

Pamela Janus is on tour from Arkansas and in the area for the month of June only. She has been weaving baskets using natural fibers for 16 years. Janus has demonstrated basketry at restaurants and schools. She has conducted workshops and seminars at art centers and museums throughout the country including the Smithsonian's National Museum of Design and the Museum of American Folk Art. She was also invited to live with the Jicarilla Apache Indians in New Mexico.

Her shop is located in Kingston, Arkansas and specializes in providing hand-gathered natural materials through mail order.

Another class will be held at the same location on June 18, 7 to 10 p.m. featuring the Harvest Basket.

Participants will weave this basket which could carry spring flowers or early vegetables. It is also a perfect holder for magazines or mail.

For more information on times and location of the above classes or others in the nearby area, please call 736-5831.

Supposedly, it was "Indelicate" for a Victorian woman to mention her pregnancy, even to her mother, though they might sew on baby clothes together. In the 1860s, marriages and deaths were reported in the newspapers but not the births of children. Even in their diaries, Victorian women did not openly write about their pregnancies but spoke of being "ill" while childbirth resulted in spending several weeks as an "invalid."

The society notes that christening dresses should be washed in cold, distilled water and, if badly soiled, allowed to soak for several hours, changing the water occasionally. MCHS uses a special, low suds, soap product called "Orvis," which can be ordered from a conversation supply firm. Bleach should not be used but the dresses can be whitened by letting them dry in the sun, as the Victorian did (besides, a few stubborn brown spots will attest to its history).

Starch should be used only when the dress is to be worn and should be washed out before storing because it may well cause the fabric to tear along creases. At Acorn Hall, christening dresses are wrapped with acid-free tissue paper and stored in acid-free cardboard boxes, according to museum conservation practices. If acid-free tissue is unavailable, plain white tissue paper, because it is low in acids (which come from wood pulp), could be used.

Victorian sewing in exhibit

"Labors of Love," an exhibit of Victorian christening dresses, has opened at Acorn Hall, the headquarters of the Morris County Historical Society. Thirteen of these special dresses are displayed on the elaborate embroidery adorning them can be easily viewed by visitors.

The dresses, many of them handmade and embroidered, are family treasures, often handed down through several generations before being given to the Morris County Historical Society. Others, dating between 1850 and 1900, have been loaned for this exhibit by friends and members of the society.

The christening dresses will be on exhibit until early July. Acorn Hall at 88 Morris Ave., Morristown, is open for tours on Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sundays, 1:30-4 p.m., with the last tours scheduled half an hour before closing time. Special arrangements can be made for groups tours at other times.

The Victorian woman was expected to be an expert needle woman, to sew a fine seam as well as embroider exquisitely. Hours were devoted to "English Whitework" with the finest stitches adorning the long, white gowns created especially for christenings. These were works of art, designed to show off a woman's creativity with needle and more than 3 feet long, allowing more than adequate space for such a display.

Although the sewing machine, invented in the late 1840s, freed the Victorian woman from the drudgery of plain sewing, many christening dresses were made entirely by hand. For others, the main seams might be run up on the machine but many of the elaborate details were still hand done. However, even before the middle of the 19th century, machine-made eyelid embroidery could be purchased for insertion. Rows of tucks in the skirts could be stitched either by machine or by hand, using the finest of thread, while lace was also machine or hand made.

Perhaps the finest of all embroidery was "Ayrshire Needlework," with lace stitches (made with needle and thread) filling the cut-out spaces in the muslin. The name comes from the county in Scotland where this type of needlework originated. The style of these baby dresses or robes, when the 1830s fashion was worn by women, with an inverted triangle for the bodice. Another triangle was inset into the front of the skirt and edged with a flat frill on each side.

Often the sleeves of such baby dresses were puffed and off-the-shoulder. After the Civil War, cheaper machine embroidery from Switzerland imitating the eyelid holes and lace-stitch "wheels" of white Ayrshire needlework, undercut the price of this Scottish handwork in the United States.

Christening dresses made in the style of these Ayrshire gowns were converted because the placement of the triangle pointed on the bodice conveyed by code the sex of the infant: if the point were worn outside and over the waistband, the baby was a boy but if tucked inside this indicated the wearer was a girl.

The costume collection of the Morris County Historical Society includes one of these "Ayrshire" christening dresses.

Tomato growers get tips

James Niczmadowicz, program associate in agriculture at Rutgers Cooperative Extension Service of Union County says, "Nothing tastes better than a fresh, vine-ripe New Jersey tomato. Fortunately it's also one of the easiest vegetables to grow in the home garden."

The following tips will help get tomatoes off to a good start this year. The earliest tomatoes should be planted in May 15, but gardeners may plant up to the third week of June. Jet Star, Pilecki, Big Girl, Supersonic, and Ramapo all do well in Union County. Plants should be located in full sunshine and need at least 6 to 8 hours of direct sunlight a day to do their best.

Gardeners should prepare the soil before planting and should cover the planting site with a 1 to 2 inch layer of peat-moss, compost or old manure; one-half cup of 5-0-5 for each plant that will go into the area; and after spreading these materials, they should work them into the top 8 to 10" of soil with a pitch-fork or shovel. Place plants at least 3 feet apart. Two well-spaced plants will outproduce four crowded anyway. Cage or stake plants.

Bright new country artist

By MILY HAMMER
Best of the new LPs, "Lonely Days, Lonely Nights," by Patty Loveless (MCA Records).
When noted country writer Jack Hurst included Patty Loveless in his list of six new Nashville artists to watch in 1987, he confirmed what MCA Records first heard in Patty: a shining promise to become one of country music's brightest new female stars.
Patty's story is every bit as country as the music she sings. She is one of eight children of a Pikeville, Kentucky miner. Her youthful fascination with music led her to begin writing songs before she reached her teens and to begin singing professionally at age 12.
When she was 14, her older brother, and sometime singing partner, Roger, brought Patty to Nashville for the first time. With 30 of her songs under her arm, she knocked on Porter Wagoner's office door. "I just walked right into his office," she recalls, "those were the days you could still do that."

they felt she was still too young and inexperienced to pursue a recording career.

Shortly after high school graduation, Patty moved to North Carolina and spent the next 10 years singing in hotels, nightclubs and at fairs. During that time, most of the bands she sang with were rock, but in 1968 she returned to her songwriting with renewed dedication. She began again to dream of a recording career.

"I always wanted to make records. It was just something I couldn't get out of my system. And I've always loved country music. It suits my voice, and it's what I feel most at home with."

Deciding to make one more try, she returned to Nashville in the spring of 1985 and recorded a five-song demo. Brother Roger began circulating the tape and quickly several Nashville labels expressed serious interest. Tony Brown, VP of A&R at MCA Records, got a promise from Roger that Patty wouldn't sign with another label until Tony had a chance to play the tape for other MCA executives. Less than two months after recording the demo, she was signed to the label. No one was more surprised than Patty, who was prepared for a long stint of knocking on doors.
Included on her debut album are two of Patty's compositions, "Sounds of Loneliness" and "I Did," written when she was 17 and featuring a recitation written by Harlan Howard. Guy Clark, contributes a tune, and Steve Earle and guitar ace Richard Bennett co-wrote another.

Your Horoscope

For week of June 4-10 (3/21-4/19) You will finally have the energy and motivation to tackle that long-neglected domestic chore. By this week's end, you'll be well-rewarded for your efforts and will be quite pleased. The weekend is favored for socializing and fun activities.

TAURUS (4/20-5/20) Your communicative powers are at a high point right now, so discuss this to your advantage. Someone close to you has been somewhat resistant but finally come around and all misunderstandings will be cleared up. Go out this weekend and buy something to pretty up your home for the coming summer season.

LEO (7/23-8/22) Ignoring that dreaded task before you won't make it go away, nor will it be the job done. Pull up your sleeves and get to work. You'll be happy once everything's completed and out of the way. Social activities are in the works for the weekend.

SCORPIO (10/23-11/21) Stop digging your heels in on that project and listen to what co-workers are trying to say. Their plans could very well lead to the ultimate success you've all wanted. Vacation plans will take more substantial form as you sort through options. Financial concerns will only be temporary, so don't dwell on them.

SAGITTARIUS (11/22-12/21) Timidity and self-questioning should be avoided now. You're more than able to undertake the career opportunity you'll be given, so plunge in and get to work. Careful investigation of a financial matter will prove to be in your advantage. The weekend is best spent alone with your special someone.

CAPRICORN (12/22-1/19) You can be good at avoiding subjects you'd rather not discuss, but now is the time for some honest communication with a loved one, no matter how painful for you. You will find this week that money and friendships aren't what they once were. The weekend will bring a happy resolution to the week's concerns.

AQUARIUS (1/20-2/18) A troubling matter early in the week at work will be resolved by Friday. Once this is out of your way, you'll be ready to celebrate over the weekend. The stars are heavily favored for romance. If single, you just might meet that very special person.

PISCES (2/19-3/20) Those who are in the fields of writing or education will be on a creative roll this week. Others will also have heightened senses of intuition allowing for more success. The weekend is a good time to spend with family. Start planning your vacation.

LEO (7/23-8/22) You can sometimes be somewhat impulsive. However, avoid plunging into that home improvement activity you've thought of. Plan it thoroughly first. An extra burst of energy this week will prove fruitful at work. A message from a distant friend will be good news.

LIBRA (9/23-10/22) You can sometimes be somewhat impulsive. However, avoid plunging into that home improvement activity you've thought of. Plan it thoroughly first. An extra burst of energy this week will prove fruitful at work. A message from a distant friend will be good news.

SAGITTARIUS (11/22-12/21) Timidity and self-questioning should be avoided now. You're more than able to undertake the career opportunity you'll be given, so plunge in and get to work. Careful investigation of a financial matter will prove to be in your advantage. The weekend is best spent alone with your special someone.

CAPRICORN (12/22-1/19) You can be good at avoiding subjects you'd rather not discuss, but now is the time for some honest communication with a loved one, no matter how painful for you. AQUARIUS (1/20-2/18) A troubling matter early in the week at work will be resolved by Friday. Once this is out of your way, you'll be ready to celebrate over the weekend. The stars are heavily favored for romance. If single, you just might meet that very special person.

PISCES (2/19-3/20) Those who are in the fields of writing or education will be on a creative roll this week. Others will also have heightened senses of intuition allowing for more success. The weekend is a good time to spend with family. Start planning your vacation.

LEO (7/23-8/22) You can sometimes be somewhat impulsive. However, avoid plunging into that home improvement activity you've thought of. Plan it thoroughly first. An extra burst of energy this week will prove fruitful at work. A message from a distant friend will be good news.

Summerfest agenda

Fifty-eight performances in 53 days, including three new plays, a wide range of concerts, and the Metropolitan Opera performing "La Boheme" will be presented at Rutgers University this summer in a major celebration of the arts.

Rutgers Summerfest also will include dance performances and art exhibits, says John Bettendorfer, dean of Rutgers' Mason Gross School of the Arts and artistic director of the festival.

"Rutgers Summerfest is an outburst of joy—reflecting our program at Mason Gross School and the ties to the art world," says Bettendorfer. "As a professional school of the arts, Mason Gross School places a strong emphasis on performance. Part of our philosophy is to bring together our students with professionals in the arts."

Festival highlights include a free performance of "La Boheme" by the Metropolitan Opera with orchestra, chorus and soloists at 8 p.m. July 3 on the Wood Lawn grounds at Douglass College, New Brunswick. The event is sponsored by Chemical Bank and Horizon Bancorp.

The Summerfest will feature three new plays produced by the professional Levin Theater Company during its 10th summer in residence at Rutgers, Music From Anton Magna performing music from Restoration England on period instruments; dance concerts by the Princeton Ballet and the Don Redlich Dance Company; and performances by pianists Ilana Vered, Ivan Moravec, Lillian Kalir, Kenny Barron, Russell Sherman and Theodore Levin with cellist Bernard Greenhouse.

Other concert attractions will be the Tokyo String Quartet, the Kallistein-Laroc-Robinson Piano Trio, an evening of contemporary music with Charles Wuorinen, the Jupiter Symphony conducted by Jens Nygaard, and the Orchestra of St. Luke's—conducted by Julius Rudel.

For students and teachers of art music, Rutgers will offer the Summerfest Piano Institute under the direction of international virtuoso pianist Ilana Vered and flutist James Scott, featuring three weeks of intense piano workshops and a roster of distinguished artists. Also planned is the exclusive Anton Magna Academy under the direction of Raymond Erickson.

Running from mid-June through early August, Rutgers Summerfest events include more than 50 performances in air-conditioned theaters at the Rutgers Arts Center, George Street at Route 18 in New Brunswick, Rutgers Summerfest is produced by the Mason Gross School of the Arts, the arts conservatory at New Jersey State University.

Bill helps homeownership

The passage of a housing bill by the U.S. Senate indicates that the nation's lawmakers are working toward preserving homeownership opportunities, according to the National Association of Realtors.

Through a 71-27 vote March 31, the Senate approved a bill keeping intact the accessibility of federal mortgage insurance programs that NAR feels are crucial in helping people finance homes.

"I think the Senate used good judgment and insight in coming up with this bill. It could become a victory for homeowners across the nation," says 1987 NAR President-Elect Nestor R. Weigand Jr. "I feel this has signaled to the House (of Representatives) that the housing issue having the beginnings of a housing policy is important."

Passage of the bill came two weeks after NAR, the National Association of Home Builders and the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, presented Congress with a jointly-sponsored housing policy. Included in the housing bill were several of the policy's proposals concerning federal mortgage programs. "The Senate action certainly encompasses some-important aspects of housing for buyers and sellers," Weigand says. One provision permanently authorizes the Federal Housing Administration to insure home loans. This would eliminate agency shutdowns resulting from waiting for Congressional re-authorization. FHA, a division of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, was forced to temporarily halt service to homebuyers six times in 1986.

Another measure permits the HUD secretary to increase FHA's mortgage insurance limit for single-family homes from the current maximum of $90,000 to $101,250 in agency-designated, "high-cost" areas. FHA's national limit, set by Congress in 1977, is $87,500, with increases generally made for areas with median prices above that figure. The $90,000 maximum was Congressionally mandated in 1979.

Other provisions in the Senate housing bill would prevent increasing up-front closing costs for applicants of mortgages insured by FHA. It would also bar raising existing fees or imposing new fees for lenders who sell mortgages to the Federal National Mortgage Association, Government National Mortgage Association and to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

Poll shows split

In an informal opinion survey, 33 of the state's prominent government, business and media leaders expressed the belief that the forthcoming November election will result in continued control of the State Senate by Democrats and of the Assembly by Republicans.

The poll, conducted by Coleman & Pellet Inc., a Union-based public relations firm, took place on Jan. 30 in Washington, D.C.

Survey participants also predicted that the leading campaign issues of the 1987 race will be solid waste disposal, auto insurance reform and state aid to municipalities.

In response to other questions regarding state government, the majority of percent believes that the Senate and Assembly will achieve a compromise on auto insurance reform. Sixty-four percent do not believe that New Jersey will have a lieutenant governor, and 67 percent do not see a future for "initiative and referendum" balloting.

Industrial market sales steady

In these times of ever fluctuating real estate markets, it's close to impossible to predict what will happen. The tax laws are changing and interest rates are going up and down. However, the industrial real estate market in New Jersey does not seem to be as affected by all this as it is by the Environmental Clean-up or Responsibility Act which took effect on Dec. 31, 1985.

In a recent interview with Elmer Schwartz, president of the Archie Schwartz Company, the East Orange-based Realtor notes a pessimistic outlook towards factory and warehouse closings, as compared to the banner year of 1986. "While demand for space is excessive, the Environmental Clean-up Responsibility Act demands imposed on owners and tenants have tied up transactions for many months, thus inhibiting and preventing the closings of many deals," claims Schwartz. According to the Realtor, there are thousands of employees being held up in transfers to larger facilities, being bottlenecked by inability to close on transactions.

The frustration is that New Jersey seems to have been immune to problems confronting other parts of the country because demand for space is still at an all-time high. Without the current ECRA problems, Schwartz feels that the current volume of business would even exceed the firm's record year of 1986, in which there were over 100 completions involving 20 million square feet of industrial real estate and corporate office space, representing more than $500 million in transactions.

According to Joseph R. Douglass, the in-house ECRA procedural director for the firm, the ECRA program has some major problems. "Perhaps the most prominent problem is that NJDEP has not devoted sufficient personnel to properly manage the program. Each experienced ECRA case manager is presently assigned far more cases than he can efficiently manage, yet there is still a substantial backlog of applications considered complete by NJDEP sitting in a file drawer unassigned."

Furthermore, while the regulated community must meet tight time frames for submission of applications, sampling plans, clean up plans, etc., there is no legal restriction on NJDEP's review time for each of these submissions. It is common for an applicant to submit a sampling plan, then wait in excess of six months for NJDEP comments. Meanwhile, if there is a contamination problem, it is allowed to exist and spread a greater threat to public health and the environment.

"The ECRA regulations presently provide no exclusions for businesses handling small quantities of hazardous substances. Much of NJDEP's limited resources are spent on sites that pose little or no threat to the environment, while the major problems remain unassigned or unaddressed. NJDEP does not officially recognize that fixed clean-up criteria cannot be uniformly applied. Extensive ground water investigations are often required in areas where ground water is not a viable source of drinking water. While we agree that gross contamination should not be allowed to remain," states Douglass, "the difference between this type of area and an area that does depend upon ground water for potable purposes must be recognized. NJDEP's limited resources must be applied so that they will provide the maximum return in terms of benefit to the public health and the environment."

The proposed new ECRA regulations attempt to address some of the major problems that presently exist. However, according to Douglass, "We feel that they do not go nearly far enough to make the ECRA program a timely program. As long as these problems exist, ECRA will continue to cause major delays in many industrial and commercial real estate transactions. The best advice we can presently give to anyone affected by ECRA is to watch the New Jersey Register for the proposed new regulations, which should be published for public comment this month and make comments to NJDEP to help improve the program."

While the industrial market demands continue to increase, there are some who feel there is a glut of office space in New Jersey. The low interest rates and previous tax laws served as a catalyst for developing new corporate office buildings. However, the ever increasing "service society", lawyers, doctors, consultants, etc., making their headquarters in New Jersey, keeps the demand for space high.

Setting the right price tips

Homeowners who have finally decided to sell their homes have just one problem — setting the right asking price.

Few decisions connected with the selling of a home cause more anxiety than setting an asking price. Ask too high, and real estate professionals warn, you may price yourself out of the market. If you set the price too low in hopes of a quick sale, you may be left with the nagging feeling that you could have negotiated for thousands more.

What then is the most effective way of arriving at an asking price that will yield the best results within your time frame?

Careful market analysis is the key, say CENTURY 21 real estate professionals. When it comes to setting an asking price, they add, even the most sophisticated homeowners tend to be guided by emotions rather than objectivity, so it is always best to seek professional advice.

"There is nothing tougher than setting a value on your own home," says Carolyn Weber, vice president of Regional Development, Century 21 of the Northeast.

The most efficient and inexpensive way to arrive at a fair price is to contact one or more reputable brokers with experience in your neighborhood for an evaluation. Most brokers will provide a current market analysis free of any obligation.

CENTURY 21 offers the following guidelines for homeowners. Once the broker you have contacted about your house has supplied a figure, he should also willingly provide you with details about how the figure was obtained.

These details should always include price information for comparable properties in the neighborhood sold within the last few months. Size, age, location and layout are factors taken into account when determining comparables. The current state of the market, interest rates and the seller's time frame may also have an effect.

The homeowner should also expect the figure to include adjustments for the condition of the home, for any modifications made to the interior or exterior, and for improvements or drawbacks, such as an outdated kitchen or appliances.

A special factor this spring is the unprecedented rise of property values in many metropolitan area suburbs. Therefore, the comparables supplied by a broker must be very up-to-date.

When it comes down to it, though, CENTURY 21 professionals caution that two factors always stand out — area and address.

"In setting accurate home values, location is still the biggest price influence," says Weber.

Sales prices continue to climb

Median prices for existing single-family homes ranged from a low of $51,700 in the Grand Rapids, Mich. metropolitan area to a high of $170,000 in the Boston metropolitan area during the first quarter, according to the latest quarterly survey of 51 metropolitan areas by the National Association of Realtors.

The metropolitan areas of Louisville, Ky., with a median resale home price of $83,100, Toledo, Ohio, with a median resale-home price of $53,700, Akron, Ohio, with a median of $64,700, and Buffalo/Niagara Falls, N.Y., with a median of $55,000, also ranked among the areas with the lowest median prices for a previously occupied home during the first quarter.

In addition to the Boston area, the metropolitan areas with the highest resale-home prices in the association's first-quarter survey were: New York/Northern New Jersey/Long Island, with a median of $169,400; Orange County, Calif., with a median of $156,100; Hartford, Conn., with a median of $138,000; and Los Angeles, with a median of $130,100.

"Results of this survey underscore the dominant influence location has on real estate values," notes William M. Moore, president of the National Association of Realtors.

"More than ever before, home prices and appreciation rates depend on where you are. Homebuyers and sellers in the Northeast are experiencing a much different market scenario than those in many of the southern cities," Moore says.

"Clearly, housing markets throughout most of the country are doing well, with markets in the Northeast continuing to outpace the rest of the nation in terms of price appreciation," John A. Tuccillo, NAR's chief economist, says.

"However, we are seeing some slow down in the rate of price increases in the more congested areas of the Northeast," Tuccillo adds. Increases or decreases in the median home price for a metropolitan area may be due to a change in the size of homes sold, rather than a change in the price of similar homes.

The National Association of Realtors predicts that the nationwide median resale-home price will climb about 4 percent this year.

Says liability crisis looms

The liability insurance crisis threatens the economic viability of the real estate industry, and property managers could be forced to cut back on some of the essential services they provide to their clients, according to the Institute of Real Estate Management.

"As a result, he says, property owners and managers face the real possibility of losing their hard-earned assets to the American sport of litigation." Livingston's remarks appear in the article, "The Liability Insurance Crisis and Property Management," in the March/April issue of the Journal of Property Management.
