Fail to submit to fingerprinting Subs snub law

By JOHN A. GAVIN

The majority of the Union County Regional District No. 1 employees who were dropped from the employment rolls last month still haven't been reinstated. Tuesday night, at a Union County Regional District Board of Education meeting held at David Brearley Regional High School in Kenilworth, Assistant Superintendent Charles Bauman said that "only six or seven" of the 16 employees who were cut from the employment rolls in September have been reinstated.

Last month's cuts were made in compliance with a state statute which requires that new school employees be fingerprinted for a criminal history background check by Sept. 1. In that act, school board members dropped 11 substitute teachers—two coaches, a substitute interpreter, a substitute English and a pipe band director. Bauman said that those workers can be rehired once they submit to the fingerprinting requirements. The application for fingerprinting costs $25 and the state only accepts a certified check or money order.

In the business portion of the board meeting, school board members took the following actions:

- Approved a field trip to Quebec City, Canada in February for French students at Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School in Clark. The trip, which is scheduled for Feb. 11-15, is planned to acquaint the students with the culture of a French-speaking region as well as to give them the opportunity to experience the language in a French environment.
- Approved the submission of a grant for federal funding for $12,700. The proposal calls for the purchase of equipment for the four instructional media centers of the district. Included will be the purchase of copy machines for the Jonathan Dayton Regional High School and David Brearley Instructional Media Centers.
- Approved sending 34 students and five advisors to attend the Columbia University Scholastic Press Conference in New York City on Nov. 2. Anticipated costs of the trip will be $346 for the students and advisors and $376 for rental of a bus to and from New York. Funds are available within the school budget.
- Approved sending Robert Whelan, department supervisor of English at Brearley, to participate in the annual conference of the National Council of Teachers of English in Los Angeles. The conference will be held from Nov. 20-25.
- Approved sending Cliff Lauterbach, student assistant counselor, to participate in the annual conference of the Association of Student Assistance Professionals of New Jersey in Ocean City. That conference is scheduled for Oct. 25-27.
- Approved sending Kathryn Zigmont, teacher of English and German at Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School in Clark, to participate in a workshop on

Positan's opportunity is 'worth a million'

By JOHN A. GAVIN

Forty-three years ago, when the U.S. Navy commissioned the USS Key West, a patrol frigate, off to the Mediterranean Sea during World War II, one of the crew members was Vincent Positan. Last month, when the Navy commissioned its newest nuclear submarine, a $75 million attack vessel named the USS Key West, one of the passengers on its maiden voyage was Positan, a Springfield resident.

For Positan, it was a chance to ride on one of the nation's most advanced weapon deployment systems. The Key West, which is a Los Angeles class attack vessel, is capable of launching Tomahawk cruise missiles and Harpoon guided missiles. As expected, some of those capabilities and features are classified information, but Positan says that he and the other guests were "allowed" to visit the unrestricted areas of the vessel while making the trip, which took 2½ days.

"We were allowed to have free run of the submarine and we were allowed to go anywhere basically in the unrestricted areas," says Positan, a 62-year-old businessman who owns a janitorial service. "We were allowed to go to the control rooms and some rooms and basins and see the whole operation and saw the basics of how the crewmembers live."

As can be imagined, the attack submarine is quite different from the 1,400-ton patrol frigate he served on after joining the service in July 1945. During that era, Positan was a signalman, "who" sent codes to neighboring ships by using flags and blinking a semaphore light. Today's new submarines communicate with electronic radio devices and computers. In fact, the new submarine has no windows and is guided completely by computers and electronic guidance systems.

Positan was actually a member of the Coast Guard, which was under the Navy's authority during war time. He says that his ship used to lead convoys of supply vessels supporting Allied war efforts in Italy and North Africa. Ironically, his only link to submarines at that time was when ships in his convoy would skirmish with German U-boats.

"The big threat at that time was all in the Atlantic," says Positan, reflecting back on those war years. "That's where the submarines were working in wolfpacks. They were looking to sink merchant shipping."

Positan's ship was not the first Naval vessel to be named after the Florida city. The first USS Key West was a stern wheel wooden gunboat commissioned in May 1833 during the Civil War. That vessel was involved in several battles in support of the Union forces and was lost in action in November of that year. Positan's ship was decommissioned in June 1946.

Although it's been over 40 years since he donned his navy blue Coast Guard uniform, Positan says it was

Businesses move ahead on recycling

With mandatory recycling now in effect in Union County, the business community is moving ahead in its efforts to comply with the necessary requirements.

"Businesses, both large and small, must separate recyclables from their non-recyclable garbage," according to Joan Buhrendorf, district recycling coordinator. "The State Department of Environmental Protection has informed garbage haulers not to collect containers that hold substantial amounts of recyclable materials."

Businesses and institutions in the county must recycle newspapers, glass bottles and jars, aluminum beverage containers, clean corrugated cardboard—non-food containers—and high-grade office paper, such as computer print-outs, white stationery, photocopy paper and tabular cards.

While most office paper is recyclable, certain materials should be avoided, including magazines and books; glossy paper; envelopes, because the glue impedes the recycling process; carbon paper; plastics; colored paper, and cellophane.

"Large corporations, those with 100 or more employees, should have no problem disposing of their recyclable materials," says Buhrendorf. "Because they produce large volumes of high-grade paper, most waste paper dealers will be eager to come to their premises and pick up their materials."

Businesses and institutions, including hospitals, schools, colleges and libraries, interested in beginning office paper recycling programs can contact their municipal recycling coordinators for brochures on the types of paper that can be recycled and how the paper can best be collected within the office.

Many Union County municipalities are taking steps to help businesses and institutions also published an advertisement in a local newspaper, alerting businesses to the program.

Summit, a city of 21,074 residents, focuses its recycling program for businesses and institutions on two materials: high-grade office paper and corrugated cardboard. Since July, it has offered its businesses daily curbside pick-ups of corrugated cardboard. It also provides a trailer where office paper can be delivered. The trailer is located in a parking lot on Maple Street and is open Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 3-6 p.m., and Wednesdays, from 11 a.m.-2 p.m.

Businesses and institutions located in Summit can dispose of other recyclables at the city's recycling center on New Providence Avenue.

Bob Lee, the city's recycling coordinator, says that the curbside pick-up of corrugated cardboard has netted the township an average of 4.5

Citizens sound off over area aircraft noise

Area residents and elected officials had their say Monday night about increased aircraft noise from Newark Airport at a special meeting of the Assembly Airport Noise Abatement Study Committee, which was held at the municipal building in Union.

The committee, an ad hoc panel of members of the New Jersey Legislature, is seeking to develop a workable solution to the problem of aircraft noise in Union and Essex counties, caused by the Federal Aviation Administration's recent Expanded East Coast Plan.

Assemblywoman Maureen Ogden, R-Union/Essex, chairman of the committee, presided over the meeting, and was joined on the dais by fellow committee member Assemblyman Peter J. Genova, R-Union, and Senator Louis Bassano, representing the 21st District, and Senator John H. Ewing, representing the 18th District of Somerset County.

Other committee members not present at the meeting include Assemblymen Nicholas Felice, R-Bergen, Willis Brown, D-Essex, and D. Brian Masur, D-Bergen.

The East Coast Plan, which debuted back in February, established new flight plans for commercial aircraft using Newark Airport. It was designed to reduce delays and improve passenger handling at that location.

Nearly a dozen residents of Cranford, including Mayor Paul LaCorte, gave lengthy and frequently emotional testimony concerning the impact of continual aircraft noise in their area. Each speaker received a hearty round of applause from the approximately 50 people who attended the meeting.

Several residents reported hearing airplanes fly over their homes every 30 seconds, disrupting virtually every aspect of their lives, and causing them considerable stress.

"We can't sleep, we can't eat, we can't be outside without this constant roar, ... and the aftermath from one goes right into the other," resident Barbara Kruse remarked.

"We are taking the losses for the economic gain of the air industry," Diane Zawalich, another longtime Cranford resident, expressed concern over the narrow scheduling of flights and the possible consequences to area residents should two planes ever impact over Cranford.

LaCorte reported receiving "a number of phone calls from residents who are complaining about the noise. He said that the quality of life has definitely been diminished by the noise, and that it could create an economic threat to the township should residents begin moving away."

Vincent Bonaventura, general manager of New Jersey Airports for the Port Authority, announced that the Port Authority is planning to conduct a six-month study on the noise problem "within a few months."

The study will focus on communities most seriously affected by aircraft noise from Newark, based on the number of complaints received, according to Bonaventura. While acknowledging that only the Department of Environmental Protection.

He suggested that the noise, increased from 45 to 60 decibels in some areas, could have serious consequences to children attending schools in the affected communities as well as to people's hearing in general.

He cited the transfer to the quieter model of jets during the next decade as "very important," but also warned that "the problem of aircraft noise is not going to go away."

Although invited by the committee to participate, FAA representatives were conspicuously absent from the meeting, drawing a round of criticism from Ogden.

Ogden described their failure to attend as "unreprehensible, since they are the cause of us being here."

FAA has jurisdiction over flight plans, it was hoped the study could alleviate some of the controversy.

Bonaventura added that the FAA will be presenting to the Port Authority what he termed the type of planes which are allegedly causing a great deal of the noise, to be replaced by the quieter models over the next decade.

"The Port Authority clearly recognizes the need to reduce aircraft noise as much as possible," the general manager stated.

Another official who spoke at the meeting was Anthony J. McMahon, assistant director of Environmental Enforcement at the New Jersey

Candidates' forum

This is the second in a series of questions being asked candidates running for office in the Nov. 3 election.

The condition of the Township Hall has been the subject of much criticism in recent years, particularly the police headquarters. What is your position on upgrading and modernizing the municipal building?

WILLIAM CIERI
Democrat
Township Committee

We have been asked to deal with the question of the condition of Springfield's municipal building in general and police headquarters in particular. Municipal employees, several architects and anyone who had attended the Township Committee executive meetings for the past four years, as contrasted to the regular meetings, would know that I have been trying to improve that facility since 1983. The reason one would have to attend executive meetings—and not regular town meetings—is because it was at the executive committee meetings that one plan after another was proposed and killed.

Most recently, in 1986, the Township Committee was split three Democrats and two Republicans. The three Democrats, myself, Edward Fanning and Stanley Knish, proposed passage of a bond ordinance that would enable us to rebuild the Town Hall, add on offices, add on a garage to house our ladder truck, ordered at the fire department's request in anticipation of this approval and expand and improve the police station. This latter consideration was most important since everyone recognized the inadequacies of the existing facility. The two Republican committee members, Mr. Katz and Mrs. Pieper, refused to vote for the bond ordinance. No matter how hard we tried to satisfy them they still voted no. Under state law it is necessary to have four votes for bonding approval, and as a result, the matter died. It died to this day, in spite of the fact that our police continue to operate in cramped and inadequate space.

Now, the American Legion Hall is for sale and has been offered to the town. I would like to see it acquired at a reasonable price, renovated, and used for law offices. I would like the police to expand into the offices thus vacated in Town Hall, and the entire expanded police area modernized. We certainly must also add a garage for the ladder truck.

I would add at this point that taxes have been going up for the people of Springfield, as have construction and interest costs. In a very real sense the increased cost of garbage disposal will take the place of many governmental services we could have provided. It would be irresponsible to proceed today in the same manner as we could have in 1986. Of necessity, the renovation of Town Hall must be undertaken with the new fiscal realities clearly in mind.

PHIL KURNOS
Republican
Township Committee

In my response last week, I pointed out how poorly our town looks. I said that if you own a brand new house and just let it go, eventually the paint will peel, the roof will leak. In short, it will become needy looking and desperately in need of repair. That has happened to Springfield and symbolically that is what has happened to our municipal building. It's a disgrace! The conditions are deplorable, having steadily deteriorated throughout the years.

Those who have been in control all this time should be ashamed of themselves for allowing it to become this bad. In fact, things have gotten so bad that on rainy days, pails and pans are used in the Court Clerk's office in an attempt to catch water leaking through the roof. Sorry but this water finding its way into court records! How can this be allowed to continue?

The police "locker room" is not to be believed. No one should have to function in such inhumane conditions. Yet it has been this way since the 1973 "flood of record." A tons per day of the material. "We ask that the cardboard be flattened, banded and placed next to the business's garbage cans," Lee says.

The plan outlined the recycling campaign through placement of notices in a local newspaper, through speaking engagements before the Summit Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club and other business organizations and through direct mailings. "We're greatly encouraged by the efforts of these municipalities to help their businesses recycle," said Kenneth

L. MacRitchie, chairman of the Union County Recycling Authority. "They have set a fine example for other Union County municipalities to follow."

Because procedures for pick-up and/or delivery of recyclable materials vary among Union County's 21 municipalities, businesses should call their municipal recycling coordinators for specific information on disposing of recyclables. Union County's include Leo Eckmann in Springfield, 376-5900.

Suspects arrested for purse theft

Two men suspected of taking a woman's pocketbook in a local supermarket were arrested by Springfield police on Thursday.

Arrested were Joseph Bruce Osborne, 28, East Orange, and Anthony A. Lyons, 33, Newark. According to a police report, both men were nabbed fleeing the $800 supermarket "with a woman's" handbag containing more than $200 in cash along with jewelry and credit cards. Osborne was charged with theft of a movable property and Lyons was charged with receiving stolen property. Osborne also had an outstanding warrant from East Orange Municipal Court.

The suspects were arrested by Det. Judd Levinson and Officer John Foster of the Springfield Police Department and two officers from the Union Police Department.

Also on Thursday, police arrested four additional suspects in the automobile theft ring operating at Autoworld. Arrested were Taulid Cohens, 19, Irvington; Anthony Bonei, 19, Newark; William Curtis, 30, Irvington; and Anthony Peaks, 22, Irvington. The suspects, charged with conspiracy, burglary and theft, were released on their own recognizance.

Last Tuesday, the joint investigation of Springfield police, the New York City Police Department and Autoland management led to the arrest of two men in connection of more than $100,000 worth of motor vehicles from the Route 22 car-dealership.

According to Lt. James Hietala of the Springfield Police Department, the investigation is continuing and more arrests are expected.

Police arrest revoked drivers

Three people were arrested for driving with a suspended license in the borough this week.

John T. Hester, 43, of Cranford was arrested Oct. 5 after being stopped by Officer Kenneth Grady on North Michigan Avenue between Washington and Monroe avenues. He was later released on $500 bail.

Jorge Rosario, 36, a Union City driver, was stopped at Boulevard and 10th Street by Officer William Hannon on Oct. 2. Bail was set at $500.

Wayne T. Nalewicz, 27, of North 17th Street was arrested Sept. 30 at Franklin Avenue and 14th Street by Officer Daniel Rice.

An attempted burglary occurred at a Galloping Hill investment firm on Oct. 4. A phone receiver to the communications center was taken and a Dow Jones machine had been thrown into the computer room in an attempt to sabotage the computer system, according to police. Authorities report a disgruntled employee of the soon-to-be closed company is suspected in the case, although no individuals have been taken into custody as of yet.

The foreman of a demolition company contracted by a brass firm on Market Street reported a generator and extension cords were stolen from one of their vehicles at that location Oct. 1, according to police.

On the alert

The political candidates are not the only people conducting campaigns this fall.

Two other American institutions, the Girl Scouts and the Red Cross, are promoting their causes.

The efforts of these service groups, however, have been somewhat overshadowed by more publicized issues, like the Bork hearings, the NFL players' strike, the race for the pennant and Election '87 and '88. But some statistics have emerged from these promotions which should jolt everyone into paying better attention to them.

According to the American Red Cross, more people know how to jump start a car than know how to save a life with cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Of 1,000 people interviewed during research for the Red Cross campaign, 70.5 percent said they knew how to jump start a car, while only 51.6 percent said they could save a life with CPR.

The figures may not be that startling; most of us will probably need to jump start a car more often than save a life. But what happens if a spouse, child or one of our parents suffers cardiac arrest and we don't know how to help them? Sudden-out-of-hospital cardiac arrest is a significant national health problem. Approximately 650,000 Americans die each year from heart attacks; and more than 350,000 Americans have heart attacks that occur without warning. No more than 5 percent of sudden cardiac victims in the United States are resuscitated and survive until they are discharged from the hospital.

This low national survival rate reflects the fact that in the vast majority of cases, emergency medical service arrives too late, if at all.

The percentage of survivors can be substantially raised through the training of more people in CPR. The Red Cross, area adult schools and first aid squads provide training in CPR.

According to Red Cross studies, a two-minute reduction in the delay to initiate CPR could reduce the mortality rate from 47 percent to 37 percent.

Instead of waiting around for Monday night football this fall, maybe now would be a good time to take a course and learn how to save a life.

Another impressive statistic has been compiled by Washington Rock Girl Scouts: the average Scout in the Council sells 70 boxes of cookies in each sale! As the publicity for the Girl Scout cookie campaign says, "There is no other sales force in the country quite like the Girl Scout cookie seller." They range in age from 6 to 60, and Smithsonian Magazine recently commented that "when the current Girl Scouts take over the executive suites" of this nation, industry will be in good hands.

We hear a lot of negative news about young people. The fact that an organization such as Girl Scouting has survived in this high tech society of ours says a lot for the organizers and a lot more for the girls who join each year.

It tells us that there are plenty of young people looking for an opportunity to help others and earn their way. The cookie sale profits provide funds for Scout activities: trips, programs that train the girls and activities that help others.

By supporting this fund-raising campaign, we are helping our nation's young people develop into mature, responsible adults. Isn't it better to spend a few dollars now on cookies than big bucks later on rehabilitation of some kind or another?

Take a few minutes this month to pay attention to some of the "less important" campaigns. These issues might just affect your personal life as much as Robert Bork's confirmation or the free agency issue.

Healthcare

Guidelines for healthier diet

Editor's note: The following is presented by Deborah Heart and Lung Center as part of a public service campaign to increase healthcare awareness.

By BETTY WARHOLAK
Director of Dietary Services

Heart disease is the leading cause of death in the United States. Over 40 million Americans probably are affected by heart disease including hypertension, coronary artery disease and stroke.

The major risk factors for heart disease are cigarette smoking, elevated serum cholesterol levels, and elevated blood pressure. Secondary risk factors are elevated triglycerides, heredity, diet high in saturated fats, diabetes, obesity, lack of exercise and stress.

The diet can help lower the fat levels in the bloodstream. Animal foods contain saturated fats, which are solid at room temperature and are found in the marbling fat in the meat and along the edge.

Dairy products made from whole milk are also high in saturated fats. The two plant oils high in saturated fats are coconut oil and palm kernel oil.

The unsaturated fats, monounsaturated and polyunsaturated, are soft or liquid at room temperature. Monounsaturated fats have no impact on blood cholesterol levels and include peanut oil, peanut, olive oil and olives.

Polyunsaturated fat is liquid oils of vegetable origin, including safflower, sunflower, corn, soybean, sesame seed and cottonseed oil. These oils tend to lower the level of cholesterol in the bloodstream.

It is important to control the amount of fat in the diet as studies show a strong correlation between high serum cholesterol levels and consumption of fatty, high cholesterol foods. Cholesterol is also manufactured by the body.

The present average American diet consists of approximately 40 percent of total calories from fat, which should be lowered to 28-30 percent.

You should limit the amount of foods high in cholesterol, a fatty, waxy substance found in all animal tissues. Sources high in cholesterol are organ meats, egg yolks, whole milk, cheeses and beef, pork and lamb.

Guidelines for you and your family are as follows:

1. Purchase meat, poultry, veal and seafood with the least amount of marbling and visible fat. Remove poultry skin prior to cooking.
2. Restrict egg yolks to twice weekly including eggs used in cooking. Egg whites are cholesterol free.
3. Increase consumption of fish to 2 oz. per week. Recent research using fish oils called EPA (eicoso pentanoic acid) found in tuna, mackerel, salmon, herring, and blue fish shows cholesterol lowering effects. New analysis of shell fish including oysters, clams, scallops, lobsters, and crab show it to be low in cholesterol and saturated fat.
4. Use meat alternatives such as dried beans, legumes, tofu (soybean curd) and peanut butter. These meat alternatives are cholesterol free.
5. Polyunsaturated fats help lower cholesterol. Use margarine that has the most polyunsaturated fat followed by sunflower, corn, soybean, and cottonseed oil. Margarines should be made with one of the above liquid oils as the fat ingredient. The general term vegetable oil does not necessarily mean one of the allowed oils.
6. Whole milk and whole milk cheeses are high in saturated fats. Use skim milk or 1 percent fat milk to reduce total cholesterol intake. Select cheese made from skim milk.
7. Avoid imitation dairy products.
8. Increase the intake of fruits and vegetables which are cholesterol free.
9. Whole grain breads and cereals are low in cholesterol and contain fat. Increase intake of complex carbohydrates. Avoid granola type cereal which is higher in fat and contains coconut oil. Avoid commercial baked goods including cake, cookies, and crackers.
10. Use egg whites or egg substitutes in cooking; margarines instead of butter; low fat yogurt instead of sour cream; skim milk or 1 percent fat milk instead of heavy cream; vegetable oil instead of solid shortening.
11. Use moderation. These foods have a tendency to increase the serum triglyceride levels in the bloodstream.
12. Try to stay close to your ideal body weight. Increase activity levels with moderate aerobic exercise.
13. Consult with a registered dietitian for further cooking ideas to help lower your intake of saturated fats.

Generally speaking

State aids victims of sexual harassment

By W. CARY EDWARDS
New Jersey Attorney General

A South Jersey waitress endured her boss's suggestive comments, lewd gestures and requests for sexual favors - all of which were clearly unwelcome - before losing her job for turning him down.

A Central Jersey bookkeeper was after, rejecting sexual advances - including lusty hugs - touched frequently and being offered money to sleep with one of her superiors - made by two officials in the company for which she worked.

And a North Jersey clerk-typist also was terminated as a reprisal for complaining about sexual harassment that included a male co-worker putting his hands on her back, ankle and leg, talking about her sexual life, and offering her gifts in exchange for "what he wanted."

The three women filed complaints with the New Jersey Division of Civil Rights, which ultimately ruled in favor of each.

Fifteen sexual harassment cases were filed last year by the division, which is headed by Director Pamela S. Poff. As one of nine divisions within the Department of Law and Public Safety, Civil Rights is responsible for enforcing New Jersey's 42-year-old Law Against Discrimination, which is probably the toughest of its kind in the nation.

Although the term "sexual harassment" is not explicitly mentioned as a prohibited activity under the provisions of the Law Against Discrimination, the absence of the term does not mean sexual harassment is unlawful. The courts have continually ruled that sexual harassment is a remedial measure and therefore is liberally and broadly used to eradicate unlawful discrimination in the areas of employment, housing, public accommodations and credit.

In the case of the waitress, an administrative law judge, in a written decision upheld by Poff, assailed the respondent's behavior as "obnoxious" and said it would not be tolerated in a state that considers itself to be in the vanguard of eliminating discrimination from our society.

The waitress received $7,500 for the pain, humiliation and suffering inflicted upon her as the result of illegal discrimination.

In the case of the bookkeeper, the judge found that the actions - constant touching, kissing, grabbing and fondling - and words the employee endured "were sufficiently severe and/or pervasive to create the type of hostile work environment prohibited" by the Law Against Discrimination.

The bookkeeper received $7,500 for her pain, humiliation and suffering.

In the case of the clerk-typist, the judge ruled that the continuing sexual harassment was "a term and condition of employment" because the clerk-typist complained about it yet nothing was done. The complainant received back pay, attorney's fees and $750 in compensatory damages.

As these three cases show, sexual harassment can take the form of conditioning employment benefits on sexual favors or can create a hostile and abusive work environment.

Although violations are at times difficult to prove, the Division of Civil Rights works with complainants in their claims to establish proof of discrimination. Also, the division works in concert with the employer community to sensitize its workforce to this problem and to uncover claims unsupported by the evidence, but which clearly have happened.

Through its Bureau of Education, the division also provides free training programs and seminars on eliminating sexual harassment in the workplace to public and private-sector employers.

Since sexual harassment is against the law in New Jersey, it should not and will not be tolerated in the workplace. The division aggressively investigates complaints and maintains an active outreach program to eliminate such discrimination before it occurs. To arrange for training programs or seminar speakers, the division can be called at (609) 232-7799 between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

The division also has a 24-hour toll-free hotline (1-800-DCR-LAWS) that offers a variety of pre-recorded messages in English and Spanish about problems and remedies under the Law Against Discrimination.

Drug abusers of every age and area

By JEROME PLATT

Who abuses drugs? Everyone knows about drug addicts. The drug abuser is usually seen as a middle-aged, living in an urban area, obviously out of society's mainstream, or as an unfortunate "average" teenager who experiments with drugs, only to become addicted.

But, anyone who thinks these stereotypes present a complete view of the lives ravaged by drugs is sadly misinformed. New Jersey residents are hurt deeply by drug abuse. The full, frightening story shows people of every age and area destroyed - physically, emotionally, and financially by drugs. And the AIDS connection has intensified this human devastation.

National statistics show that despite the best efforts of health and law enforcement officials, illegal drug abuse grows daily and affects people from every socio-economic group. Statistics gathered by the New Jersey State Division of Narcotics and Drug Abuse Control and the Office of the Attorney General show New Jersey is no exception.

During one recent month, one million New Jerseyans used illicit drugs. Fifty-seven percent of the state's high school seniors used drugs last month. Most of these students smoked marijuana, but amphetamines were abused by one in three and almost 20 percent favored cocaine. Their parents are not immune either, with New Jersey suffering a $4.5-billion dollar loss annually in productivity alone.

Intravenous drug abusers are being hit hard by the deadly AIDS virus. Recent studies in Jersey City, which has the state's highest incidence of positive AIDS testing, show that 57 percent of I.V. drug abusers in treatment tested positive for AIDS antibodies. The infection rate in untreated users is probably much higher. This means that thousands of drug abusers are infecting tens-of-thousands-of-others through sexual contact and sharing needles.

According to the Governor's Committee on Children's Services Planning, drug abuse and its related symptoms may affect more children and teenagers than any other problem in New Jersey. For many, the first exposure to drugs comes at an early age. Almost 25 percent of those affected by illegal drugs began abusing drugs between the ages of 7 and 12.

Statistics, by themselves, mean nothing. But, every statistic represents a person, a person who lives in this state; a person whose life is slowly being destroyed. With that person's destruction, too often comes the destruction of their family.

The Center of Excellence in Addiction Treatment Research at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey-School of Osteopathic Medicine has joined with addiction centers worldwide in the search for effective prevention and treatment. Every parent, teacher and physician in the state must join the international effort to combat drug abuse.

Dr. Platt is a professor of psychiatry and director of the Center of Excellence in Addiction Treatment Research at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey-School of Osteopathic Medicine in Camden and Stratford. This column is a public service of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

Girl Scouts begin cookie sales

There is no other sales force in the country quite like the Girl Scout cookie seller. We range in age from 6 to senior citizen. We outnumber Avon ladies about two to one and we're all volunteers.

Yet we are among the best sellers in the business. Recently, the editor of Smithsonian Magazine predicted that "when the current Girl Scouts take over the executive suites, the U.S. industry will be in good competitive hands."

Walt Disney made a film, "The Cookie Kid," about N.Y. City Girl Scout Marilee Andrews who by the age of 11 had sold 11,922 boxes of cookies. Nearly 100 corporations have shown their appreciation for her sales.

Washington Rock Girl Scouts sell an average of 70 boxes of cookies per girl in each sale. Multiply that by about 5,000 girls selling and we have some pretty impressive figures. In fact, the cookie sale is the largest single fund-raiser for the council and for the troops in our town. It helps make possible expansion of program and facilities at Camp Hoover, and it supports thousands of trips, badges, service projects and activities of the 505 troops in the Washington Rock Council.

For every girl who participates, the cookie sale is a chance to develop business skills and to earn money for Girl Scouting. When a Girl Scout calls on you to ask, "Will you buy cookies from me?", she's helping herself to do things, and to learn about business. When you say, "Yes," you're helping a girl reach her goal and the community and council reach more girls. And you're getting a great box of cookies.

Anti-Semitism dying a slow death

I had just finished Paul Johnson's new book, "The History of the Jews," when I read in the Springfield Leader about Norman and Mania Salatz's ordeal during World War II and the two Christian women who saved them.

Coincidence perhaps that Johnson's fine history should appear and the local story should be told within the same time frame as the Pope's visit to America. This Springfield couple's story of survival encapsulates a great Christian-writer's interpretation of Jewish history. The great Pope's pilgrimage to the U.S. from Rome and his meeting with Kurt Waldheim and Jewish leaders bring into public view persecution, anti-Semitism and a new concept of Jewish-Christian cooperation never before seen on our earth.

The Pope, the Polish woman who saved the Salatz's and Paul Johnson, have all recognized the real world in modern times and each of these individuals has contributed to Jewish life differently. Recognizing anti-Semitism for what it is, the Pope met Waldheim. By doing this, the Pope has courageously brought the subject of anti-Semitism into the full view of millions of people the world over. Severely criticized by Jewish leaders, he met with them to explain his actions and in turn received severe admonition from anti-Semites as the result of this Jewish dialogue.

Paul Johnson, in his great 600-page work, has given new insights into the treatment of Jews since the Diaspora. He has dispelled myths and replaced them with the reality of the Jewish fight for human survival in Europe.

And finally, there is Stanislaw Bardzik and Kazimiera Jęstevicki, the two Polish women who did not write or theorize, but risked the most precious thing on earth they had, their lives, in order to help this Jewish couple.

Johnson refers to America as the New Babylon in his great volume and to the Salatzes who have enjoyed success in America, as to all of the Jewish people who immigrated or were born here, it is Babylon!

During my youth in the time of World War II, my Aunt Jennie used to say that even though there was some anti-Semitism, America was still the last place on earth as a refuge for Jewish people. Maybe Aunt Jennie was right for her time, but that philosophy does not hold true any more. Every nation on earth, not just America, is moving toward the ideal of Babylon, learning ethnic and racial tolerance. It is the result of an educational, learning action by people such as the Pope, Paul Johnson and the Polish women. There is no doubt about it anti-Semitism is dying, a slow tortuous death, long overdue to civilization.

To paraphrase Mr. Salatz, Hitler did not win the war against the Jews. Hitler set the stage for the war against anti-Semitism and racism, and he lost that one too!

YMCA prepares adult class agenda

October will see a full and varied program of adult activities and classes at the Summit YMCA, 70 Maple St. "How To Invest!" is a three-part investment series, offering market trends and forecasts, investing for income and a sense of mutual funds as topics for each session. The three-session class, led by financial consultant Melissa Maguire, will be given Tuesdays, Oct. 13 and 20 from 9-9 p.m. and Oct. 16, 23 from 10-11 a.m. Participants can choose either section. The Career Change/Planning Workshop, a four-session class, is designed to assist those seeking a job/career change or entering/re-entering the work force. Miller, the class will meet on four consecutive Saturdays, Oct. 10-11, from 10 a.m.-12:30 p.m. The Nature of Nutrition is an exciting three-part video presentation which will increase your awareness of your eating habits - good and bad. Area nutritionists will lead the discussions covering such areas as fats, fiber, how caloric needs change throughout the life cycle, diet-related illnesses and more. The 90-minute program will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday evenings, Oct. 7, 14, 21. "How To Succeed as a Parent!" is the title of a six-part workshop that has as its emphasis recognizing and developing mechanisms for making the parenting situation better for both parent and child. Karen E. Mondrone, a home economist with Rutgers Cooperative Extension of Union County, will conduct the sessions on Friday mornings from 10-11 a.m., beginning Oct. 2 and ending Nov. 6. Each session will cover a different aspect of parenting and participants can sign up for one or all of the sessions. Borough hospital treats 'old' youth

At the early age of 11, Daniel Samaan of South Amboy had health problems which usually concern adults: high blood pressure, high cholesterol counts, migraine headaches and a condition of being seriously overweight. Daniel's parents tried several different diets and programs without success until a health care professional explained that children with such problems need a different approach from that which is given to adults and referred the family to the Changing Shapes weight control program at Children's Specialized Hospital. "At Changing Shapes we teach the correct and healthy way for children to control their weight," said Marcia Beresel, a registered dietitian at Children's Specialized. "And while they are at it, the kids have fun. They use a swimming pool and participate in games and activities. Once the kids master what they've learned, they are able to exercise, maintain for a lifetime. The next semester for Changing Shapes will begin on the first Tuesday of October and meet for eight Tuesdays from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. A nominal fee is charged. Persons interested in the program may get registration information by calling Sallie Comey at 233-3720.

McKenzie new patient representative

MARGARET MCKENZIE

Margaret McKenzie has been named patient representative at the Cornell Hall Convalescent Home, according to Elizabeth Battelle, administrator of the 100-bed nursing home.

In accepting this newly created position, McKenzie will be responsible for addressing and responding to the questions and concerns of Cornell Hall residents and their families. In addition, part of her day will be spent visiting with the residents, both individually, and in groups, so that both she and the residents may have a chance to really get to know and trust each other, McKenzie said.

She will also maintain a direct telephone line — 686-7696 — where residents and their families can reach her Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"We believe that Cornell Hall is one of the first facilities of its kind to initiate the position of patient representative," Battelle said. "We welcome Margaret McKenzie's expertise in this field and are confident that her appointment can only enhance the already high level of health and personal care that Cornell Hall's residents receive."

McKenzie is a graduate of the Blanton-Peale Graduate Institute, Program of Pastoral Studies and Human Development, Cranford. She is the founder and head counselor for "Livinggroups," a Union-based support group for caregivers of the aging. She also serves as a telephone counselor for "Contact We Care," a Christian Ministry crisis hot line.

"Often the residents and their families don't know where to turn to for help," McKenzie said. "As the patient representative, I will be able to help them in regard to any aspect of their care at the nursing home so that they can continue living their lives with dignity."

McKenzie resides in Union. Cornell Hall Convalescent Hall is located at 234 Chestnut St., Union.

Adult school offers SATs

The Basilio Park Adult School is offering a course in SAT Preparation for those students who are planning to take the SAT exam this fall. The course, which begins on October 13, is designed to boost SAT scores, which are often the critical factor in determining college entrance and college placement.

Four weeks in length, the course will concentrate on the math and verbal skills measured by the SAT test and emphasize the test-taking skills strategies which are helpful in reducing test anxiety and raising test scores. Anyone interested in registering for the course should contact Kathy Coyne at 245-6688.

Workshops

Mother Seton Regional High School, Clark, is sponsoring a series of weekend science workshops. Seventh- and eighth-grade girls who demonstrate an interest in science are encouraged to participate. The workshops are offered to help young women develop their talents in science and to encourage them to consider pursuing a career in science or health care.

The workshops will be held on three consecutive Saturdays in October, Oct. 17, Oct. 24 and Oct. 31 from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Each Saturday a topic from one of three high school sciences: biology, chemistry or physics, will be explored through lecture, discussion and a laboratory period in which participants will perform actual experiments. Light refreshments will also be served each week so that students can interact with each other, with Mother Seton students acting as laboratory aides and with the Mother Seton faculty.

The workshop is under the coordination of Lynn-Beth Schwarz, a member of the science department at Mother Seton Regional High School. Dr. Barbara MacConnell, science department chairperson, and Dr. Patricia Muenzen, chemistry teacher at Mother Seton, will also be actively involved in the program.

Students who are interested in further information may call 382-1552.

HONESTY proved to be the best policy for Christopher DeGregorio, Greg Pawlowski, Patrick Kolbas, Joe Kralovich and Peter Kuzma, left to right, who found a large sum of money on their way to class at School One one day. The five could easily have kept the money but turned it in instead. For their actions, they were honored with a Good Neighbor Commendation presented by Mayor Paul Werkmeister, Police Chief John Millano and Crime Prevention Officer Ted Pardo.

AIDS to be focus of 'trial'

The New Jersey State Bar Association enters its sixth year of sponsorship of the free statewide Mock Trial Competition for high school students with an employment discrimination case revolving around a timely topic — AIDS.

Mock Trial workshops for 1987-88 are being distributed to high schools throughout the state this month. The workbook contains contest rules, an entry form, score sheets and the case.

Because of the increasing number of schools entering each year, the contest has been expanded. A central regional competition will be added to the northern and southern regional plus a regional final contest. The statewide championship finals will take place on April 28, 1988, in the New Jersey Supreme Court.

Each year since 1982 thousands of attorneys have volunteered to coach New Jersey high school teams. The competition is made possible by a network of support from the 21 county bar associations.

Instructional videotapes produced by NJSBA are available for loan to contestants throughout the year.

Teachers may obtain free copies of the workbook by writing, on their school letterhead, to: Mock Trial Competition, New Jersey State Bar Association, 172 West State St., Trenton, 08666.

Divorce workshop helps all

Family Service Association, 43 Franklin Place, Summit, is offering a Divorce Workshop for Families that will help couples and their families heal the pain of divorce and move ahead with the rebuilding of their lives. The workshop is based on a program created by the Mendlinger Foundation and is designed for parents and their children aged 5-17. It will run Oct. 16 from 1-5 p.m. and will continue all day Oct. 17.

Children will meet in joint sessions with their parents and also separately in peer groups. Peer groups help youngsters realize that they are not the only kids with such painful feelings, which gives them strength and helps them understand parental distress.

Pre-registration is required. Call Family Service Association at 273-1414 for further information.

Eye exam available

A statewide "Eye Health Screening Program" has been underway for the 31st consecutive year this week, under the sponsorship of the Medical Society of New Jersey.

All screenings are performed by an ophthalmologist, a licensed physician who specializes in eye care.

A screening will be held at Union Hospital, today, from 9 to 11 a.m.

Launches 'Take Pride in America Campaign'

Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner Richard T. Dewling has announced the second annual awards program to recognize outstanding efforts by individuals and groups promoting natural resources in New Jersey as part of the national Take Pride in America Campaign.

The campaign is a partnership of federal agencies, states, private organizations and individuals that have joined to encourage citizens to appreciate and help preserve public lands and natural resources.

"Each and every effort can make a difference in the quality of life in our state and our country," Dewling says. "Together, we can find ways of reducing litter, vandalism and carelessness that are detrimental to the environment around us."

DEP has already initiated a "New Jersey Shore-Keep It Perfect" anti-litter campaign that it expects will prove to be highly successful by "Individuals, businesses, and all kinds of professional and citizen groups are being encouraged through this campaign to speak out, write articles, 'adopt' an area, organize clean-up efforts and generally get involved in caring for their environment," he says.

The awards program is open to individuals and public and private groups that have contributed to increased awareness of and wise use of such resources. The category selections are: Contaminated Organizations; Businesses/Corporations; Youth Groups; Civic/Citizen Organizations; Media; Educational Institutions; Individual; Public/Private Partnership; Local Governments; State Government; Federal Government; and Private Lands.

Winners of the state awards competitions will be announced by Nov. 1, and will receive certificates of recognition from DEP.

The names of state winners will also be submitted for consideration in the national competition.

The deadline for submitting nominations is Oct. 23. For nomination forms and more information call or write to: New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection, Office of Communications, CN 402, Trenton, 08625; (609) 833-2103.

Social services' chief named to state board

Union County Social Services Director Michael C. Galuppo was recently appointed to serve on the New Jersey Department of Personnel's Local Government Advisory Board.

MICHAEL C. GALUPPO

The Civil Service Reform Act passed last September created the board to advise Personnel Commissioner Eugene J. McCaffrey Sr. on the effects proposed civil service changes will have on counties and municipalities. Board members include appointed and elected officials from counties and towns that use the state's personnel system to hire and promote employees. Galuppo says serving on the board gives him a chance to discuss social services needs directly with Commissioner McCaffrey. "My job is to make sure Commissioner McCaffrey knows the state that welfare directors and their employees have in the state's personnel system," says Galuppo. "Commissioner McCaffrey wants me to tell him what we're up against."

Galuppo and the other board members meet with McCaffrey quarterly to discuss new rule proposals, department procedure changes and local concerns. McCaffrey says he enjoys meeting with Galuppo and the other local government officials because that's where most citizens deal with government. "The board members are in the trenches," says McCaffrey. "For most citizens, their only experience with government is at the local level. I believe it's my job to insure we provide a personnel system that helps local governments hire qualified people to serve the taxpayers." McCaffrey stresses that the meetings provide time to discuss problems local officials have in dealing with the state's personnel bureaucracy. "If these officials are going to take the time and effort to travel to Trenton, you can be sure I'm going to do a lot of listening," says McCaffrey. "The board members' suggestions are invaluable when our department considers new rules or procedures." Galuppo has served as director of the county's Board of Social Services since 1974. He has also served as president of the County Welfare Director's Association and chairman of the association's personnel and labor relations committee. He currently chairs the association's executive committee.

Those who attend the workshops will also be informed about the variety of funding that is available to college students. County voc-tech tops mark

Once again the percentage of graduates of Union County Vocational-Technical Schools in Scotch Plains has gone over the 90 percent mark. Of the 179 graduates who were eligible, or indicated they desired placement, 166 were working in jobs, directly related to their course of study, by the end of September. Of the graduates, 122 were enrolled in cooperative education programs, allowing them to gain valuable experience prior to graduation. Additional information regarding any of the schools programs may be obtained by calling 889-2000.

ELECTED — Dr. Robert L. Wegrzyn

has been elected president of the Union County Medical Society. Wegrzyn has held every elective post in the society and has served as a Union County delegate to the Medical Society of New Jersey since 1976. The Elizabeth surgeon is also medical director of the Center for Hope Hospice in Roselle. The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders recently presented a check for $7,500 to the Center of Hope Hospice Inc., the first payment of a $30,000 grant to provide up to 24-hour homemaker/home health aide services to needy, terminally ill patients. The center is located at 219 E. 4th Ave., Roselle, telephone, 241-1132. The Glenside Ave., Scotch Plains location is used for volunteers and educational purposes.

An Open Letter From Anthony E. Russo

Why I'm Running Again

Many people have asked me why I'm running again for the State Senate. To be truthful, I had many sleepless nights before deciding to go through another major campaign. In the end, it came down to my conviction that the people of this district deserve a concerned, committed and caring state senator. People have been good to me, and I want to give something back. This is why I have pledged to donate my entire state senate salary totalling $100,000 over a four-year period to the American Cancer Society in an effort to help fight this dreadful disease. Some people say this means I would be working for nothing. I disagree. I would be working for somebody thoroughly worthwhile... • The satisfaction of knowing that I could once again play a role in the shaping of legislation affecting the delivery of health care services to our people, especially senior citizens. • The fulfillment to be derived from working to limit the excessive power and influence of political action committees and lobbyists whose extraordinary campaign contributions hold some lawmakers in bondage. • Pursuit of aggressive action on the garbage crisis—an unnecessary problem that is financially strangling the residents of Springfield and Union. The same garbage crisis that will soon afflict other communities in this district. The incumbent senator has literally loafed on the job of dealing with this crisis. • The certainty of knowing if I win that the district will have a senator who will battle for the kind of laws that will keep our air, our water and our land as clean as it can be. • In the final analysis, I could not in good conscience sit back and watch these problems remain unaddressed by a disinterested legislator whose heart and mind are obviously elsewhere. I hope I can count on your support and your vote on Nov. 3.

Sincerely,
Anthony E. Russo

UCC has free job training programs

Free job training programs are available to unemployed Union County residents at Union County College's Employment Skills Center, according to Everett Ellis, director.

The ESC has been in operation since 1979, having served more than 2,000 students.

"The ESC provides a viable labor pool of trained and skilled individuals for community employers," Ellis says. Since its inception, the ESC has been committed to improving the quality of the Union County community workforce, while at the same time aiding students to become economically self-sufficient.

"The ESC has an 80 percent placement record for all students who complete their training programs. Graduates have been placed in numerous Union County businesses such as Industrial Truck Body Corporation, Joseph Cory Warehouse, Saint Elizabeth Hospital and Union County.

"The ESC periodically surveys the needs of area employers and assesses each student's interests, aptitudes, and abilities in order to tailor training programs to meet practical occupational needs," Ellis says. "We provide a totally coordinated education/training program for each student. The training program provides students with basic education in reading, writing and mathematics as well as employment skills, vocational skills, counseling and placement."

The center offers job training programs in the areas of medical office assisting, secretarial science, computer-assisted drafting and design, ESL, secretarial science, ESL, vocational, auto mechanics and customer service representative. Each job training program includes a computer component.

Programs at the ESC are offered during the days and in the evenings. All classes meet five days a week for six-month intervals. No prior work experience is required.

Computer Expo set

The public is invited free of charge to view the latest in personal computers at Union County College's annual Computer Expo, 1987 on Oct. 10 at the college's Cranford Campus.

Offered as a community service and co-sponsored by the college and the Amateur Computer Group of New Jersey, the Expo will begin at 9 a.m. and run until 4 p.m.

The all-day event will emphasize the theme, "PC — Your New Family Member," focusing on the place of the personal computer in the family unit and how it can benefit both adults and children in the home.

Computer vendors will have the opportunity to exhibit, explain, demonstrate and sell their products to the public.

The day-long program will feature a variety of workshops and seminars on using computers ranging from the academic to the professional setting.

Computer Expo is an annual event conducted at Union County College. In the past, more than 6,500 people a year have come to see free commercial exhibits of the latest computer development and potentials, find good computer buys, and to participate in the workshops and seminars.

ON HIS TOES — Dayton quarterback Gregg Walsh cuts to his left during last Friday's action against Hillside at Meisel Field. Although Walsh ran for 37 yards and added eight tackles from his safety position, the Bulldogs went down, 12-3.

'Dawgs lose to Hillside, 12-3

By MARK YABLONSKY

All in all, there really wasn't too much for Dayton to be ashamed of in its 12-3 loss to Hillside last Friday afternoon at sunny Meisel Field. Although solidly outgained by the Hillside Comets, John LeDonne's battling crew found itself with enough opportunities to score.

There was, however, just one problem, which is that the Bulldogs, who fell to 0-2 with the defeat, could pick up just five first downs, only three of which came on the ground. Mistakes and an impressive rushing attack from Hillside notwithstanding, that is what cost Dayton dearly in its first home game of the 1987 season. And here's why.

After picking up a first down in the game's first series of plays, Dayton soon found itself with the afternoon's first break, when a punt from Jeff Stoffer went right through the arms of Hillside's Sherwood Javatt, and right into the grasp of Lenny Salt, who fell on the ball just seven yards from the Comet end zone.

After three running plays failed to produce a touchdown, the Bulldogs were still able to take partial advantage of their opportunity when Glen Miske came on to deliver a 23-yard field goal, and hence, a 3-0 Dayton lead.

And when Matt Lynch recovered another Hillside miscue just 36 yards away from the end zone on the ensuing series of downs, the Bulldogs had what appeared to be an ideal chance to take command early on. But they just couldn't do it.

Following three-yard gains from quarterback Gregg Walsh and fullback Stoffer, Hillside tackle Chris Gordon was able to block a pass attempt from Walsh that left Dayton with a fourth-and-four situation at the 30. A gain of a lone yard by William Lee was not enough to prevent the ball from returning to the Comets.

"That was the turning point of the game," said LeDonne, whose club will travel to Armino Field in Roselle on Saturday for a 1 p.m. showdown with a tough Rams' squad. "I think we had gotten a touchdown there, we could have named the score. We did play pretty good offense the rest of the half, but having them down, 10-0, could have been a psychological edge. They're a tough team; don't cut them short."

Hillside is also a young team that bears virtually no resemblance to the Comet squad that became North Jersey, Group 2, Section 2 champions just two years ago. But as the afternoon wore on, the youthful Hillside team began to get a little more confidence in itself, enough so that it let the field with a 6-3 lead at halftime, after junior quarterback Dwayne Cureton found split end Ron Frenzak alone near the right goalmarker for an 18-yard scoring pass with 6:30 left to play in the second quarter.

From that point on, Cureton went into and more to his senior tailback Dennis Combs, who rushed for 140 yards in 19 carries, including a 37-yard scoring run with less than a minute gone by in the final period.

"I'm really happy with the number of kids that I have, and the things they're doing," said Comet third-year skipper Jerry Alexander, whose club did give a respectable account of itself in a season-opening, 17-7 loss to Immaculata a week earlier. "There's a few wrinkles we have to iron out, and these kids are doing that week after week."

2-0 Bears go wild again, 47-7

By MARK YABLONSKY

Like any coach, give Bob Taylor a win and he's happy. But give him a chance to grant playing time to non-starters who are still learning the tricks of the trade, and he's even happier.

For the second straight week, the highly-regarded Brearley coach had the opportunity to go to his bench after his starting offensive unit had repeatedly gone into the North Plainfield end zone. And for the second straight week, the Bears won by a 47-7 runaway.

"All of our reserves got into the game, and a good time was had by all," said a pleased, but humble Taylor, who took his team's win in stride and refused to call the game a "laugher," as the score might seem to indicate.

And it was a jolly good time at that. By the time last Friday's action had ended in North Plainfield, the Bears found themselves with a 40-107 bulge in total yardage, which included a 308-103 advantage in rushing, as well as a 62-4 edge in passing. Throw in the fact that the Bears are already off to a sizzling 2-0 start, and you've got one happy group of grizzlies.

As had been the case in last week's 27-7 romp over Governor Livingston Regional, the Bears, once they got in front, kept scoring at will and precluded even the remotest possibility of a Canuck comeback.

After a scoreless opening period, Joe Capizzano took a Canuck punt and returned it 28 yards to the North Plainfield 35-yard-line. Six plays later, Mike Chalenski, who accrued 131 yards in just 14 carries, scored from seven yards out, leaving Brearley with a 6-0 lead after the first quarter.

From that point on, the game was already history. And after Big Cheese ran for two more scores by midway through the third quarter, out came virtually all the regulars, who were replaced by the likes of Dave Chang and Shawn Penn, who is not to be confused with his brand-loving, photographer-hating Hollywood namesake.

Penn, in fact, threw a key block in springing Kinney loose for a 48-yard gallop in the final quarter, by which time Ramos had replaced Faucher at quarterback. Brian Chalenski ran for a two-point conversion, before the overwhelmed Canucks finally scored in the game's waning minutes.

Also pleasing to the Brearley coaching staff was the solid play of junior guard Ello Stragusa, who literally "took over" the entire right side of the offensive line after starting tackle Dan DeChellis was forced to leave with an "unlucky" leg injury in the first series of downs.

So yes, a good time was had by all — everyone, that is, except North Plainfield.

"I wouldn't call it a laugher," said Taylor, whose team will oppose Round Brook at Ward Field on Saturday at 1 p.m. They did some things that were difficult for us to overcome in the first quarter. Our kids were able to adjust and that's the one thing; they're able to maintain their poise. Our kids didn't panic."

But it's reasonable to assume that North Plainfield did.

Dayton wins for 1st time, 3-1

By MARK YABLONSKY

After suffering four straight scoreless losses to the Jonathan Dayton Regional High School girls' soccer team rallied for three second half goals to defeat a badly-outplayed Roselle Catholic squad, 3-1, last Thursday afternoon in Springfield.

Dayton, which has lost to Rahway, Caldwell, New Providence and Ridge, all by shutout margins, enjoyed a lopsided 57-2 advantage in shots-on-goal, spending nearly the entire game in Roselle Catholic territory and leaving winning goalie Stact Weiserman all alone for lengthy periods of time.

The Lady Bulldogs, who were scheduled to host Hillside on Tuesday, had a total of 23 shots-on-goal in the first period alone.

After falling behind early in the third quarter when a sudden breakaway caught Dayton off-

GREGG WALSH is coach John LeDonne's choice as Dayton Player of the Week, due to a 57-yard rushing effort, as well as eight tackles, in last Friday's 12-3 loss to Hillside.

Local coaches rap NFL 'scab' games

By MARK YABLONSKY
Whether you favor the owners or the striking NFL Players' Association members, it is quite apparent that local football fans are largely unimpressed with the so-called "scab" teams that were dressed up in NFL regalia and thrown onto the gridiron this past weekend.

Referred to as "replacement teams" by insistent NFL owners, the inexperienced, relatively unknown and semipro players did not leave many viewers with favorable opinions, either, even though the unknowns were joined by approximately 100 regular players who have crossed the picket line since the controversial strike was called by Players' Association leader Gene Upshaw more than two weeks ago.

Pontiac, Mich. Silverdome, where the Lions were beaten by Tampa Bay. A similar number turned out in Philadelphia, although that site was marred by violence from striking players and members of other nationally-known unions, such as the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Ever at Giants Stadium, the attendance figures were quite low, both for the Jets on Sunday, and for the Giants' loss to San Francisco Monday night, a game that was also televised nationally. Not surprisingly, with so many players defections having already taken place, and with more expected should the strike continue much longer, it is quite possible that the second NFL walkout in five years will soon be history.

Mark Benjamin: Dayton track cornerstone

By MARK YABLONSKY
Mark Benjamin of Jonathan Dayton Regional High School doesn't score touchdowns, hit home runs, or score goals. And with the exception of pickup basketball games, he doesn't shoot jump shots or foul shots, either. All he does is run, jump and throw. And he does it exceedingly well.

Fall, winter and spring, Benjamin Dayton cross-country coach John LeDonne, "and I think it's really a force that they played it."

Bulldog cross-country coach Martin Taglienti, whose club stands at 4-1. "He gives you 100 percent all the time. He hangs in. He's really looking forward to the spring season."

Originally from Jamaica, Benjamin did not even take part in running or track until he entered high school. Walter Jackson, who was another Dayton track stalwart before graduating in 1986, convinced his friend to become involved with the sport, and the rest is history.

Kean loses, 17-10
With 7,100 fans in attendance, the Kean College football team was beaten, 17-10, by William Paterson College in the ninth annual Pride Bowl game at Schools Stadium in Newark on Sunday afternoon. It was Kean's first defeat of the season.

After trading field goals to produce a 3-3 tie at halftime, Kean, which is now 3-1, allowed a pair of second-half touchdowns to its New Jersey State Athletic Conference rival, before rallying on a three-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Dave Johnson to tight end Kevin McGinnis with only a few minutes remaining in the game.

Original art for all seasons

Jim Cruikshank was patiently explaining the art of picture framing to a woman who had just purchased a lithograph from his shop Monday afternoon.

"You're bringing in another color there," he said as the woman introduced a lavender border to a work with a predominantly beige background. "Take your time. Look around."

Cruikshank then showed her a softer-colored frame that was more to the woman's liking.

Cruikshank is the owner of the Windsor Picture Gallery, 4 New Providence Road, Mountainside. The shop, located in a 100-year-old former goat barn that also once served as the home of a sea captain, has been in business for approximately a year-and-a-half.

The building in itself — about which Cruikshank was told when he became interested in operating his business there, "It's either over 100 years old or under 100 years old" — is an interesting work of art, bearing portals and a railing one would find on a ship.

As an art showplace, though, Windsor Picture Gallery is interesting in its own right, specializing in a wide variety of original art.

"We carry all original pieces of work," Cruikshank explained. "We carry internationally known and local artists."

Inside the store this week, a customer could find a sampling of many different styles of work, all sold at what the owner called "very competitive" prices.

"It's all moderately priced," said Cruikshank, noting that the Mountainside-Westfield area is very competitive, with a number of art shops in business, "and we carry the area's largest selection of prints."

As Cruikshank spoke, two helpers were busily rearranging the paintings in the store, which last weekend was the scene of an antique print show, the first of three planned for this fall.

The focus of the two future shows has not yet been firmed up, Cruikshank said.

Once a customer has chosen a print at the Windsor Picture Gallery, he can choose from an even wider selection of frames.

"We do only 100-percent conservation framing," he said, explaining that all picture frames are made with acid-free museum framing. "We have over 2,000 frames to choose from."

"We have a full custom framing service," Cruikshank said, noting that most pictures can be framed at the Windsor Picture Gallery within 10 days of their being ordered.

"Most places take three weeks or more," he said. At the Windsor Picture Gallery, customers can have not only works of art, but maps, diplomas and other documents framed.

Windsor Picture Gallery is open seven days a week, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Thursday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. The telephone number is 233-3350.

A mighty airship's doomed voyage

By RITA CIPALLA
Smithsonian News Service

"It's burning, bursting into flames, and it's falling on the mooring mast and all the folks. This is one of the worst catastrophes in the world. Oh, the humanity and all the passengers!"

With these emotional words uttered 50 years ago by radio newsmen Herb Morrison, the Hindenburg explosion was broadcast to horrified listeners. It was May 6, 1937, and the largest airship ever built was landing at Lakehurst, N.J.

The Hindenburg had safely completed its 18 Atlantic crossings since its maiden voyage the preceding year. But when disaster struck that cool spring evening, it was sudden and savage. Within 32 seconds after the first spark ignited, the mighty airship was reduced to a smoking hulk of charred fabric and exposed girders.

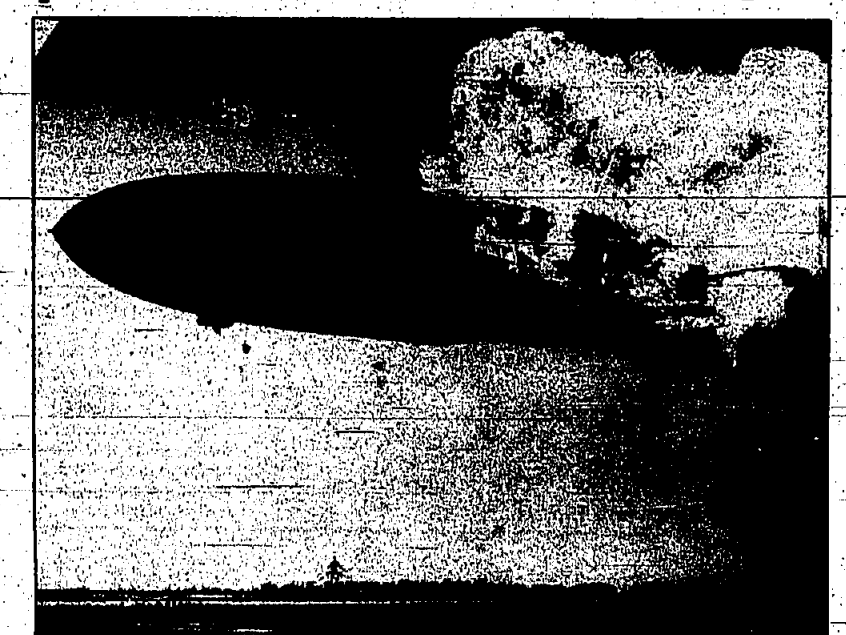

Although nearly two-thirds of the 97 persons on board survived — a fact often forgotten — the name Hindenburg is forever linked to human tragedy.

"The explosion of the Hindenburg has never been satisfactorily explained," says Claudia M. Oakes, curator of the Balloons and Airships Gallery at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. "Some experts believe that a spark ignited the ship's hydrogen and it blew up. Others maintain it was sabotage."

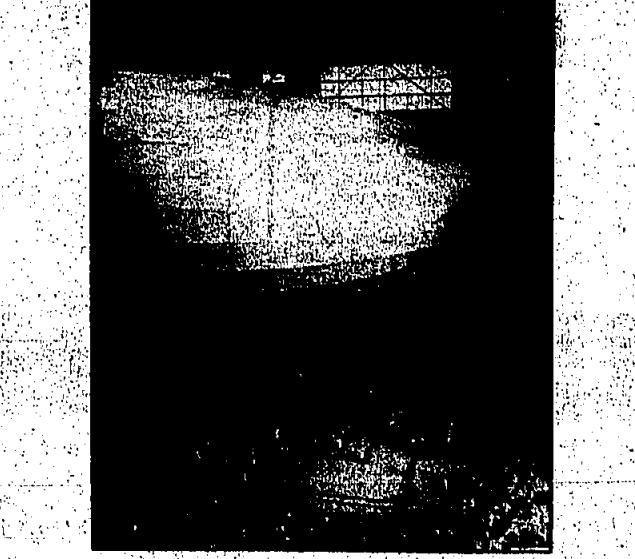

But undeniably, the Hindenburg disaster meant the end of an era.

The story of these silent ships of the air began in France — as did aviation itself with the first manned balloon ascension in 1783. In 1852, an engineer named Henri Giffard made history's first powered flight in an airship shaped like a cigar. Giffard's machine employed a propeller linked to a three-horsepower steam engine to drive it through the air at 5 mph, slower than the speed of a stagecoach of that day. A rudder allowed Giffard to control his direction, an important innovation.

"By their very nature, balloons cannot be steered," Oakes says. "You can toss out ballast to raise them or release gas to lower them, but you can only go in the direction of the wind. Giffard's machine was the first to perfect a steering technique." The word

THE END OF AN ERA — In May 1937, the Hindenburg burst into flames over Lakehurst.

A FLYING MACHINE — The luxurious Graf Zeppelin, built in 1929, was 10 stories high and more than two city blocks long.

dirigible, in fact, is from the Latin word "dirigere" meaning "to steer."

Other advances in airship design followed: an internal-combustion engine was developed in 1872, and an electrically powered airship made its debut in 1883.

As the Wrights were experimenting in the United States with heavier-than-air craft around the turn of the century, a wealthy Brazilian living in Paris, Alberto Santos-Dumont, became intrigued with the idea of flight. He made his first balloon ascent in 1897. "I observed the pilot at his work, and comprehended perfectly all that he did," he later wrote. "It seemed to me that I had been born for aeronautics."

By the end of that year, Santos-Dumont had begun to build his own airship. Santos-Dumont made a number of spectacular flights during this time. Oakes says, "In 1901, he flew around the Eiffel Tower. He taught the first female dirigible pilot to fly. He was also the first European to fly in a heavier-than-air craft, the 14-Bis, in 1906. In fact, he became the most prominent airship designer and pilot of his day."

But France had not cornered the airship market. Germany's major figure in airship design was the man whose very name is today synonymous with the giant ships — Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin. Born in 1838 in the tiny kingdom of Wurttemberg, Zeppelin was a career military man. He had his first flight in a tethered observation balloon in Minnesota when the king of Wurttemberg sent him to the United States as an observer of the Civil War. At the age of 53, Zeppelin retired from the German army to devote himself to designing airships.

In 1900, after many unsuccessful attempts, that reduced him to near poverty, the Count built his first rigid airship, the LZ-1, and flew it for 20 minutes. "Rigid airships have a lightweight frame, usually aluminum, around which the envelope is inflated," Oakes explains. "These are also known as zeppelins. In non-rigid airships, commonly called blimps, the gas pressure itself forms the structure. Semi-rigid airships are a combination of the two."

In 1908, Zeppelin founded the Zeppelin Airship Building Company and, in 1910, the German Airship Transport Company, the world's first airline. During the next four years, the airship line carried some 35,000 passengers without a fatality.

During World War I, Germany dominated the airship scene. Although both England and France flirted with the idea of expanding their airship industries, these countries continued to develop the airplane, believing it to be a cheaper, more effective mode of transportation.

At the start of the war, 30 dirigibles had been built; 72 more were built during the war. They were used for scouting, observation and supply work as well as for night bombing raids against the British.

Building a rigid airship was extremely difficult.

An airship's doomed voyage

mainly because of its size and need for a very light framework. Once the framework was completed, a light cotton-outer cover was stretched into place panel by panel, then treated to make it leakproof. It was a very slow process and airships often took a year or more to complete.

The giant airships also required large ground-handling parties. This situation was eased somewhat with the development of the "mooring mast" by the British in 1917, an advancement that permitted the airship to be reeled in from the sky and walked into its shed.

The Graf Zeppelin, completed in 1928 and named for the company's founder who had died 11 years earlier, was the most luxurious airship ever built. It was 776 feet long—roughly the length of two city blocks—and 10 stories high; it could carry 50 passengers plus crew. In 1928, the Graf Zeppelin made the first round-the-world flight by an airship—more than 21,000 miles in 12 days, 15 hours and 20 minutes.

Airships of the 1920s and 1930s were luxurious, though not as plush as an ocean liner," said Oakes. "Everything had to be lightweight. Even the piano was made of aluminum. And since most were inflated with hydrogen, an extremely flammable gas, smoking could only be allowed in a special well-sealed smoking room. But the passengers enjoyed gourmet meals served on beautiful china, and the sleeping berths were similar to those found on rail cars."

The first trans-Atlantic round trip cost $5,000; by the 1930s the cost had been reduced to $1,000. As one satisfied customer put it, "On a plane you fly, but on the Graf, you voyage." The Graf Zeppelin was retired from service—without accident—in June 1937. During its nine-year career, it had flown more than 1 million miles and carried 12,000 passengers.

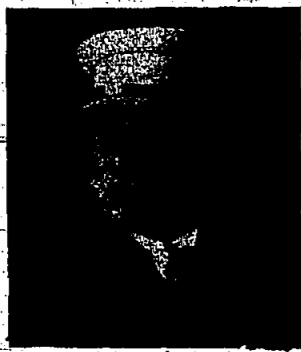

Early airships in the United States were of the non-rigid type. After World War I, airship development was divided between the armed services. The U.S. Army was asked to develop semi-rigid and non-rigid airships, while the Navy was in charge of rigid airships.

The first U.S. helium-filled rigid airship, the Shenandoah, built in 1923, came to an untimely end when it crashed a year later in a violent storm over Ohio. In 1928, the jointly owned Goodyear-Zeppelin Company of Akron, Ohio, began building rigid airships for military use. The two most noteworthy were the Akron, launched in 1931, and the Macon, launched in 1933.

Both airships carried fighter-observation planes inside their hulls which could be released and picked up in flight with the help of a special trapeze lowered through the bottom of the airship. But both ships had short-lived careers. In 1933, the Akron was destroyed in a storm off the coast of New Jersey; only three of its 76-man crew survived. In 1935, a strong gust of wind sent the Macon plunging into the Pacific, and two of its crew were lost.

The demise of the Akron and the Macon signaled the end of American involvement in the airship business. The 1937 explosion of the Hindenburg closed the chapter on these ships of the sky.

For today's hurried traveler, the image of floating effortlessly through the air, pampered and cosseted, is an inviting one. As one Graf Zeppelin passenger wrote more than 50 years ago, "The person with taut nerves may know relaxation, a serenity and calm like none other in the field of travel."

Has tips to clear brush

By STEPHEN BACHELDER
County Agriculturalist

The early fall period is an ideal time to control brush with herbicides. At this time of year, the plant is moving sugar down into the root zone. This carries with it any herbicide applied to the leaves and provides complete kill of the entire plant.

The active ingredient of one type of herbicide is glyphosate, which is formulated by several companies. Commercial names include Ortho's Kleenup, Monsanto's Roundup and K-Mart's Hotshot.

These are available as liquid concentrates and must be diluted according to label directions before spraying them on the leaves of the poison ivy or other brush. They are not absorbed through mature bark and will not harm the tree. If poison ivy is growing in a hedge, there are several methods of control. The most drastic is to cut the hedge quite low and, as the ivy regrows, pull it out, lay it on a newspaper and spray the leaves. If you want to keep the hedge intact, pull the ivy loose from newspaper and spray it. In either case, leave the poison ivy attached to its roots. After about five days the ivy can be removed and disposed of because the glyphosate will have moved out of the leaves into the roots.

If it isn't possible to treat in this manner, it might be best to wipe the herbicide on the leaves. This can be accomplished with a sponge and rubber gloves. Use the material undiluted and apply a thin layer to us in open fields or poison ivy in lawn areas.

Remember that the toxin remains in the poison ivy plant for a long time and even after the leaves die the plant should be handled with protective clothing. The toxin is present in all parts of the plant: leaves, stems, flowers, fruit and roots. As with all pesticides, be sure to read the entire label and heed the directions and precautions.

Some 'best friends' are pets

A recent survey says good old heart-to-heart conversations top the list of activities senior citizens enjoy most with their pooch or tabby. "Watching television, curling up for a nap and just sitting together while reading or sewing also made the list of shared activities between people and their pets."

The survey, sponsored by the Purina Pets for People Program, reflects the opinions of 648 senior citizens who have adopted animals through the new national program. Offered in conjunction with local humane societies and SPCAs, the program pairs persons 60 years of age and older with homeless shelter animals at no charge. More than 100 shelters in 90 cities throughout the United States are offering the pet-matching service.

Not surprisingly, going for walks is still a classic favorite pastime among dog owners. More than 50 percent of the seniors "pulled" say they take their dogs on daily walks.

As catalysts for enjoyment, the survey indicates animals help foster a positive, independent and healthy lifestyle for senior citizens.

For example, 90 percent of those surveyed agree pets help reduce tension and stress in their lives. More than seven out of 10 report their animals provide a reason to exercise, while approximately the same number say their pets serve as encouragement to take better care of themselves and maintain their independence.

The survey also strongly suggests that pets serve as a powerful antidote to isolation and loneliness among the elderly. Ninety-eight percent of those who participated in the study agree that owning a pet makes them feel less lonely, and almost the same number say they are happier overall because of their pets.

The findings underscore a point that is receiving more and more attention in medical and behavioral science circles: pets provide strong psychological and health-related benefits that have important implications for senior citizens. Through pets, seniors are able to access those things which make life worth living for most—love, companionship and something to care about.

"There is evidence that contact with pets evokes positive feelings and enthusiasm among people," says Dr. Alan Beck of the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine. Beck—who is the leading researcher on the role animals play in human lives—notes that pet contact can reduce blood pressure and stress among people of all ages, in addition to improving their social appeal. "People with pets are perceived as more socially attractive and are approached more frequently than people without pets," notes Beck.

Indeed most of the senior citizens surveyed in the study—65 percent—strongly agree that owning a pet has improved their overall disposition and outlook. One out of two say pets have made it easier to meet and interact with people, and 88 percent report they have made new friends through their pets.

In addition to new friendships and improved outlooks, pets also provide seniors with a greater sense of security. Eighty-five percent of those participating in the study report a pet makes them feel safer in their homes. Although to a lesser degree than dog owners, even those who own cats tend to feel safer with their pets nearby.

Perhaps most importantly, through survey comments, seniors are vocal about what they feel is the richest and most life-supporting aspect of their pet relationships: simply having something to love and care for.

Swallows bring spring

By JOHN B. WOLF

Swallows are small birds with scimitar-shaped wings. Superb at skimming over lakes and making a pirouette in the sky, they are found throughout the world except in New Zealand and the polar regions. The purple martin is the largest North American swallow. For its summer home, it selects an apartment in one of the multi-storied nesting boxes that you've seen fastened to a high pole and erected in an open space near a lake or behind a dune at the seashore.

The barn swallow, bluish above and cinnamon-buff below, is truly swallow-tailed. Its deeply forked and tapering tail is responsible for the name. These yellow-bellied and blue-black insects have an appendage resembling a tail on each of their lower wings. They live summer flowers, particularly the black-eyed Susan. Replete with its deep yellow rays and dark central disk, the petals and centerpiece of this familiar plant almost match the colors sported by the yellow swallow-tail.

For the birds

Aesop, in his fables, mentions the swallow. He talks, for example, about "The spendthrift and the swallow." After wasting his money on frivolous items, Aesop tells us the spendthrift needed some cash. Upon spotting a lone swallow in the air, the spendthrift thought it was spring. "That might be nearly frozen to death. Thus the expression: "One swallow does not make a summer."

"Allegedly," a flock of swallows return to the mission at San Juan Capistrano on March 19, the feast of St. Joseph. In sunny California, the March weather is sometimes quite cold. Anyone who sells their clothes to another person anywhere along the El Camino Real, California's coastal highway, before all the swallows encircle the mission belfry could be "For The Birds."

Visual arts center has Shields exhibit

New Jersey Center for Visual Arts, 88 Elm St., Summit, will present an exhibition of works by Alan Shields through Oct. 18.

Shields, a painter, sculptor and printmaker, likes to break the rules of painting with his unorthodox methods. He has taken the canvas off the stretcher and has suspended it from the ceiling, he has cut it and so he sold the "clothes on his back" to a neighborhood dealer. "That might be nearly frozen to death. Thus the expression: "One swallow does not make a summer."

Gallery hours are from noon to 4 p.m. on weekends and from 2 to 4 p.m. on weekdays. Further information can be obtained by calling 273-9121.

UCC has science program for kids

Two "Seasonal" workshops highlight the fall offerings of Union County College's special program for youngsters, "College for Kids." In the workshop in chemical magic, magical microscopes, rocks and minerals, and computers, students will make copper and silver, a crystal garden, hydrogen and oxygen, and batteries from oranges and lemons. They will work with gigantic magnets and with TRS-80 microcomputers. It is offered for youngsters ages 6 to 13 who will be grouped into beginner, intermediate, and advanced levels. The three sessions will meet from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Oct. 21, Nov. 7 and 14.

In the rocketry-electronics out into space workshop, students build and launch their own model rocket. Working with a TRS-80, they will learn how to write programs in basic language and construct a robot blinker while learning to understand solar systems and black holes. Two sessions remain on Oct. 17 and 24 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Other Saturday courses include Americans crafts, painting and drawing, assertiveness, martial arts, computers and a series of special tutoring programs—for children ages 11 to 14.

Animal shelters will share benefits

New Jersey's animal shelters are among the over 1,500 local shelters and humane societies across the country participating in the year-round campaign, co-sponsored by the American Humane Association and Gaines Pet Foods Corp. To date, the program has raised more than $700,000 for the AHA and participating organizations.

Through this fund-raising effort, animal shelters collect starved markers from participating Gaines dog food products and then redeem them for cash from the pet food company.

For information on the "Share Your Love For Dogs" program, call the American Humane Association's special toll-free number, 1-800-4-GAINES. The participating shelter in this area is the Union County SPCA, 90 St. Georges Ave., Rahway, 07065.

And other hors d'oeuvres — all homemade.

After dinner, visitors can browse through the many small boutiques featuring Greek handicrafts, jewelry, as well as food and desserts, and listen to the music of Greece.

Orchestra expands Wesley to play

The Garden State Chamber Orchestra has officially expanded into the Garden State Orchestra, and will offer concerts of varying size, totaling as many as 50 musicians.

With Frederick Storfer conducting, the popularity of the orchestra has grown so that many composers — the Garden State Chamber Orchestra, the Garden State Pops Orchestra, and the Garden State Chamber Orchestra Ensemble — will be integral segments of the Garden State Orchestra.

The All-American program will include Gershwin's "Piano Concerto in F" with Susan Starr at the keyboard, Ives' variations on "America" orchestrated by William Shuman, George Walker's "Lyric for Strings," and the New Jersey premiere of Frederick Kaufman's "An American Symphony," written expressly for the Bicentennial of the Constitution.

This fall, the Garden State Chamber Orchestra begins its eighth subscription season of 16 concerts, moving its Bergen County concerts to the Fort Lee Historic Museum. Other concerts will be held at the Morris Museum in Morristown and Kean College.

The first series of concerts will honor the unveiling of scrolls given to the state of New Jersey by its Chinese sister Province of Zhejiang. To help celebrate the event, compositions by a New Jersey composer, Ulysses Kay, and a composer of Chinese extraction, Chou Wen-chung, will be featured. Also on the program: Handel, Bach and Cherubini. The music will begin on Sunday at 3 p.m. at Union, and will continue on Nov. 6 at 8 p.m. at Fort Lee; and Nov. 7 at 8 p.m. at Morristown.

The second series will be a Jewish Heritage program that includes composers Gershwin, Mendelssohn, Bloch, Telemann and Jachadon. The concert dates will be Jan. 16, 1989 at 8 p.m. at Fort Lee; Jan. 19 at 8 p.m. at Morristown, and Jan. 17 at 8 p.m. at Union.

A third series celebrates Black history with compositions by Noel Da Costa and William Farley Smith. The latter will premiere his "In Praise of a Famous Man," a piece about Martin Luther King. Also on the program will be Mozart and Brahms. The concert dates are Feb. 12 at 8 p.m. at Ft. Lee; Feb. 13 at 8 p.m. at Morristown, and Feb. 14 at 3 p.m. at Union.

More information on a season brochure can be obtained by calling 482-2188, or writing to the Garden State Orchestra, 144 Main St., Suite 202, Hackensack, 07601.

An organ recital and lecture will be presented by Edward Wesley of Union Tuesday at 1:40 p.m. in the Wilkins Theater at Kean College of New Jersey, Union. The event is free of charge and is scheduled as part of the general education program for Kean students.

Wesley is organist and choir director with the United Methodist Church, Union, and organist at St. Genevieve Roman Catholic Church, Elizabeth. He will speak on the development of north German baroque organ music. Wesley also is an instructor in the Kean general education program, teaching intellectual and cultural traditions.

Concert season set

The Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by James Conlon and featuring pianist Bella Davidovich, will open the 1987-88 season of Unity Concerts in Montclair tonight at 8:30 in the Montclair High School Community Auditorium, Chestnut and Park streets. Ticket information can be obtained by calling Unit Concerts at 745-6770.

Your Horoscope

For week of Oct. 8

ARIES (3/21-4/19) This week would be a good time for you to concentrate on domestic tasks. When you complete your tasks, you'll feel much better about your surroundings.

TAURUS (4/20-5/20) Communication is favored this week, so all will be harmonious at work and at home. Annoying misunderstandings get cleared up.

GEMINI (5/21-6/20) Your charisma is positively outstanding this week and others are drawn to you like a magnet.

CANCER (6/21-7/22) This week is your week to just get away and relax. Spend time pursuing leisure activities you enjoy.

LEO (7/23-8/22) Although you are a naturally generous sort, this is a week for you to spend time by yourself just thinking. Outlet activities are best now, such as reading.

VIRGO (8/23-9/22) Social activities are at an all-time high this week and you will have an enjoyable time. However, things are a bit unstable in the romance department.

LIBRA (9/23-10/22) Your vivacious personality will draw others to you this week, so it's a good time to arrange meetings and interviews.

SCORPIO (10/23-11/21) Be sure this week that you pay close attention to what others are saying. You will then have to talk about what's true and what's not.

SAGITTARIUS (11/22-12/21) Before taking a plunge into a joint investment, sit back and analyze everything. Financial decisions are favored, but will require some investigation. Your insight and knowledge won't let you down as you consider your options.

CAPRICORN (12/22-1/19) It's a good week to accept social invitations. However, a loved one is giving you mixed signals and you're unsure what to make of it.

AQUARIUS (1/20-2/18) Career aspects are highly favorable this week as you forge ahead on the road to success. However, a certain co-worker with whom you've been sharing confidences is not all that trustworthy. Be on your guard.

PISCES (2/19-3/20) A friend who's been acting somewhat strangely will not answer your questions directly, so don't press. This person will come to you when the time is right. Business meetings will be successful and prosperous right now.

YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO LIVE YOUR LIFE WITHOUT VIOLENCE

SHOWCASE OF HOMIES

Doing your own thing

Keeping firearms in the home is a very controversial subject. That's why we feature this handsome gun cabinet/bookcase as this week's project. As a gun cabinet, you can safely lock away rifles or ammunition while keeping your firearms clean and in good working order at the same time. If reading is more to your liking than hunting, this cabinet also makes a great bookcase with four shelves to display your book collection and storage underneath.

Measuring 74 inches high by 33 inches wide by 17 inches deep, this unit is easy-to-build when following the traceable pattern. Glass panes of wire mesh can be used for the doors, ready-made decorative wood moldings from your local home center give it a professional look, and with your choice of brass hardware, the project is complete.

To obtain bookcase gun cabinet, Pattern 672, send $4.50. Patterns For Better Living, a 112-page catalog picturing over 700 woodworking and handicraft projects is $3.95. Prices include postage and prompt handling. Send check or money order to Steve Ellingson, c/o County Leader Newspapers, P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409-2383.

Firm gets new logo

A distinct new corporate manthorn for Brown-Fowler Realtors has been designed. The sleek format incorporates the identifiable acorn which has been its trademark within this service area. A bold black background accentuates the unique white Belve print of Brown-Fowler with center focus on the acorn.

The new visual logo is just the beginning of its image-update, developing toward the 1990s marketplace.

Sees no realty slump

Century 21 of the Northeast has reported record numbers for sales volume, properties sold and commissions earned for the first six months of 1987, dispelling concerns that rising interest rates would lead to an industry slump.

The number of properties sold during the first half of 1987 rose nearly 10 percent over the previous year, which was itself a record period. Total sales volume rose 35 percent to $2.5 billion, fueled by increased activity and healthy appreciation.

Prices in the Northeast were 19 percent higher than recorded during the first six months of the previous year. During the same period, price increases across the United States averaged 6.2 percent.

During the month of June, the average price of a home in the Northeast was $162,121, up 25 percent over 1986. Prices that month averaged $159,709 in northern New Jersey; $97,625 in southern New Jersey; $146,281 in Connecticut; $119,025 in Rhode Island; and $171,283 in the Metropolitan New York area.

Northern New Jersey recorded a 27 percent rise in housing prices year-to-year and a 34 percent rise in commissions. Sales were up 14 percent.

In Connecticut average mid-year prices rose 28 percent over the previous year; New York reported a 12 percent increase and southern New Jersey, 23 percent.

National mid-year figures reported higher than average appreciation throughout the Bos-Wash corridor — from Boston to Washington, D.C. — up 10-14 percent, and in eastern Pennsylvania up 11 percent. Many parts of Southern California, including Orange County and most of Los Angeles County, showed 10 percent appreciation or more.

Commission income earned by Century 21 brokers and sales associates in the United States increased by 24 percent over the first six months of 1986; commissions were up 63 percent in Canada and 207 percent in Japan, rapidly expanding the metro Tokyo market. Sales closed system-wide were up 18 percent, while in the U.S. closings were up nearly 17 percent; up 28 percent in Canada; and up 59 percent in Japan.

State tops in tax

New Jerseyans paid 21 percent more federal income tax in 1985 on a per capita basis than their counterparts did on average across the country, according to a recent Statistics of Income Bulletin published by the Internal Revenue Service. In so doing they surpassed the District of Columbia and Texas that year and came in third behind Alaska and Connecticut.

The study showed that 1985 federal returns filed by New Jerseyans had an average tax liability of $4,706, compared to $3,901 nationally. The previous year, New Jerseyans paid $4,345, about 17 percent above the national average of $3,708.

"Simply put, New Jerseyans are paying more taxes because average incomes are significantly higher here than in many other places in the country," says Gerard R. Esposito, the IRS Acting District Director in Newark. "The average salary income reported on 1985 returns by New Jerseyans was $25,154. That was 14 percent above the national average and 6 percent above the previous year," he says.

"We believe that the taxes due on the returns just filed for 1986 will show that New Jerseyans had an average tax bill of well over $5,000," says Esposito.

To allow housing surcharge

The Council on Affordable Housing has proposed a new rule and an amendment to its substantive rules. In response to inquiries, the proposed new rule allows, but does not require, municipalities to impose a surcharge on the rents of low and moderate income units when the tenant's income exceeds the income guidelines.

"This rule is for the limited purpose of retaining the affordable units for low and moderate income households," said Arthur Bernard, deputy director of COAH. "N.J.A.C. 5:22-12.11 is not intended to generate a significant flow of dollars for other purposes, nor is it intended to be levied against households minimally above the income guidelines."

The amendment is designed to clarify the original intent of COAH rules on the 50/50 split of low and moderate income units.

"Specifically, the council decided to amend N.J.A.C. 5:22-5.14 to recognize that the guarantee of a 50/50 split on the rehabilitation of occupied low and moderate income units may not be possible," noted Bernard. "However, in an inclusionary development half of the units in each bedroom category should be available for low income households."

Under the proposed rule for a rental surcharge, after the initial five years of a tenant's occupancy, a municipality or building owner may monitor income. If the tenant's income exceeds the maximum allowable income in the county for a unit of that bedroom size by more than 40 percent, a rental surcharge may be imposed: income 41-50 percent over the maximum limit, a 10 percent surcharge; income 51-60 percent over the maximum limit, a 20 percent surcharge; income over 61 percent of the maximum limit, a 30 percent surcharge.

Proceeds collected from a rental surcharge shall be shared equally by the municipality and the owner of a low or moderate income unit. However, if the municipality has granted tax abatement, it shall receive 100 percent of the rental surcharge.

Today is the deadline for submitting written comments to Douglas V. Opalaki, Executive Director, Council on Affordable Housing, 707 Alexander Road, CN 813, Trenton, 08625-9813.

Liberty Associates relocates in Union

The newest office at 471 Chestnut St., Union is Liberty Associates which relocated from its Liberty Avenue, Hillside address.

Owned and operated by Broker Carol Mularz and husband Frank, who is a Realtor associate. They specialize in personal individual service, be it the first time buyer or professional investor.

The staff consists of experienced real estate professionals with many years in the business as well as a few energetic newcomers who are anxious to accommodate their customers.

Village offers convenient lodging

While some people are faced with a long or troublesome commute to work and home again, other people have to relocate from job to job.

While the hunt for lodging can often be a difficult and, at times, impossible task, one place that has become a haven for geographically mobile workers is the Executive Village in Linden.

Ever since December of 1984, employees with temporary work projects in or around the Linden area have been able to obtain lodging in the Swan Executive Village at reasonable prices.

According to owners Stanley Nathanson and Lawrence Fine, the village is a unique idea in apartment living.

Located at the intersection of Route 149 and Woodlawn Avenue, the complex offers affordable temporary lodging with apartments that can be rented on a daily, weekly or monthly basis, depending upon the needs of each tenant.

The building, Nathanson says, has a total of 66 units which break down into 45 three-room apartments, 21 studio units that have a combination living room and bedroom and there are also six special rooms designed for handicapped applicants.

The Swan Motel, adjacent to the village, was built in 1953 by Fine's father Joseph. Nathanson joined Lawrence as a partner in 1957.

Since then, Fine notes, the operation has been run like a real family business, which Fine believes is the secret behind their success.

"Our long term goal is to make our company bigger and better for both our sales associates and our customers. And, since we are always looking to increase our sales, staff, the opening of our new office is just the first step toward our goal."

Tedesco's new office provides more, spacious, comfortable surroundings to allow for continued growth.

"Our new office will enable us to further assist residents of the Union and Essex counties," notes Tedesco.

"Our long term goal is to make our company bigger and better for both our sales associates and our customers. And, since we are always looking to increase our sales, staff, the opening of our new office is just the first step toward our goal."

ERA Tedesco has new home

Joanne Tedesco, owner of ERA Tedesco Realty, announces that her company has relocated to 442 Morris Ave. in Springfield.

Tedesco's new office provides more, spacious, comfortable surroundings to allow for continued growth.

"Our new office will enable us to further assist residents of the Union and Essex counties," notes Tedesco.

"Our long term goal is to make our company bigger and better for both our sales associates and our customers. And, since we are always looking to increase our sales, staff, the opening of our new office is just the first step toward our goal."

Bonds to help urban areas

The New Jersey Housing and Mortgage Finance Agency announces that it has issued $90 million in tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds to finance mortgages for first-time and urban homebuyers. The money is expected to be sufficient to fund an estimated 1,600 to 2,000 loans at an interest rate of 8.375 percent.

"The interest rate on our new issue is one of the lowest we have been able to offer in years," says Leonard S. Coleman Jr., commissioner of the Department of Community Affairs and chairman of the NJMFA. "With conventional rates climbing and purchase prices remaining at all-time highs, our programs offer a real alternative to first-time homebuyers and those looking for housing in our urban areas."

The loans will be offered through the agency's network of participating lenders for its Home Mortgage Buy-and-Fix-It programs and will be fixed for a period of 30 years. The loans require a 5 percent down payment and two points — one at the time of application and the other at closing.

"The savings for a family can be realized in purchasing a home with one of our mortgages can be quite dramatic," says James L. Logue III, executive director of the NJMFA. "When you compare our mortgage rate of 8.375 percent to the 10.5 percent conventional rate, on a $70,000 mortgage, consumers save about $108 a month or $38,880 over the 30-year term of the loan."

To be eligible for Home Mortgage Program loans, the consumer's annual income cannot exceed specified limits, which are based on the county in which the home is being purchased. However, a consumer who buys a house in any of the state's 41 urban target areas does not have to be a first-time homebuyer or meet any income limits. The only requirement is that the buyer occupy the home within 60 days of closing. About one-half of the money has been set aside for prospective purchasers in urban municipalities.

"We want to be certain that the state's emerging urban centers have access to these low-interest rate funds," says Logue. "We have seen a lot of activity in the urban areas of late, which indicates that some of the best housing values in the state can be found in our older cities."

Covering all 21 counties in the state, the income limits fall into five categories ranging from $9,875 to $46,045. In addition, county purchase price limits ranging from $66,330 to $176,080 — for a single family house apply.

For the Buy-and-Fix-It Program, the fees and terms are the same. Buy-and-Fix-It loans offer the consumer an opportunity to both buy a house and rehabilitate it with a single mortgage.

"The Buy-and-Fix-It program really meets a need in the housing market," says Coleman. "By providing a single low-rate long-term loan for the purchase and rehabilitation of a home we can assist those families who have wanted to buy less expensive older homes in need of repair. In addition to serving individual homebuyers, the program has potential for revitalizing entire neighborhoods."

"The agency's low-interest rate mortgage programs provide tremendous benefits for first-time homebuyers," such as young families, elderly couples, low- and moderate-income people, and urban consumers," Coleman adds.

"Because of the escalating cost of housing in New Jersey, many of them have shied away from the housing market. We anticipate that with these low-interest rate loans, they will be inclined to look around for a house and come to us for their mortgages."

For information about the NJMFA's low-interest rate mortgages, consumers may call its toll-free hot line between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 1(800)NJ-HOUSE, or 1(609)890-1300 from out-of-state.

"Both home purchase and home search services will be provided for Grand Trunk Railroad and Paychex Inc.," notes Edward B. Kennedy, HRG president.

HRG is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the New Jersey based, $4.3 billion asset Howard Savings Bank, which also has its administrative headquarters in Livingston.

Future projections show strong home demand

By 2000, singles will make up the largest share of the nation's households, and half of the unmarried segment will be homeowners living in urban areas. About half the primary residences sold probably will be small to medium-sized single-family homes. And, about $90 billion in housing credit, excluding repaid mortgages, will be needed annually to satisfy the total demand for sales of owner-occupied detached homes, town houses, condominiums and cooperatives.

The future of the real estate industry — who will be buying what with how much — is analyzed in "The Demand for Housing and Home Financing into the 21st Century," recently completed by economists for the National Association of Realtors. The comprehensive study looks at homeownership up to the next century from two perspectives: how strong the demographic demand for housing and housing finance will be, and how the supply of mortgage credit will adjust to that demand.

According to the report, there probably will be about 106 million households in the nation by the turn of the century. The overall homeownership rate is expected to rise 67.8 percent by 2000, up from the 64.8 percent rate recorded in 1985. The steady demand will be fueled by near-record increases in households, three out of five being in the typical age range to own homes.

The study bases its demand predictions using data that categorizes households by age group, marital and family status, and region. By 1990, the 18-24, 25-29 and 30-34 age groups likely will have fewer households, and within those groups, the quantity of married people probably will drop the most. In 1985, the age group 35-44 was the largest segment, with about 17.7 million households; it is expected to remain the largest in 1990, adding about 3.6 million households by that year. By 2000, this dominant segment will have aged to the 45-54 group, which will then probably comprise about 21.7 million households. Over the next decade, the drop in other age groups more prone to rental units and the prevalence of the age groups 35-44 and 44-54 — groups more apt to own — indicates a market that will be heavily oriented toward owner-occupied housing.

Single-person households are expected to total 31.5 million by 2000, comprising the largest share, 30 percent, of the total number of projected households. More than 50 percent of the singles will very likely own their homes. Married couples with children will rank second to singles, probably totaling 28.4 million households, or 27 percent of all households. Eighty-one percent of the married couples with children are expected to be homeowners.

By 2000, the share of households accounted for by married couples without children will be about 25 percent, and 89 percent of these are expected to own their homes. The share of homes owned by two or more unmarried people is expected to rise to 37 percent.

Single-family, detached housing is projected to contribute to 83 percent of all new owner-occupied units by the turn of the century. Occupancy of units with six or fewer rooms will rise by nearly 6.1 million to a total of more than 38.4 million; while occupancy of single-family homes with seven or more rooms will rise by 0.3 million, bringing the total of larger homes to 26.9 million. The study considers a single-family home with up to six rooms as one with a kitchen, living room, dining room and one-to-three bedrooms — a bathroom is not included in the room count. A seven-room-plus home has four or more bedrooms.

A single-family, one-to-six-room home that cost $84,600 in 1985 is projected to cost $217,600 in 2000. This estimate is based on an average annual appreciation rate of 6.5 percent, making the price $15,000 in 1990 and $158,900 in 1995. The study presumes that buyers' incomes will also increase by about 6.5 percent each year, thus supporting the expected appreciation rate.

In addition to an expected higher demand for single-family homes, the study also shows, to a far smaller extent, a growing demand for multifamily units. For structures with two-to-four units, it projects a sales volume for new and existing units that ranges from 254,000 in 1990 to 278,000 in 2000. For structures with five or more units, it projects a sales volume for new and existing units that ranges from 173,000 in 1990 to 197,000 in 2000.

The anticipated consumer demand for mortgages will continue to spur the creation of financing techniques that serve as an affordable alternative to the historically popular fixed-rate loan. Various plans for home purchasing are expected to be accompanied by innovations in refinancing and borrowing against home equity. For instance, a projected increase in the retiree segment of the population will likely result in more financing options that allow the elderly to use the un tapped equity in their homes as a source of income.

The study's projections for mortgage demand include financing for new and existing home sales, refinancing and second mortgages. More than 90 percent of the loan amounts listed apply to the purchase of single-family homes. The totals projected are based on loans covering 80 percent of the purchase price.

The National Association of Realtors is the nation's largest trade association, representing more than 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Builders look at radon

"The building industry in New Jersey is deeply involved in researching cost-effective techniques to protect against radon in new homes," says New Jersey Building Association Vice President Wayne Karnell. "We are working closely with the EPA and the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs towards a radon-safe environment in new homes in the future."

As part of a partnership of public and private organizations committed to addressing concerns with radon, a New Jersey Builders Radon Advisory Group has been formed to research and field study cost-effective construction techniques to protect against radon in new homes.

The group is funded in part with a $40,000 contract with the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs to the National Association of Home Builders Research Center. Additional funding is forthcoming from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The New Jersey Builders Association is also supporting the research project.

Field agents of the NABH Research Center have buried radon detectors in the soil at undisclosed sites in New Jersey in preparation for the building of test homes containing radon-effective construction techniques for protecting against radon in new homes. The detectors are scheduled to be removed and evaluated this month.

Design and construction of the first set of test homes should begin this fall, followed by one year of monitoring upon their completion. A final report or a builders guide will be compiled and should be published by the spring of 1989.

An interim guide titled "Radon Reduction in New Construction" has just been published by the EPA and the NABH Research Foundation. (U.S. Government Printing Office: 1987, 716-002/60673). "The NJBA," says Karnell, "had considerable input to the interim guide, as we have been on top of the situation and have actively participated in radon study and research projects for some time."

Karnell says that it is potentially more cost-effective to build a radon resistant home than it is to correct a radon problem after construction.

The New Jersey Builders Association represents close to 300 member firms in the state and employs over 200,000 employees in New Jersey. The NJBA is a member of the National Association of Home Builders and has nine local affiliated home-builders associations in New Jersey.

Cites market trends

Is the time right to build, to sell or to invest in a commercial real estate venture? In the August issue of Real Estate Today, the official publication of the National Association of Realtors, G. Ronald Witten explains how "Riding the Real Estate Cycle" can give savvy investors the competitive advantage.

Witten is president of M/P/F Research Inc., a real estate market research company in Dallas.

While commercial real estate opportunities tend to present themselves when supply and demand are out of balance," Witten writes. How can real estate investors, brokers, builders or developers tell when the time is ripe for developing new projects or acquiring existing properties in a given market? To fine-tune intuition about market signals, Witten stresses that investors must study fundamental market cycles.

The typical real estate cycle includes four phases: In the first phase — development — strong user demands fuel developer's optimism pushing rent high enough to justify new construction. User demand reaches a plateau and tapers off, while developers build in response to demand. At this point, the development phase reaches maturity.

In overbuilding, the second phase — demand begins to decline as local economic growth slows down. Although developers may stop planning new projects, starts continue to increase as buildings that have been in the planning process for several months proceed.

As developers and lenders recognize the severity of overbuilding, the third phase — known as adjustment — takes effect. The number of building starts plummets.

As the economic slowdown ends, employment growth begins to rebound. The glut from previous overbuilding is reduced. This is the fourth phase — acquisition. However, lenders and developers are gun-shy and overbuilding has eroded rents and prices to the point that new building doesn't yet make economic sense. Witten recommends investment at that time. "This is an opportune time to be existing properties because owners are shell-shocked from living through the pessimism (and perhaps panic) of the overbuilt market."

"All real estate markets go through cycles," he writes. "Many people are unduly fearful after reading or listening to enough reports about horrendous overbuilding. The general public may begin to believe that 'the sky is falling' on real estate. But overbuilding and the subsequent adjustment are, in fact, part of the normal real estate cycle."

"Like any other business, real estate has highs as well as lows," Witten cautions. "The key to success lies in riding the cycle correctly — that is, buying on the low end of a cycle and selling near the top."

"The second fundamental is that every city has its own cycles, which will be unique in length of time and degree of change. Conditions in local real estate markets do not necessarily reflect national or even regional trends," Witten points to the internal dynamics of supply and demand as the most sound indicator of what the future will hold for a given market.

"Third, cycles within a city or area will vary according to the market-housing, industrial, office, and retail. Although these markets do affect one another — for example, an industrial boom will spur housing and retail needs — they move somewhat independently," Witten writes.

"Tenant or buyer demand for real estate tends to be cyclical, tracking local and/or national business trends," he explains.

Whichever Realtor

Says, 'Get it in writing'

By ALAN WASERMAN
Association of Trial Lawyers of America — New Jersey
Under the statute of Frauds, in order for a broker to receive a commission in a real estate sale, the brokerage agreement must be in writing. As a further extension of this law, if there is a document in writing indicating that a party will be responsible for a brokerage commission and there is no specific amount or percentage that would calculate exactly what the commission is, the broker is still not entitled to a brokerage commission. An agreement without the commission being clearly set forth violates the Statute of Frauds.

The only way a broker can get around the Statute of Frauds Law is by complying with what I call the "5 day rule." What this rule provides is, in the event that a broker/salesperson enters into an oral agreement with the owner/landlord of real estate and, for whatever reasons, cannot obtain a written agreement executed by the owner of that real estate, the broker can submit a letter either by registered mail, return receipt requested, or by delivering same personally, within five days after the making of the oral agreement, but prior to the actual sale of the real estate in question. This letter must set forth the specific terms of the oral agreement, including the actual rate or amount of commission to be paid.

Like any other rule, regulation or law, we all learn from experience that there are a number of "exceptions and possible" exceptions. Without going into detail, I would like to briefly enumerate important categories of exceptions:

• The Courts have determined that where a broker is representing a purchaser of land and the purchaser of that land agrees to pay the broker/salesperson a commission, that contract need not be in writing. However, be aware that you could have a sparring match between the parties as to who said what and who agreed to what.

• The broker/salesperson may have a chance of obtaining a real estate commission on a matter that is not incorporated into a writing where it can be proven that the property owner committed fraud and/or deceit in inducing the broker/salesperson to expend his time and efforts in consummating the sale. However, this would be very difficult to prove.

• There are times that memorandums rather than formal contracts — assuming they have the essential ingredients setting forth the agreement and the amount of money a broker will receive for his commission — may enforce the payment of a commission even though a formal contract has not been executed between the parties.

Edison community proves popular

Schlott Realtors reports that Elegante Estates, an upscale community of 21 custom-designed homes, is fast becoming the popular choice of executives who commute into New York City. Located in North Edison, Elegante Estates is just two minutes from the Metro Park Train Station and only 38 minutes to New York.

Elegante Estates offers four different custom home styles from which to choose. For those who prefer a traditional home, there are two classic colonials with brick exteriors, and for the more modern tastes, two cedar-front contemporaries. All of the homes have four spacious bedrooms with either an additional fifth bedroom or den, as well as 2½ baths.

These 3,500-square-foot homes feature finely hand-crafted stone fireplaces, state-of-the-art, eat-in kitchens with custom-made cabinets, full basements, Andersen windows, two-zone heat and air conditioning, two-car garages, and Timberline roofs.

The homes at Elegante Estates start in the mid-$300,000s and can be personally customized with options like a Jacuzzi tub, wall safe, intercom, and burglar and/or fire alarm system.

North Edison has an excellent school system and has a variety of shopping malls, including the Woodbridge Mall. Close to the Garden State Parkway, New Jersey Turnpike and Route 287, all points in New Jersey and the surrounding metropolitan area are within easy reach.

More information regarding Elegante Estates can be obtained by contacting Marie Nagengast or Barbara Schaefer in the Metro Park Office on South Wood Avenue, Iselin, or by phone, 321-2110.

Property owners open membership

The Board of Governors of the Property Owners Association have announced its annual fall membership campaign. The goal of obtaining at least 100 additional new members will be a joint effort of the board, the general membership and the staff.

The campaign will take a number of forms. A mail program, now verified over the past two years, will be expanded into new territories. All members of the Property Owners Association will be asked to again bring their friends and business associates into membership. Last year and during the first part of 1987, general members accounted for at least 35 new memberships.

The Property Owners Association, soon to celebrate its 40th anniversary, is the largest trade group in the shelter industry, serving the needs of owners and managers of multi-family rental properties. For more information write to 1981 Morris Ave., Union, 07083.

Century 21 opens new office

Century 21 Ray Bell & Associates announced the opening of its new office facility at 1915 Morris Ave. The new location is just a half block east of its original location.

Eva Kreybig, broker/owner of Century 21 Ray Bell in Union, says, "Our expansion will allow us to increase our services to our clients in the Union County area. The opening also underlines our commitment to leadership in real estate services to the community."

The agents say that theirs is a team effort and they are privileged to be associated with Kreybig, who has enthusiasm and experience that sets the high standard of the office.

Established in 1949, the Ray Bell name has long been associated with the Union area. The new office facility, designed by Surroundings, Inc., offers a congenial working environment. The spaciousness of the new location also opens opportunities for new sales agents to join the team. All this sets the stage for new horizons for Century 21 Ray

Bell & Associates making the example for the Century 21 office image a reality.

The office provides expert residential and commercial real estate services along with financing and market area knowledge. It offers the convenience and expertise of a one-stop, full service real estate office for customers' buying, selling and investment needs.

The public and prospective agents are invited to come by and see the new office and talk to some of the people who, together, were involved in over $50 billion in successful real estate transactions.

Marks its 15th year

Richard C. Fischer Inc.'s Real Estate office at 270 E. Broad St., Westfield, marks its 15th year of service to the Union County community this year.

Part of a 10-office real estate network with locations in Union, Morris, Somerset, Hunterdon, Warren and Mercer counties, the Westfield office has specialized in residential home sales and listings since 1972.

Office manager Charlotte Cohen cites several reasons for the office's longevity. "It takes a good location and a strong real estate economy to be successful, but most important is the people you have working for you. My office is staffed with competent, educated and dedicated sales people."

The Westfield office may be contacted at 232-0066 or by stopping at its E. Broad Street location.

Builders look at radon

"The building industry in New Jersey is deeply involved in researching cost-effective techniques to protect against radon in new homes," says New Jersey Building Association Vice President Wayne Karnell. "We are working closely with the EPA and the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs towards a radon-safe environment in new homes in the future."

As part of a partnership of public and private organizations committed to addressing concerns with radon, a New Jersey Builders Radon Advisory Group has been formed to research and field study cost-effective construction techniques to protect against radon in new homes.

The group is funded in part with a $140,000 contract with the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs to the National Association of Home Builders Research Center. Additional funding is forthcoming from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The New Jersey Builders Association is also supporting the research project.

Field agents of the NAHB Research Center have buried radon detectors in the soil at undisclosed sites in New Jersey in preparation for the building of test homes containing cost-effective construction techniques for protecting against radon in new homes. The detectors are scheduled to be removed and evaluated this month.

Design and construction of the first set of test homes should begin this fall, followed by one year of monitoring upon their completion. A final report or a builders guide will be compiled and should be published by the spring of 1988.

An interim guide titled "Radon Reduction in New Construction" has just been published by the EPA and the NAHB Research Foundation. (U.S. Government Printing Office: 1987, 716-002/60873). "The NJBA," says Karnell, "had considerable input in the interim guide, as we have been on top of the situation and have actively participated in radon study and research projects for some time."

Karnell says that it is potentially more cost-effective to build a radon resistant home than it is to correct a radon problem after construction.

The New Jersey Builders Association represents close to 300 member firms in the state and employs over 200,000 employees in New Jersey. The NJBA is a member of the National Association of Home Builders and has nine local affiliated home builders associations in New Jersey.

State plan concerns builders

Property taxes will rise dramatically throughout New Jersey if a proposed statewide plan for the development of New Jersey until the year 2010 is put into effect, says New Jersey Builders Association President Robert Adams.

The plan is the draft State Development and Redevelopment Plan, which was recently released by the State Planning Commission. That commission was created by a legislative act signed by Governor Thomas Kean last year to develop a plan for New Jersey's growth into the early years of the next century. "The draft plan will destroy the strong economic base New Jersey now enjoys by making it difficult for companies to relocate in our state. Without this movement, our economy will be devastated and the taxpayers will be made to bear the brunt to pay for support services in their communities," explains Adams.

Schlott Realtors has been looking to expand in this area, thereby reinforcing its presence in the market," says Reilly. "This area is experiencing tremendous growth, especially in the waterfront community, and we are all excited to be part of this growth."

Adams cites these reasons why he believes property taxes will rise if the plan takes effect:

The plan prohibits or severely restricts commercial development in all but 25 percent of the state. Absolutely no new employment opportunities would be created in 48 percent of the state which is designated a no-growth area. These development barriers would negate the incentives New Jersey has given companies to bring new jobs into the state. The result would be that companies will seek to locate in other states.

The draft plan would add one million new people to the state's cities. The plan makes no provision for the construction of new housing units. The plan makes no provision for the construction of new roads, bridges, and other infrastructure.

recognition of the infrastructure needs of these areas, nor does it assess how such basic systems as schools will be upgraded to meet the demands of this added population. Faced with this scenario, taxes in both the urban and suburban areas will have to be increased to help offset this situation.

When a similar comprehensive program took effect in New Jersey's Pinelands, the loss of total assessed value on almost all undeveloped property was so severe, emergency legislation was needed for the state to fund municipalities. This plan allows only one home per 20 acres in major areas throughout the state, which undoubtedly means undeveloped acreage will lose more of its valuation. Once again, to make up for this loss, homeowners and businesses will be squeezed even harder.

"This is a radical plan that must not be allowed to go into effect," says Adams. "And rising taxes are only one detrimental effect of the plan. We see increased traffic jams, skyrocketing home prices, and economic damage to farmers."

A pair of apartment complexes in the Union County community of Linden were converted to condominium ownership recently, according to Arthur Cirkus, president and CEO of Cirkus Real Estate Group, the Clinton-based full-service real estate organization which handled the conversion process.

Manor receives accolades

Once again The Manor Restaurant of West Orange, garnered the highest award — Best of the Best — in the Readers' Choice Awards announced by New Jersey Monthly magazine in the August 1987 issue.

The voters in the fourth annual poll handed The Manor still more honors. They judged the wine list at The Manor the best of all northern New Jersey restaurants.

IRS to eyeball house sales

In an effort to ensure that taxpayers report on their tax returns the profit realized on the sale of their homes, the person responsible for closing the transaction is now required to provide the Internal Revenue Service with the name and address of the seller, and the proceeds of the sale and certain other information. The IRS will match this information with data appearing on tax returns.

A copy of the form (1099-B) will also be given to the seller before Feb. 1, 1988. Generally, the difference between the price at which a person bought and sold a home, minus home improvement costs, are now taxed at a 28 percent capital gains rate. A taxpayer can defer the tax on the profit, if he or she within two years purchases a new home that exceeds the profit on the old home.

Manor, states that New Jersey diners who have voted in the poll have been consistent in bestowing this award upon The Manor.

Receiving this vote of confidence just makes us more determined to continue our high standards of offering the finest dining in a beautiful, relaxed setting and having customers pampered by our excellent service staff," says Knowles.

Also, taxpayers age 65 and above who have lived in a home at least three years prior to it being sold can exclude up to $125,000 of their profit from the capital gains tax. This is a once-in-a-lifetime benefit.

More information on reporting real estate transactions to the IRS are contained in Publication 924, which can be obtained free of charge by calling 1-800-424-3876.

Realtors see cutback

A rise in inflation, a high trade deficit, a depreciated dollar and higher overall interest rates have subdued the nation's economic forecast, according to analysts for the National Association of Realtors.

"The recent instability that has wracked financial markets for more than six weeks has cast a more pessimistic tone on our current outlook," says Dr. John A. Tuccillo, NAR's chief economist.

The real, or inflation-adjusted, growth rate of the gross national product probably will be sluggish during the second and third quarter of 1987, he notes. The GNP, which is the total market value of the nation's goods and services, is predicted to increase at an annualized rate of 1.2 percent in the second quarter, then rise to 1.4 percent rate in the third quarter, before jumping to 3.2 percent in the final quarter of 1987 to a total of $4.516 billion.

"While growth will slow in the second and third quarters, the stage is set for a significant rebound toward the end of the year," Tuccillo says.

He does not anticipate a long-term economic slide. "We expect the next two months will bring good news, in the form of a strengthened dollar and a shrinking trade deficit," Tuccillo says. A stabilization of oil prices, coupled with lower export prices, is expected to begin boosting the dollar's stumbling value. U.S. currency declined in foreign exchange markets by 21.8 percent in 1986 and by 24.2 percent during the first quarter of 1987 after rising 70 percent between 1984 and 1985.

Analysts believe the trade deficit, which shows the United States currently consuming about $140 billion more in foreign imports than it is exporting, probably will become less lopsided as the dollar gradually grows stronger.

"The falling dollar will result in higher inflation this year than last," Tuccillo said. "But, we don't expect inflation to go much above 4 percent for the year's average." The association believes that the "inflationary fears currently plaguing financial markets are exaggerated," he added.

In recent weeks, the dollar's depreciation triggered inflation worries, causing investors in bond and mortgage markets to demand greater yields. Since the yields offered on many types of mortgage-backed securities are directly tied to the yields of U.S. bonds, lenders raised interest rates for mortgages to keep pace with higher bond yields.

In fact, a continued steady pace of inflation could result in an easing of interest rates over the next three months," Tuccillo says. "If investors' expectations of rising inflation are not fulfilled, the financial markets will calm down."

The NAR is currently predicting that the nominal, or quoted, interest rate for fixed-rate, 30-year conventional mortgages will average 9.6 percent for 1987, down from 9.9 percent for 1986. That interest rate averaged 8.9 percent for the first quarter of 1987, and likely will average 10.5 percent for the year's second quarter, before starting to drift downward.
