Cieri suing Zucker for 'libel letter'

By MARK YABLONSKY
Former Springfield Mayor William Cieri Sr. has filed a five-count civil lawsuit against municipal Judge Leonard Zucker. The suit charges the magistrate with "wickedly and maliciously" intending to harm Cieri's reputation through the contents of a letter mailed to potential voters on the eve of last year's municipal election. Cieri lost the election by 28 votes.

The civil action, which was drafted on Sept. 28 and filed with the Union County Superior Court earlier this month, also holds Zucker's law partners liable for damages. The letter was written on stationery from the Zucker, Goldberg, Becker and Ackerman law firm, located in Maplewood.

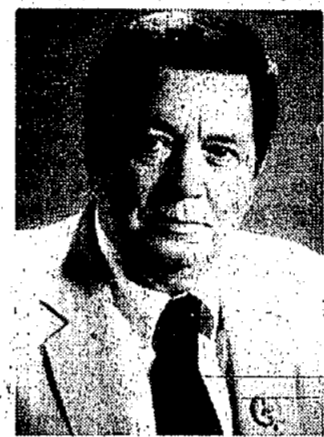

Zucker's letter, which the Springfield Leader has obtained, was dated Nov. 2, 1987, and was mailed to tenants at the Summit Hill apartment complex, located near the former Houdaille Quarry site.

Cieri, who served on the Township Committee from 1978 to 1986, takes issue with the letter's second paragraph, which states that he voted to rezone the quarry "for a single-family residential use to fulfill the Town's 'Mount Laurel' obligation." The letter strongly urged the tenants to "Protect your interests! Vote on November 3rd for Phil Kurnos. Your future depends on it."

The letter further stated: "Phil Kurnos vigorously opposes the use of the old Houdaille Quarry property property's previous use — has been under S-120 residential zoning since 1955.

According to township zoning maps and Township Engineer Leo J. Eckmann, the area around the quarry — that is, areas not affected by the 300 such units during his most recent three-year tenure in office. The quarry, however, was never rezoned into residential status during that time; it already was zoned residential, he said.

Once owned by Houdaille Construction Materials Inc., the quarry was later split into two sections by the path of federal Highway 178. The state Department of Transportation purchased the quarry shortly before construction began in late 1982 on the "Missing Link" — the last, uncompleted 5.5-mile stretch of the Highway through Springfield, Summit and Berkeley Heights.

Kurnos, who is self-employed and a former Minuteman basketball coach, was Cieri's Republican opponent in last year's election. In an election outcome that surprised many local political pundits, Kurnos defeated Cieri by only a slim margin, and altered the governing body's composition from a 3-2 Democratic majority to a 3-2 Republican majority. Kurnos replaced former Democratic Committee Chairman and Mayor Edward Fanning.

Cieri had sought re-election after having decided not to run again in 1986, the year his last term expired. All of his personal campaigning, however, came to a halt upon the untimely death of his son, the late William Cieri Jr., a former member of the Secret Service and the Union County Prosecutor's Office, who fell victim to a heart attack on Oct. 22, 1987.

Mount Laurel refers to a 1983 N.J. Supreme Court ruling that mandates the construction of low- and moderate-income housing in all communities throughout New Jersey. Springfield, Cieri said, was assigned officially appointed magistrate on Jan. 3, the day Kurnos took office and joined fellow Republican committee members Jeffrey Katz and JoAnn Pieper on the five-person governing body. The other two committee members are first-term Democratic incumbents Sy Mullman and William M. Welsh.

The second count charges that the "the printing, publication and distribution of the libelous statements by defendant law firm, Zucker, Goldberg, Becker and Ackerman, was done with the aim of electing Phil Kurnos and placing the Republicans in control of the Springfield Committee, as a result of which plaintiff, William Cieri, has been caused to suffer severe and profound emotional distress."

"Wherefore," the fifth count concludes, "plaintiff demands judgment...for compensatory, special and punitive damages, together with interest, costs and attorneys' fees."

Cieri is being represented by Springfield resident Howard Schwartz, a former Democratic municipal chairman, who estimated that "we should get a calendar in six months," in regard to when the case will come to court.

When asked to state specifically what damages and other forms of reparation his client is seeking, Schwartz replied, "That will depend upon discovery in the proceedings." Zucker declined comment on the lawsuit. He said he was "not aware" of it.

A 'long life' display at library

By DOMINICK CRINCOLI JR.
Those who don't pay too much attention to the ingredients in the foods they eat may find themselves checking the labels more carefully after they've viewed the nutrition display at the library this month.

Do you keep Skippy peanut butter in your home? Get rid of it, too much cholesterol. Do you like M&M's candies? Forget it, too much lead. Smuckers jelly? Too much sugar. Corn flakes, Cheerios, white rice? Sorry folks, no good. So says Gloria Rose, director of St. "gourmet, long-life" cooking schools throughout the state, who arranged the exhibit.

"We are going through a nutritional revolution in this country," said Rose.

This Springfield resident, dietitian and nutritionist coordinated the display with the help of colorful exhibits and signs made by students in the graphic arts department at the Jonathan Dayton Regional High School along with nutrition students from the Gaudineer Middle School.

Rose is the author of a cookbook, "Enjoying Good Health," which was published this past January. She has appeared on radio and television-talk shows throughout the country.

The library exhibit consists of, for example, a jar of Skippy peanut butter standing alongside a jar of Polar natural peanut butter, in order to illustrate the good, and bad things to eat.

Name brands are exhibited, adding a practical dimension to the display, so that the "right" purchase is only a supermarket away.

"The popular opinion that all one needs to do to maintain good health is have a little broiled fish and some steamed vegetables and again is completely absurd," Rose said.

"We are very proud of the fact that we have been successful in retaining delicious flavors in all our recipes yet eliminating 90 percent of the fat content, all sodium and 90 percent of all sugars," the school brochure reads.

The principle of the high fiber, high complex-carbohydrate diet that the school promotes is to lower high cholesterol, Rose said.

She claimed that anyone following her dietary mandates could bring their cholesterol level down 40 points in three weeks.

Also, the cooking program is designed to reduce the risk of heart disease, cancer, diabetes, hypertension or high blood pressure, obesity, stress, arthritis, renal and other life-shortening disorders.

Additionally, there is an accent on quick food preparation — minimal downtime in the kitchen.

Rose devises diets for many patients in the area who suffer from these ailments. In fact, she said, 60 percent of her patients are those recently released from the hospital.

"We are an extension of the physician, not a fad," she said of her nutrition methods.

She said Springfield is the first stop for the floating exhibit, and that it will be brought to libraries all around the country.

Woman assaulted, suspect is at large

By DOMINICK CRINCOLI JR.
A Springfield woman was sexually assaulted in her home the afternoon of Oct. 14 by a suspect who identified himself as a utility repair person, Police Chief William E. Chisholm said.

Area police are searching for the suspect they described as black, 25 to 30 years old, of medium build, about 5 feet 9 inches tall, muscular, clean shaven with short curly hair, and wearing a blue work shirt and pants.

"Chisholm warned residents not to open their doors to strangers claiming to be repairmen, or other representatives of companies, who cannot show proof of identity. The chief said that citizens should immediately report any suspicious person or strange activity to police.

"This was the first reported rape in Springfield since 1985," he said. "We have witnesses who saw him leaving the scene of the crime who can attest to what he looks like," the chief said.

The aggravated sexual assault occurred around 3:35 p.m., said Chisholm, who added that police believe the same suspect may have also tried to gain entrance into another apartment on the pretense of being "sent by the superintendent."

CAMPAIGN '88

Republican candidates for Township Committee Jeff Katz and Marc Marshall submitted the following article for this week's Campaign Corner. Democratic candidates for Township Committee Bob DiCarlo and David Stein submitted the following article for this week's Campaign Corner.

"A penny saved is a penny earned." That's not only an old adage, but Springfield's new theme as well. Through September of this year, our townspeople took 1.56 million pounds of recyclables (glass, aluminum and newspaper) out of the solid waste stream. That resulted in tax-savings of more than $107,000. That's good... a big improvement over last year, but we can and will do better. That's where the Katz/Marshall plan comes into play.

Well, the Katz/Marshall team is one of action. Standing idly by and being victimized is not part of our policy. Besides saving tax dollars by expanding the recycling program, our plans include: 1. Negotiating with the Union County Utilities Authority to have other communities pay a "host benefit" fee of $2.50 per cubic yard for leaf dumping.

Remember, a penny saved is not only a penny earned but tax dollars you won't have to spend.

Point of light

We hope this week's open houses at the First Aid Squad will be an indication that volunteerism is still alive and well in Springfield.

Members of the squad sponsored the open houses as a last-ditch effort to recruit volunteers. The crew has been dwindling for some time, a fact that put considerable fear into the mind of Squad Capt. Liz Fritzen. The captain is sincerely worried about the consequences of having to cut daytime shifts and rely on neighboring squads to aid Springfielders in time of emergency. Fritzen says the squad should consist of 60 volunteers. It has 25.

Anyone who ever had the slightest interest in serving the township in a volunteer capacity should go to the squad headquarters tonight, for the last open house, and listen to what Fritzen has to say. Her concern and obvious sincerity will surely appeal to the townsfolk who care deeply about their neighbors and their hometown, as she does.

We keep hearing about the "thousand points of light" from one presidential candidate who sees volunteerism as the pride of hometown America. Liz Fritzen and her emergency crew account for 25 points of light in Springfield. We know there are a lot more out there, waiting to shine.

A better way

Yet another serious problem is being confronted in the state Legislature with a "lock 'em up and throw away the key" proposal.

A better, although more complicated way to cut thefts over the long run might be to look at constructive, preventative measures rather than wielding an ax at symptoms of a much larger problem.

The proposal is a tough new law dealing with car thieves, who have terrorized the Route 22 corridor, among other places, in Union County. Thefts in Union, Roselle and Roselle Park have more than doubled since 1984, according to statistics kept by the state police. Thefts in Springfield, Mountainside and Kenilworth also have risen dramatically over the same period.

The perpetrators, in large part, have been inner-city juveniles, hired by adults to steal cars. Youths are likely to face much milder penalties while shielding adult theft ringleaders from prosecution.

The proposal, sponsored by Sen. C. Louis Bassano, R-21, would send adults who direct others to steal cars to jail for a minimum of five years. Jail terms would be accompanied by fines of up to $150,000 or five times the value of vehicles stolen.

The new proposal goes hand-in-hand with a bill, authored by Bassano last spring, that would mandate jail terms for juveniles convicted of auto theft.

Companion legislation would come down hard on the operators of "chop shops," where stolen cars are repaired, disassembled for parts or otherwise remodeled for resale.

The proposals are patterned after last year's drug legislation, which has resulted in an increase in arrests but done little to stop the spread of illegal drugs. A check of local police blotters and court dockets each week shows the arrest and conviction of users, but few big-time drug dealers, whose methods seem to become more brutal with each beefed-up, anti-crime law.

In many cases, a new dealer replaces the one arrested before the suspect's fingerprints have had time to dry. Reports of drug-dealing outposts that look more like fortresses on the Western frontier increase daily.

The new proposals certainly make legislators like Bassano, who criticized "liberals" in favor of other measures for dealing with crime, look like they're confronting the spread of crime head on.

In theory, it sounds great, but enforcement is another matter. Local police departments are already overburdened, chasing speeders, drunk drivers, small-time drug offenders and a wide variety of other lawbreakers.

Union County Prosecutor John Stamler said it would be a matter of "manpower management," where local police administrators would adjust schedules to the hours when the most thefts are committed.

Car thieves, however, are likely to notice when and where more police are on patrol and simply adjust their own schedules. A better solution might be to urge local governments to adopt laws requiring the owners of shopping centers, where a large percentage of thefts take place, to hire private patrols for their parking lots.

Union has already reported an as-yet-undetermined decrease in thefts due to such an ordinance passed last year.

It might be better for the state Legislature to provide more money for more teachers and new schools, where potential car thieves in places like Newark and Irvington might stand a chance of getting a decent education.

The inadequacy of educational facilities and personnel in those two urban areas and many others is well-documented. Many children, who have virtually no chance of getting a quality education, are easily convinced that a life of crime is more profitable than the far-away dream of a productive life in society.

Sending juveniles to jail, another of Bassano's proposals, would do little to deter crime than it would produce new lifetime criminals.

If the Legislature truly wants to deter car thefts, the spread of illegal drugs, burglaries and every other crime that turns a profit, they've got to convince inner-city youths that a productive life in society is not a dream and can be realized.

That can only be done by providing some basic tools: education and job training, which can help potential criminals earn a living which is at least comparable to the "living" earned by committing a crime.

Student urges passage of bond act

As a student of Union County College and a lifelong resident of New Jersey, I am asking my fellow citizens to vote in favor of the Jobs, Education, and Competitiveness Bond Act this Nov. 8, Election Day.

New Jersey needs to upgrade its higher education facilities. The last bond act of this kind was passed in 1971. However, facilities built in the 1970s are just not good enough to compete in the 1990s and the 21st century.

The Jobs, Education, and Competitiveness Bond Act of 1988 will provide $308 million to be distributed amongst our state's colleges and universities. They are Rutgers, The State University, the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, New Jersey Institute of Technology, all eight state colleges, the 19 county community colleges, and the 16 private institutions that serve this state.

The Bond Act will also provide $42 million to expand New Jersey's advanced technology centers on campuses throughout the state. These high-tech centers will not only train our students for jobs, but will conduct research to improve the standard of living for New Jersey residents.

The colleges will have to participate in this renovation process also. For every one dollar the state spends on the college, they will have to raise 50 cents to add to the amount. In total, nearly half a billion dollars will be spent on improving education facilities.

New Jersey has fallen behind other states in providing the best education possible for their students. Why shouldn't we have the same advantages that are available to students all across the United States?

New Jersey residents, we need to look towards the future. We must offer our students what other states already have: the best education possible.

Vote yes for the Jobs, Education, and Competitiveness Bond Act this Nov. 8.

Vote yes to continued prosperity for our students and our state.

Family Service says thanks for support

When the United Way of Eastern Union County asks for contributions, some people may not fully appreciate how essential United Way support is to the area's non-profit organizations.

Family Service Association in Summit is one of the 83 programs and services that receive financial assistance from the United Way of Eastern Union County. This money helps us to provide lower cost non-profit counseling for families and individuals in Springfield as part of the area we serve. We are able, therefore, to treat people suffering with family or emotional problems who cannot afford the fees of other practitioners.

These people have nowhere else to turn, and were it not for United Way, we could not provide this service.

We deeply appreciate United Way Support. It has permitted us to head off many lesser emotional difficulties that could have developed into major problems for the community at large.

We urge your readers to contribute generously to United Way. It repays donors many times over by helping organizations such as ours to improve the quality of life for our less fortunate neighbors and ultimately for us all.

State we're in

State Plan leaves in the 'character'

By DAVID F. MOORE

Do you feel a growing sense of dissatisfaction with your one-familiar surroundings? Is your town's identity as a community slipping away?

Is it because of a fast-food joint or some other glibly outlet on the outskirts of town, or invading the center of an otherwise stable business district?

Is it the new houses springing up in old neighborhoods, which all seem to have come from the same plastic factory, so that they look more like a Hollywood set than your home town?

Is it the fact that the people who occupy them move away, thanks to corporate transfers, before you get a chance to know them?

Is it because there is more traffic every week, so that it takes you longer to get where you're going in this state we're in? Is it the trip to the beach only to find it closed, this time because of pollution instead of too many people who got there ahead of you?

There's a reason for these gnawing realizations that things are less like they used to be—or should be. It's the business of change, something that creeps up on us in little bits here and there—or sometimes in large chunks—until suddenly everything is different.

The new proposed State Plan, a near-epoch effort to meet development everywhere, will soon be revealed to the municipalities. They will be able to look at themselves from the standpoint of the State Plan and see how they fit in, to see what vision they have of themselves and how they can keep and enhance that vision.

This is going to be possible through—the State Plan's "cross acceptance process," a way of insuring that state, county and local planning all agree. You can and should be a part of that process in your town.

Recycling schedule
SPRINGFIELD
Newspaper, glass and aluminum cans: First and third Fridays. Residents are advised to set out their recyclables by 8:30 a.m. the day they are scheduled for recycling.

Granted, the aging process makes all of us tend to react this way, but the fact is, change happens more than it usually necessary and often, it seems, just for the sake of being change itself. It is obviously impossible to stay in the 19th century, and none of us would really want it that way—but is something happening around us which need not?

The answer is yes. New Jersey has 567 municipalities and, thus far in its better-sketched development, there has been virtually no relationship between the growth plans of towns which are adjacent. What's more, most ordinances are written to generate property tax revenue, and seldom reflect human need. The result is a general loss of character and identity which needn't happen.

The new proposed State Plan, a near-epoch effort to meet development everywhere, will soon be revealed to the municipalities. They will be able to look at themselves from the standpoint of the State Plan and see how they fit in, to see what vision they have of themselves and how they can keep and enhance that vision.

This is going to be possible through—the State Plan's "cross acceptance process," a way of insuring that state, county and local planning all agree. You can and should be a part of that process in your town.

And that's right, nobody did. David Moore is executive director of the New Jersey Conservation Foundation.

A good buy

It's hard to imagine there's anyone in town who has never heard of the Girl Scout Cookie Sale. It's been a national ritual since 1936!

But many people may not know just how important the sale is to those girls who are Scouts. Each troop has programs that couldn't happen without the cookie sale, such as ice skating, bowling, Girl Scout Week activities, and camping trips to Camp Hoover. Every package sold means money directly to the troop treasury for badges, workshops, trips, service projects, and lots of other activities.

Cookie money also supports the Washington Rock Girl Scout Council. Washington Rock organizes troops, trains leaders, provides programs for girls, insurance for volunteers, and runs Camp Hoover for outdoor learning. The cookie sale helps make all of this possible.

So, when a Girl Scout calls on you to ask for your cookie order, remember you're not buying cookies, you're buying Girl Scouting. And you're getting a great box of cookies.

Quayle comment showed his 'naivete'

Our family watched the Quayle/Bentsen debate with increased enthusiasm as this is the first time my daughter will be voting.

The most revealing comment by Quayle was when asked if he had a guiding philosophy. Quayle replied that his grandmother had impressed him with a notion he has since shared with his children and others. Quayle's philosophy is, "You can be anything you want to be."

Even my 18-year-old daughter laughed at his naivete. However, for someone born into wealth, power, and with all the doors of opportunity open, it fits Quayle's life experience.

As for one who has lived in the real world and worked in our inner cities, I unfortunately know that many of our nation's children and families are not being given a fair chance to "be anything they want to be."

Children born into poverty with limited opportunity for a strong family life, exposed to guns, drugs, and alcohol in their neighborhoods, and provided with inadequate education, are not given a fair chance.

Children who are born with physical or emotional handicaps who are not provided with equal access to quality health care, are not given a fair chance.

Children born into families who cannot find affordable, safe housing are not given a fair chance.

And the list goes on and on.

What Quayle's comment underscores is a lack of sensitivity and understanding regarding the reality of other American's lives. Unfortunately, we are not a nation of equals. Some of us have had more opportunity/luck from the beginning.

Of utmost concern about Quayle's train of thought, "You can be anything you want to be," is that it is one step away from the next simplistic assumption, that if you don't make something of yourself, it's all your fault, in other words, it is the individual's fault for not making something of himself.

As one of the "blatant" baby boomers, who is working to instill a sense of morality in my children, the message must be that those among us who have been given the tools to get ahead, stable home environment, financial security, safe neighborhoods, excellent educational opportunities, owe less fortunate Americans the chance to help them realize their dreams. This great nation was not founded on the Yuppie notion of "I've got mine and now you figure out a way to get yours."

In closing, I have resisted the temptation of suggesting to my daughter for whom she should vote. My hope is that she shares my worldview and will not only be voting for herself, but for those less fortunate; for she knows well my guiding philosophy, "There but for the grace of God, go I."

Questions Senate president's 'liability'

After the Bentsen-Quayle debate, Senator John Russo characterized Dan Quayle as an embarrassment.

I may be wrong but I do not recall Russo ever being present when Dukakis appeared in New Jersey. Russo, being the highest ranking Democrat in the state, should have been at the side of Dukakis at least once. Could it be that the president of the New Jersey Senate has become a political liability due to his extreme positions such as his gun bill and the extremely powerful negative response it has generated throughout the state? It do believe that he is in fact perceived as a liability as well as an embarrassment to the state of New Jersey.

Asbestos removal firm hired

The federal determination initiated a change in policy, which became effective in December 1987, that established the current mandatory inspection and management plan for the removal of both friable and non-friable building material from all public school districts.

The state has set a May 9, 1989 deadline for submission of the reports. Implementation of the plan is scheduled for July 1, 1989.

As announced, was the fact that Springfield is one step closer to passing the state Department of Education's regular five-year evaluation of the Springfield school district next year.

Specifically, certain complications with classrooms at the Caldwell and Sandmeier schools have been cleared up; namely, improper ventilation, remote fire exits, and the lack of bathrooms in the kindergarten classrooms. These were obstacles standing in the way of certification by the Department of Education five years ago.

Last week, however, the state body came, and approved the $39,000 worth of upgrading and repair performed at the two schools, Superintendent of Schools Dr. Gary Friedland said.

The money was taken from the capital outlay portion of the $6.2 million school budget.

New computers at regional library

Local high-schoolers may think they are in a supermarket rather than their school library. A new computer system implemented this year in the Jonathan Dayton Regional High School's Key Club typed the titles of all four regional high schools has not only speeded up the check-out process, but significantly improved how the libraries do business.

Betty Ruffley, director of the Jonathan Dayton Regional High School media center, said the regional district has purchased computer monitors and keyboards for each of its schools. A bar code, similar to the one used in supermarket foods, has been placed on every book and periodical in the library.

Each student has also been assigned their very own bar code. These codes are kept in a file at the main library desk. When a student checks a book out, the librarian takes the computer's "wand" and rubs the tip across the student's bar code.

Ruffley said at this point the student's name appears on the screen with a list of all books the student has previously checked out. It also details the cost of each book and if any library materials are overdue.

The librarian then places the wand to the bar code of each book the student wants to check out. The title of the book then appears on the computer's screen with its due date.

"It's cut down on clerical time by about 25 to 30 percent," said Ruffley. Janet Josephhus of the David Bretzler Regional High School library said the majority of the library's 20,000 books have been computerized.

"I think it is super," she said. "It really is an excellent system."

Josephhus said a group of students and library staff spent most of the summer stamping bar codes on the back covers of books. Other workers typed student names and library materials into the computer system. The students who helped out were part of the student-work program.

"Some of them thought they would never see the light at the end of the tunnel," she said.

Simple mistakes of the past such as placing the wrong cards in books upon their return to the library can now be avoided, said Josephhus. A student can also find out the number of books he has taken out and when they should be returned.

Josephhus said the regional district no longer issues fines for materials returned late. But the new circulation system now can keep better tabs on who has books out and when they are due.

Ruffley noted that the computer system includes a printer which the library can use to print overdue book notices not only to the students but to their parents as well.

If a member of the library staff wants to know the number of library materials in circulation at a given time, all she has to do is call it up on the computer. For instance, Ruffley, in demonstrating the system, called up data which indicated so far in October a total of 187 books have been checked out during the month. As of Oct. 6 a total of 479 books, including books checked out in September, remain in circulation. Fifteen books were overdue last week.

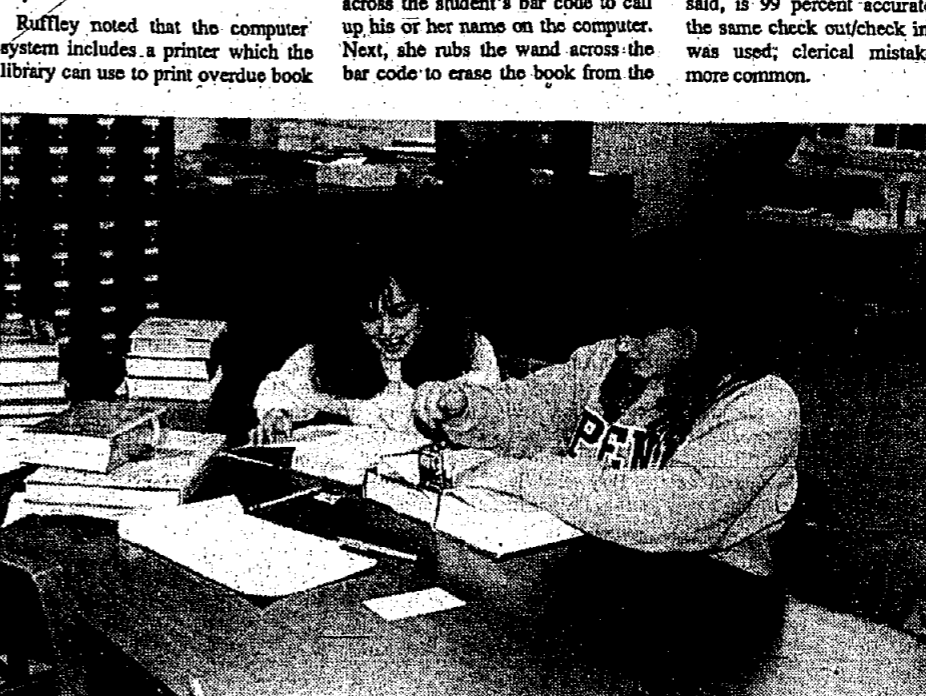

When a book is returned, Ruffley said, the library staffer rubs the wand across the student's bar code to call up his or her name on the computer. Next, she rubs the wand across the bar code to erase the book from the student's record of checked-out materials.

In order for the new system to be implemented by the start of the school year, students in Dayton's Key Club typed the titles of all materials in the library which can be checked out. Each student's name also had to be put into the system.

"That gave us a terrific start," said Ruffley, noting that staff members would have been forced to take time away from their work to complete the process.

The new computer system, Ruffley said, is 99 percent accurate. When the same check out/check in process was used; clerical mistakes were more common.

Doherty is suspended

County counsel Robert Doherty was suspended by the Board of Freeholders last week pending an investigation that will determine whether charges should be brought against him in connection with an unauthorized payment to the county's insurance company.

A grand jury, impaneled last February to investigate charges that an improperly reported in the payment of insurance premiums, reported that Doherty withheld billing notices from retired county employees and instead let the county pick up the tab for more than $100,000 in insurance increases. He did so, the jury said, to avoid a potentially damaging campaign issue last year, when the Republican majority on the board was at stake. Doherty was appointed by the GOP majority.

According to the grand jury's presentment, the county's top attorney and head of the law department engaged in partisan politics in an effort to protect Republican freeholders during last year's election. It was, however, a futile attempt since the GOP did lose control of the board.

The suspension relieves Doherty from his duties but continues his salary, which is just over $80,000 a year.

Jeremiah O'Dwyer, the deputy county counsel, was appointed acting county counsel.

The freeholders' personnel attorney, Reed Ellis, said it would be unconstitutional to suspend Doherty without pay because he has a contract with the county that does not expire for two more years.

Ellis was instructed to conduct an investigation to determine whether charges should be levied against the attorney that could result in his dismissal.

It was a unanimous vote by the freeholders last Thursday night. Doherty was not present at the meeting and has yet to make a public comment on the matter.

Some Democratic freeholders called for Doherty's resignation shortly after the report was published. But the majority wanted to research the charges more thoroughly. Freeholder Neil Cohen said he wants to hold an administrative personnel hearing before terminating Doherty.

The freeholders told Ellis to have his report ready by this week. If the board decides to go ahead with charges against Doherty, they must schedule a personnel hearing within 10 to 30 days of levying the charges.

County students make All-American

Five Union County students were nominated last week to the 1988 McDonald's All-American High School Band, it was announced by David Singelyn, McDonald's owner/operator and president of the McDonald's New Jersey Owner/Operator's Association.

Those students nominated included Don Geisheimer of Linden, who plays the trumpet; David Lazeration of Linden, who plays percussion; Maria Ford of Union, an alto sax player; Rob Labay of Union, who plays trumpet; and Cranford resident and trombone player Robert Hall.

The students were nominated for the band by their high school band director on the basis of their musical honors and solo ratings.

The McDonald's All-American High School Band program was created in 1967 to honor outstanding high school musicians. Every year band directors from across the country are invited to nominate two of their finest musicians to the band.

From more than 3,700 nominations received, only 104 students will be selected.

JIM HELY
D-7th District
Congress

Democratic Congressional Candidate Jim Hely addressed the "greenhouse effect" in an issue paper released this week. The paper, titled "Wave a Magic Wand and the Greenhouse Effect Will Not Go Away," discusses the realities of actually reversing this devastating trend which threatens the habitability of the planet.

Hely is an elected member of the Westfield Town Council. In his campaign, he has attempted to stress long-range challenges that confront the nation and the world.

In the issue paper, Hely states, "The short answer to the problem is that the burning of fossil fuels must be reduced and deforestation of our land must be reversed. Within this short answer however, is a challenge which will monumentally test human civilization. In order to meet the challenge, nations will have to make compromises and cooperate with one another at levels never before attained in the course of human history. The needed level of cooperation will force all of the world's leaders and citizens to re-examine their view of the world."

Hely concluded his issue paper by stating, "Contemplating the demands of confronting the greenhouse effect, one is struck by the relative pettiness of some of the matters which typically dominate our headlines and our usual political debates. Coping with this challenge is going to require the devotion of our best minds. For this to happen, the public must have the understanding and wisdom to get behind the effort."

Republican Congressman Matt Rinaldo of Union is currently seeking a ninth term in Congress. He is on the House Aging Committee and a senior member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee. Before running for Congress, Rinaldo served in the New Jersey state Senate for five years and was a Union County freeholder.

Rinaldo, who is from the 7th District, has campaign coordinators throughout Union County who have pointed out his achievements in the 100th Congress on legislation to protect the environment, the national war on drugs, and the growing problem of acid rain.

The coordinators from Union, Homer F. Dukas and Mitzi Palensar, said, "He's been one of the key figures on the House Energy and Commerce Committee in forging legislation in the 100th Congress on issues ranging from Rinaldo's amendments on cleaning up medical waste to the support that Rinaldo's bill has received from Republicans and Democrats for a partnership between the federal government, the insurance industry, and the public to provide affordable nursing home and health care coverage."

The plan is expected to be among the key pieces of legislation in the next Congress as families seek to cope with the high costs of nursing home care for aged parents.

The coordinators from Kenilworth, Mayor Joseph Benitez and Paulette A. Drogan; Springfield, David J. Gerber and Elaine Marshall; and Roselle Park, Honey-Kurz and Eileen A. Chrenka, all support the Union coordinator's statement.

"It will be a very positive campaign with an emphasis on local people reaching out to their friends and neighbors with information about the Rinaldo record of service to the people and his legislative accomplishments in Congress," said Dukas and Palensar.

The coordinators said Rinaldo's popularity rests on a reputation for constituent services, which they described as among the best in the nation.

Furniture purchases large investment for small firm

Purchasing office furniture is a large expense for many small businesses. Now there's help — a credit card — available for companies that want to buy furniture but do not want to incur the expense of purchasing it outright.

The card, first of its kind in the office furniture manufacturer, is part of a new full-service, 100 percent financing program. Steelcase Inc., the leading office furniture manufacturer, developed the program in partnership with GE Capital, a worldwide financial services company.

Especially attractive for small-to-midsize businesses, the Office Environment Card lets you order immediately and is good for purchases up to $25,000. It helps you cope with those inevitable but unpredictable emergencies and can be used to purchase Steelcase and Stow & Davis furniture, and other office equipment and furnishings. A full line of wood and steel furniture can be bought with the credit card, including seating, filing, desks and credenzas and systems furniture. The latter includes freestanding and panel-hung components for storage and workspace.

Easing the strain on cash flow, the Office Environment Card works in the same way as any other revolving charge account. Customers receive a monthly statement of their credit card expenditures and then have the option of paying in affordable monthly installments at a competitive interest rate.

For those who prefer to lease, or who need to make larger purchases, there is the Office Environment Leasing program.

Spotless — A car emerges clean from Speedy Car Wash, 515 Lehigh Ave., Union.

Car wash specializes in service

It's located in an industrial area on Lehigh Avenue, not exactly the kind of place you might expect to find a car wash, but somehow the Speedy Car Wash has managed to do quite nicely over the past 15 years.

"The thing that's been interesting is that there's no other commerce on the street," said owner Gene Rooney, "but there are people who go out of their way to come to us."

"I won't permit my helpers to take tips," said Rooney, who can be seen right alongside his workers washing cars. "I want them to do a good job because it's their job, not because they're getting a tip."

Once inside, every vehicle is treated to a wash where every part of the car is cleaned more than once with fresh water and fresh detergent.

Each part of the car is cleaned at least twice, with the lower, dirtiest sections receiving four complete wash applications. No detergent or water is ever reused.

When the car wash is not operating, Rooney is still busy keeping all equipment in working order.

"We've really done a lot of maintenance on our equipment," he said. "I think that our assemblage of equipment is superior."

Rooney makes a point of trying to spend as much time as possible at Speedy Car Wash.

"You don't have an absentee ownership," Rooney explained. "The ownership is always present."

Speedy Car Wash is open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., seven days a week, weather permitting.

County Leader Newspapers is providing a forum each week where candidates for county offices can share their views. Three seats are open on the Board of Freeholders this year.

Democrat Freeholder candidate for re-election Walter Borlight said this week that all systems are go for the actual implementation of the county's pilot program for county-municipal cooperation for leaf collection and composting.

"Eight communities have signed up to be a part of the county program which will save participating communities hundreds of thousands of dollars in costs associated with traditional fall leaf collection programs," said the four-time freeholder.

County Leader Newspapers is providing a forum each week where candidates for county offices can share their views. Three seats are open on the Board of Freeholders this year.

Democrat Freeholder candidate for re-election Walter Borlight said this week that all systems are go for the actual implementation of the county's pilot program for county-municipal cooperation for leaf collection and composting.

"Eight communities have signed up to be a part of the county program which will save participating communities hundreds of thousands of dollars in costs associated with traditional fall leaf collection programs," said the four-time freeholder.

the freeholders were advised that the county Resource Recovery Plant in Rahway would be fully operational by the second quarter of 1991.

Borlight sponsored the county's first policy dealing with the tracing of medical waste generated at county government facilities.

Union County Republican freeholder candidates James J. Fulcomer of Rahway, Diane Heelan of Union Township, and William H. Eldridge of Berkeley Heights this week condemned the spending of $400,000 for Democrat County Attorney Reed Ellis, calling it "an obscene amount of money for one person, or even one law firm, to receive as a reward for Democrat political fund-raising services."

need is to "tight high taxes," not to increase them.

"We know that this highly lucrative job with a budgetary line item of $400,000 was created to reward a very effective Democrat fund-raiser who lives outside of our county. Judging from the unprecedented county financial rewards of this new job, this political fund-raiser also has proven how to break all annual records in raising money for himself out of our county treasury. Receiving up to $400,000 is an obscene amount for anyone to get from a county job in one year," said Freeholder Fulcomer.

Fulcomer reported that already Reed Ellis has submitted almost $300,000 in payment vouchers as of September, and $293,072.23 is the exact total in bills submitted by Ellis' firm as of last month.

Union County Register Joanne Rajoppi this week said her Republican opponent, Jo-Ann Sarno Piager, has refused her challenge to debate citing that a debate would be "boring" since "there are no platform issues to discuss."

"The public has a right to know the qualifications and platform of every candidate and those who run for public office have a responsibility to provide it," Rajoppi said.

Freeholder Eldridge denounced the creation of a $36,000 job plus fringe benefits to do what freeholders have been doing for centuries. He also denounced the creation of unnecessary advisory board positions for insurance at $6,000 per position for rubber stamping the recommendations of the insurance consultant. He noted that this is the first time any advisory board

Unbeaten 'Dawgs blank Immaculata

By MARK YABLONSKY
 Just in case there are some who still don't think that this year's Jonathan Dayton Regional High School football team is for real, then it's about time you started believing.

Yes, without doubt, these Bulldogs go for real. And they proved it by defeating Immaculata this past Saturday night in Somerville, 9-0, finally putting an end to the seven-year hex that the mighty Spartans have held on Dayton since the two Mountain Valley Conference foes began meeting on the gridiron in 1981.

Just how tough were the 'Dawgs on defense? Would you believe that the Spartans, now 2-2 on the year, got inside the Dayton 40-yard-line just once, and that, because of a fumble late in the game? Would you believe that only twice were the Spartans able to cross the midfield stripe all night long, and on both of those two occasions, that meant going no farther than the Dayton 45-yard line?

Indeed, the Dayton defense, which has allowed the grand total of just 12 points this fall, is so good that opposing offenses are beginning to be pushed into making mistakes. Even Immaculata.

"We knew we could do it," said Dayton junior linebacker Mike Montanari. "We were underdogs coming in, but we knew if we could play tough defense, we would win. We did the job."

"Yes," agreed senior linebacker/guard Jim Nastio from his seat on a wildly-enthusiastic Dayton team bus, "we have the tough defense, and our offense is also coming through with incredible schemes. But our defense played a hell of a game. We didn't beat 'em, we shut 'em out."

By most accounts, it was pretty much a one-sided game, although Immaculata star running back Jason Royster did pile up his customary yardage, gaining 106 yards in 21 carries. But overall, the Spartans could accumulate just 137 yards of total offense, meaning just 31 more outside of Royster's. Domination indeed!

For Dayton, which is now 4-0 and counting, the heroes were many, and especially so on defense, which is under the tutelage of defensive coordinator Rick Iacono. For openers, of course, linebacker Matt Lynch recorded eight tackles, one fumble recovery, and one blocked pass. Teammate Greg Gazzino also had eight tackles, while Montanari got through the Immaculata front line to register a quarterback sack, while William Lee got two.

Two of the sacks came back-to-back midway through the second quarter, with Lee first decking Cellilli and forcing him to leave the field temporarily, and then Montanari spinning Trotman to the ground on the following play, putting the Spartans in a third-and-25 situation from their own seven-yard line.

And Lee, who ran for 129 yards in 14 carries and was LeDonne's choice as Dayton Player of the Week, turned out to be the game's offensive hero as well when, with 2:14 left to play in the game, he broke a run for the middle and went all the way for a thrilling 64-yard touchdown run that sealed the Dayton win.

Dayton's only other score — one that would almost certainly have stood on its own, even without Lee's brilliant run — came with 6:26 to play in the third quarter, when Immaculata punter Brian Quinn was victimized by a horrible snap from center, one that sailed over his head and toward the Spartan end zone. After nearly giving chase, Quinn wisely decided that accepting a two-point safety was the best order of business at that point — even if it did give the 'Dawgs a 2-0 lead.

The only real frightful moment Dayton encountered came with some five minutes remaining in the contest, when running back Jeff Debbie — who complemented Lee's effort with 76 yards in 21 carries — coughed up the pigskin at his team's own 35-yard-line, where Kyle Mautler of Immaculata pounced on it. But three plays later, following off-setting penalties that nullified a 14-yard pass play, the Spartans were in a fourth-and-seven situation at the Dayton 32. And when Trotman failed to connect on a last-ditch pass attempt, it was Dayton ball, first down and 10 yards to go, with 3:11 to play.

Debbie, a telling force who kept smashing into the Immaculata front line all night long, then picked up four yards on two carries. Next up was Lee's play.

As both LeDonne and quarterback Pete Carpenter outlined, Greg White, another Dayton assistant coach, had seen Lee break free briefly on an earlier run. And White, who was stationed up in the press box, made a suggestion over his headphones.

"We had a 44-sweep called," LeDonne explained, "which is the same play as 54, only with a different blocking scheme. But Greg called down and said, 'No. Keep the backside guard home. Don't pull. Lead with the fullback.' Which translated into Willie breaking it off-tackle, and that was it. Goodbye."

"Sooner or later, I thought I was going to break one," said Lee. "The holes were there. The line did a hell of a job. We haven't beaten these guys in six years. This is my senior year. We had to do something."

And now, if the 'Dawgs can just keep it up against Roselle this Saturday at Meisel Field, and at Hillside the following week, they'll have done something else.

In all likelihood, they'll have won themselves a Mountain Valley Conference championship.

RAM TOUGH! — Which Stacy Marshall of Brearley Regional certainly is, even when he's surrounded and being tackled by a bunch of unfriendly Rams, as was the case in last Saturday's game with Roselle at Ward Field. Marshall ran for 60 yards in 13 carries as the Bears won, 14-13.

Bears beat Roselle

In a contest that was marked by hard hitting, tough defense and last-minute heroics, the Brearley Regional High football team, thanks to an eight-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Mike Ramos to split end John Blum with 56 seconds to play, prevailed over Roselle, 14-13, this past Saturday at Ward Field.

The Bears remained undefeated at 4-0, while Roselle dropped to 2-2 on the year. "It was a pretty physical game," explained Brearley head coach Bob Taylor, whose team had a 330-223 advantage in total yards, but lost a key scoring opportunity early-on because of a fumble deep in enemy territory. "They really came to play."

In the first quarter, the Rams broke out on top with a 7-0 lead on a three-yard TD run by Antoine Saterfield. The score capped a five-play, 80-yard drive that was keyed by a 61-yard run from Stan Bection. Saterfield kicked the extra point.

The Bears, however, took an 8-7 lead the following period when senior running back Stacy Marshall scored from three yards out, capping an 11-play, 66-yard drive. Brian Chalanski ran in for the two-point conversion. After a scoreless third quarter, Roselle regained the lead once again when junior quarterback Craig Martin hooked up with Shaun Smith for an 84-yard scoring play with less than four minutes to play in the final period. But Brearley defensive end Tony Milius came up with a "big play" in Taylor's words, to halt Martin on a two-point conversion attempt via the option.

Then, after Ramos returned the ensuing kickoff 20 yards to his team's 30-yard-line, the 5-9, 160-pound senior workhorse of a quarterback began moving his team downfield by way of the pass. In all, the drive covered 12 plays and went 70 yards. The key plays were a pair of clutch fourth-down pass completions, one to Chalanski on a fourth-and-nine predicament from the Brearley 32, and the other on a Ramos-to-Blum seven-yarder on a fourth-and-six play at the Brearley 49.

The winning play, according to Taylor, came on a "visual audible." A conversion attempt failed. Ramos, Taylor's choice for Brearley Player of the Week honors, completed 12 of 22 passes for 159 yards, while running for 18 yards more in five carries. Chalanski was Brearley's leading ground-gainer with 103 yards in 23 carries, while Marshall added on 60 yards in 13 attempts. Bection was the leading ground-gainer for Roselle.

"Mike really displayed a lot of courage and a lot of poise," said Taylor, whose team will play North Plainfield at home this Saturday. "It was an exciting drive. It was basically a two-minute drill. With no time outs, we didn't have much of a choice. We felt like we had to throw the ball and move it downfield. Ramos was our field general."

Dayton Ladies blank Linden; Boys win 2

The following is this week's rundown of sports from Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield.

Girl's Soccer

By SHARI PINCU
 The Dayton girl's soccer team ended the week with an outstanding team effort by shutting out Linden, 5-0, after two disappointing defeats, a 1-0 loss to Arthur L. Johnson, and a 3-0 loss to New Providence.

A highlight of last Tuesday's game with Johnson was a strong defensive first half, even though the team missed out on many scoring opportunities. During Friday's effort against Linden, which brought the Lady Bulldogs record to 3-7, Dayton held opposing attackers to just two shots on goal, and dominated defensively throughout the game. Karen Genghry scored two goals for Dayton, and Candice Matthews, Laura D'Anna and freshman Heather Anderson added one tally apiece.

Boy's Soccer

By RUSS NESEVICH
 Over the past week, the Dayton boys' soccer team split four games to make their record 4-1 for the course of the season.

Led by a strong offense, the Bulldogs exploded for 11 goals to defeat Bound Brook, 11-1, in last Monday's game. The next day, the team suffered a disappointing loss to Arthur L. Johnson of Clark, despite good defensive performances by Tom Kelly and Marc Gushara.

On Thursday, Gasbara and Jim Barrett had a lot to do with a 3-0 shutout over Immaculata. But the excitement of this victory was dampened because of a 2-0 loss to Brearley on Saturday in the first round of the Union County Tournament.

Girl's Tennis

By KATHY McCABE
 The girl's tennis team continued its winning ways when it shut out a strong Governor Livingston team, 5-0, on Tuesday, and then defeated Middletown on Friday, 4-1. The only loss of the week, 2-3, last night, Lady Bulldogs came in a state tournament match with Chatham, which won, 3-1, on Thursday.

Star first-singles player Susan Taub, who is presently ranked ninth in the Eastern Tennis Association, convincingly defeated her opponents in the first four rounds of the New Jersey High School State Singles Tournament by scores of 6-0, 6-0; 7-5, 6-4; 6-0, 6-0; and 6-4, 7-5.

Boy's Soccer

6-1, two days later, and then Dayton, 2-0, in first-round play of the Union County Tournament on Saturday at Ward Field.

O'Donnell left wing Matt Frennell netted the hot trick against Oratory last Thursday, while freshman right winger Chris Hogan got his first tally of the season. The other Brearley goals were scored by Mike Napolianno and senior Mike Voorhees.

Field Hockey

By JENNIFER LOBBIANO
 After losing a tough 3-1 triple-overtime game to Roselle Park last week, the Lady Bears bounced back this week with two regular-season wins and a semi-final round berth in the Union County Tournament.

The Bears began the week with a tough game, facing Ridge. Both of the Bears' goals were scored in the first half. Kim Egan connected on a pass from Cindy Smith and scored her first goal. Then Egan added her second goal, towards the end of the first half with an assist from Lisa Cardella. The Bears' defense, headed by goalie Crista Ryzdewski's 10 saves, was able to keep Ridge from scoring in the second half. Diana Tassitano and Tracy Hoefling, with saves of their own, helped shut out Ridge.

The Bears then had to face North Plainfield, and exploded for a 6-1 victory. Jennifer Lobbianco had two goals in the first half to begin Brearley's attack, one on an assist from Smith and the other from Hoefling. Then Egan added two more, with Smith having her second assist of the day. Cardella then assisted Lobbianco with her third goal. Finally, Lobbianco and Egan added on one more apiece with unassisted penetration.

Karen Kentz added tremendous pressure to North Plainfield with her great effort on the forward line. In the county tournament, Brearley, seeded second, encountered seventh-seeded Governor Livingston. Brearley started off slowly in the first half with only an unassisted goal by Cardella. But knowing that wouldn't be enough, the Bears rallied in the second half with three more goals. Egan had two of them: one on an assist from Hoefling and the other on a solo drive down the field. Lobbianco then added the final goal on her own unassisted shot.

Jessica Saportio played outstanding defense and offense, while Cindy Ceitilo helped out goalie Ryzdewski by allowing only six shots on goal.

NJSIAA drops court battle; two schools to enter WC

By MARK YABLONSKY
With the New Jersey State Intercollegiate Athletic Association opting to abandon its ongoing struggle with both state education commissioner Saul Cooperman and the Newark Board of Education, the Watchung Conference, like several other conferences, will have a new look, beginning next year. And for the WC, that new look means the addition of both Malcolm X Shabazz and East Side High Schools of Newark.

Thus, the expected addition of the Newark schools to the WC concludes a controversial episode in regard to the latest round in a series of proposed conference realignments statewide. Both Shabazz and East Side, as members of the troubled Newark Schools City League, had first sought to join the Watchung Conference last September, at which time the conference unanimously rejected the request. Along with the other four NSICAA teams seeking to join other conferences — Central, Barringer, West Side and Weequahic — Shabazz and East Side appealed their rejections to the NJSIAA, which eventually issued its rejection to the proposed moves as well.

But four months later, Cooperman stepped in and effectively ordered the NJSIAA to reverse its decision. After several months of haggling in the courts, the state athletic governing body last week dropped its opposition to Cooperman's directive, with NJSIAA executive director Robert F. Kanaby explaining that "we feel it's best for the association not to continue an adversarial relationship with the commissioner's office, and with the Newark Board of Education."

Reportedly, the Newark BOE had threatened to take its case to the Supreme Court, if necessary. Central is now preparing to join the neighboring Mountain Valley Conference "next fall," while the other three NSICAA schools will be joining other conferences. The NJSIAA's latest — and final — decision officially puts an end to the NSICAA, which had wanted to disband for some time.

The 11-member Watchung Conference has already drawn up the schedule for the 1989-90 season, incorporating the two Newark schools into that slate. Meanwhile, the conference, concerned about its scarcity of

"We're not happy at all. It's certainly not a good football schedule, but it's the best that we can do because of what the state has done to us. We don't have anything to help us out, unless the state were to come in and regionalize by group size, which they have shown no inclination to do."

Lou Rettino

Group 4 teams, has decided to re-split into two newer divisions for next year, with the first to contain the WC's seven Group 4 schools — including East Side — and the second to contain the remaining six schools, operating under either Group 2 or 3 classification.

The realignment will, for the first time ever, see two separate conference champions crowned atop their respective divisions. It is especially designed for football, since it is a complex power-point system — in which a winning team is awarded points based on the opposition's Group size and number of victories at the time — that determines which four teams in each division alignment qualify for state playoff action.

Union High athletic director and head football coach Lou Rettino, who would prefer that the NJSIAA reorganize all of the state's schools into conferences based on group size alone, made clear his belief that the conference realignment is only a lukewarm alternative to solving the growing problem of Group inequity within the WC and other conferences.

"We're not happy at all," said Rettino, also pointing out that only 12 of the conference's 13 football teams will play all nine of their regular-season games within the WC. "It's certainly not a good football schedule, but it's the best that we can do because of what the state has done to us. We don't have anything to help us out, unless the state were to come in and regionalize by group size, which they have shown no inclination to do."

The veteran football coach also mentioned a real "furoor" has been avoided until now — in the way of current conditions that keep us or somebody else out of the playoffs if when the time bomb will really start ticking.

"I think that's a good way of putting it," Rettino said. "The year that the power-point structure keeps us or somebody else out of the playoffs if when the time bomb will really start ticking."

Kanaby, when asked if his organization had thought of seriously considering the regionalization approach, said he did not see the concept becoming reality within the "foreseeable future," meaning any time within the next 3-4 years.

Campus sports

The following is this week's wrap-up of local collegiate sports.

Kean football

Getting back on the winning track, The Kean College football team defeated Jersey City State College, 30-14, this past Saturday in Jersey City. Kean snapped a two-game losing streak with the win, evening its record to 3-3 overall, and 2-3 inside the New Jersey Athletic Conference.

For the first time all season, the Cougar running attack exceeded the 200-yard mark, running for a net total of 227 yards. While Craig Davis led the way with 82 yards in 17 carries, the big story was senior Kevin McGuire. While catching four passes for 49 yards and one touchdown from his customary tight end position, McGuire also spent some time in the Kean backfield to help bolster the running game, gaining 43 yards in nine carries, along with one touchdown.

McGuire's four-yard TD run midway through the second period enabled Kean to take a 21-0 lead with them into the locker room at half-time, and the strength to withstand a 14-point rally from the Gothic Knights in the third quarter. Unfortunately, senior quarterback Dave Johnson, who completed 6 of 13 passes for 64 yards and two touchdowns, appears to have played his final collegiate game, due to a fracture of his right collarbone shortly before the end of the first half.

Freshman signal-caller Steve Musumeci, who finished up against Jersey City State, will handle the quarterbacking chores for the remainder of the year, beginning with this Saturday's 1:30 p.m. visit to Alfred University in upstate New York.

Cornell fall track

Ron Fritz of Roselle, a senior at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., is a member of the Cornell men's cross country team this fall. Fritz is a graduate of Abraham Clark High School.

The Big Red owned a 3-4 record as of late, with injuries affecting four of the team's six returning letterwinners.

It's all in the family

By BEA SMITH
Whenever Rita Demas of Roselle Park watches her 6-year-old granddaughter, Katie Tara Walsh, do somersaults, Rita gets right down on the floor and does somersaults with her. With a unique smoothness, they flip and roll and flip again. Some fun!

"I can't help it," exclaims Demas, during a recent visit to this office with her husband, J. Peter Demas Sr., former president of the Roselle Park Borough Council and former councilman for the 2nd and 3rd wards. "I used to do somersaults professionally when I was a youngster. Now I—find I also accompany Katie's sister, Shannon Eileen, who is 12, when she is dancing. Both girls, the children of our children, Robert and Suzanne Walsh of Union, take dancing lessons in Roselle Park. They attend Holy Spirit School in Union.

"My other two grandchildren, Melissa Renee, who will be 16 in December, and Derek James Demas, 14, also are musical. They are the children of our children, James Jr. and Linda Demas of Roselle Park. They play instruments, and Melissa takes piano lessons. I love to listen to them. I don't sing along, but my fingers do the tapping for my feet," she smiles graciously. "They attend Roselle Park High School."

Folks may not remember Rita too well when she was Rita Maddox and did flip-flops for a living on the vaudeville circuit, but they certainly remember Rita Demas, the 22-year school guard in Roselle Park, who retired five years ago.

"I always wanted to dance ever since I was a very little girl," recalls Demas. "Whenever my mother looked for us four children, James, Catherine, John and me—I was next to the youngest — she always knew I was there because I was walking on my hands. John and I are the only ones left in the family now. I wanted to dance and do acrobatics for as long as I can remember. I was 6 or 7 years old when I did toe dancing and tap dancing. In fact, I did everything. Maybe I was a little double-jointed. I don't know, but it is possible," she laughs.

Demas, who was born in Elizabeth and educated in Immaculate Conception School, Elizabeth, and Batin Junior High School, says she wasn't graduated because "I was on the road a lot."

Apparently, by the time Rita was 9 years old, she was playing as a "dancing star" on stage, and her mother eventually enrolled her in a dancing school in Elizabeth. Under the training of Mme. Eugenie, a teacher who was well-known in the arts, the child became adept in ballet and toe dancing. She soon was graduated to Frank Seifert, who taught her specially dancing and tap. And when Rita's brother, Jim, decided that he, too, would like to learn to dance under the supervision of Seifert, the two danced the tango, apache and adagio for church groups, minstrel and benefit shows.

Jim ultimately left the duo after he planned to be married, but his sister continued as a solo-dancing acrobatic comedy. Seifert then arranged for Rita to audition for Fred Leguorne, who, as a result, developed her professional qualities in novelty and acrobatic comedy routines for her future stage performances. The next step was a step up to the Sammy Bum Studio of the Performing Arts, New York City, and Sammy became her agent. While with Sammy, Demas recalls, Fred Astaire and his sister, Adele, visited the studio on many occasions. She also recalls the impromptu dance sessions with them.

"Fred Astaire used to come into the dance studio in New York," says Demas, "and he used to see me dancing. He once said to me, 'If you keep up the good work, Rita, you'll be a real dancer.' Then he gave me a kiss on the cheek and he said, 'I'll see you again.' I used to watch him practice his dancing, up and down steps, and on a slide down other steps."

Demas recalls the time when Sammy had a request for a comedy routine featuring slack wire artists and he called on Rita and her brother, who had been billed as "Gordon and Rita." He felt that this would be an ideal spot for Rita to begin her venture into show business. After that the two made many stage appearances in New York and out of state. Later, Earl Carroll's brother, Norman, wanted an act to be incorporated into his show, "Norman Carroll's Mardi Gras Revue," and Rita teamed up with a father and his two sons for vaudeville appearances. They were called "The Mack Brothers and Rita," complete with a chorus line, singers and class acts.

"Let me tell you," muses Demas, "those were the days!" They traveled on the RKO and the Balaban and Katz circuits and toured the eastern states and Canada. "We were doing publicity shots in Montreal once," she recalls, "and the two boys in the act were supposed to throw me over a car, and their father was to catch me on the other side. It was a slapstick stunt, but it wasn't so funny when I fell! I was only out one night. I did my act the following night."

"I had fallen many times, and I knew how not to get hurt. Or," she laughs, "at least I thought I did. I hurt my knee once. Someone had thrown me — and I had to stay in bed for six months. But that didn't affect me. I went right back."

Demas shared vaudeville bills with Pinky Lee, Ann Sothem, Joan Davis, Eddie Peabody, the Three Stooges, The Arnets, Ben Lyons and Bebe Daniels. During summer months, Demas found herself doing acrobatics at state fairs. "I used to work the state fair grounds, and I didn't like it that much. So, I performed in show business for about five years until 1939, and I just didn't want to do the fair-grounds any more."

"Some years later," Demas says, "I was at the New York World's Fair watching the Billy Rose Revue. Some of the dancers in the revue came down to say hello, and it made me feel very good. It was nice to know I was still recognized."

"We had all been on the bill together at one time, and they were all very friendly. I didn't know that they were there, but all of a sudden, there they were," she beams.

When she ultimately left the entertainment world, she admits that "I missed my dancing career...that is, until I met my husband, Peter, and then I forgot about it all!"

It all happened when Rita went to work for Proctor & Gamble, and

ON THE VAUDEVILLE CIRCUIT — Rita Demas of Roselle Park had a fling with show business some years ago. Counterclockwise, in the 1935 picture she was billed as The Mack Brothers and Rita; as 9-year-old Rita Matdcox, she shows off in dancing school; her brother, James, held Rita up at benefit shows; at age 10, the dancing star poses at Mme. Eugenie's dance studio, and in the 1932 picture, Rita and brother, James, perform the Adagio, as they tour the country on the vaudeville circuit.

he was an engineer there. "We started talking, and less than a year later, we were married. And here we are going into our 49th year of marriage," she says proudly.
At that time in her life, Demas decided to settle down to raise a family. "We lived in Elizabeth a short while," she says, "then we moved to Roselle Park. And we have been living in the same home for about 45 years."

Her husband, who worked as chief engineer for the Elizabeth Board of Education for 30 years, explained that while he served two terms on the Roselle Park Council from 1964 to 1970, Rita worked as a beautician and did interior decorating in her home.
The Demases had three children, James Jr., Rita Claire, who died when she was a month old, and Suzanne. "When Jimmy was a little boy in junior high school and Suzanne was in fourth grade," she recalls, "I wanted to know if I could be a school guard. I had some time on my hands, and I wanted to work part time. My school crossing guard employment lasted 21 or 22 years," Demas laughs. "Back then, when I started on Colfax Manor, I was the only girl there. All the other school guards were men. When Peter retired five years ago, he made me quit."

"Just late last summer, however," she grins, "a big fuel truck with big letters, Ryan's Fuel, came by our house. It parked next door, and out came this big burly truck driver heading straight for me. I had been raking leaves, and he grabbed me and hugged me and shouted, 'Mrs. Demas, my school guard.' Imagine. I still get lots of cards from the students on Christmas, and from their children, too."
Now, the Demases, Mr. and Mrs., devote their time and lives to their children and grandchildren. "We love them equally," she says. "We have no favorites. And I call Linda, my daughter, not my daughter-in-law, and my sisters-in-law, my sisters. We sure do love them — all of them equally."
"We love to travel and we used to travel a lot," Demas explains, "because Robert and Suzanne have their own freight business called the B. F. Worldwide Air Freight in Kenilworth. We flew four times around the world, free," she laughs. And James Jr. is an office manager for the Linden Motor Freight.

Demas likes to talk about the family-owned house in the wilderness in upstate New York. "We have 300 acres. It's an hour from Canada. It is Peter's mother's place. It was always a farm until we took it over. It's still pretty wild," Demas chuckles. "A few weeks back, we were sitting on the porch, and a big bear walked down the road. Peter called my name and pointed to the bear. The bear looked up, then kept right on walking on the property."
"To see deer prancing about is a common sight," she continues. "We go up there whenever we feel like it, and sometimes we take the family. There's never anybody around. Well, maybe a deer or two. Or a passing bear," she muses.

What does Demas think of the method of dancing today?
"Dancing is a lot different than it was years ago. We had to put our hearts and souls into it. Now they do it so easily, lazily...like it's nothing."
Is she still double-jointed and could she do somersaults as well as she did in vaudeville? "If anyone asked me to," Demas says. "I guess I can. But I wouldn't want them to ask me."
Would she encourage prospective dancers to pursue a career in show business?
"If they like it, they should go for it," Demas says seriously. "If I couldn't have done it, after wanting it so much, I would still be saying, 'I wish I had.'"

Center celebration

The Union County Arts Center, 1601 Irving St., Rahway, celebrated a dual anniversary at an open house Sunday afternoon. It cited the 10th year for Rahway Landmarks, when it was restored from the Old Rahway Theater in 1978, and the 60th year for the Rahway Theater/Union County Arts Center.

Featured at a meeting tonight at 8 will be Donna Wissinger, a "multi-talented" singer, who made her New York debut at Carnegie Hall.

The Union County Education Association, which has been presenting productions on the center stage, will offer the Lerner and Loewe musical, "Brigadoon," for a three-day weekend Oct. 28 to 30. Marsha Watson will direct the show. Performances will be Oct. 28 and 29 at 8 p.m. and Oct. 30 at 2 p.m.

Songwriter Bill Avery's Top Shelf Productions will present vocalist Helene Diehl in the arts center spotlight Nov. 6 at 7:30 p.m. She sings regularly at the Club Eleganza in Newark. Diehl will be accompanied by Lyax, a four-piece combo. Also on the bill will be Gina Ravac. All seats must be reserved, and tickets and additional information can be obtained by calling 499-8226.

The "silent era" of the movies will be revived again Nov. 13 at 3 p.m. with "Steamboat Bill Jr.," starring Buster Keaton and released in 1928 by United Artists. Accompanying the film will be Don Kinnler at the Wuritzer pipe organ.

The long-established Ridgewood Gilbert & Sullivan Opera Co. will return to the arts center stage Nov. 19 with a pair of one-act plays, "Tytal By Jury" and "The Zoo" and a full orchestra.

The holiday classic, "The Nutcracker," will celebrate its third consecutive season at the New Jersey State Theater Guild and the arts center in a joint presentation Dec. 10 and 11. The Tchaikovsky ballet will have reserved seats only.

The Union County Arts Center material has been prepared and compiled by Bea Smith.

Senegals due

The National Dance Company of Senegal, consisting of 40 dancers, singers and musicians, will appear tonight at 8 in the Wilkins Theater at Kean College of New Jersey, Union.

Each dance is a portrayal of ancient rituals and legends of Senegal, carefully arranged by Maurice S. Senghor, the director.

Sponsors are the Cultural Arts Programming Board, General Education Program and Africans Studies Center.

'A NIGHT AT THE CASBAH'—CHEMOCare's Chrysalis dinner dance held at the Headquarters Plaza Hotel, Morristown, tomorrow night, will feature, left, Kay Lani Rae Falco, Miss America of 1988, and William Falcone Jr., president and director of Falcone and Associates, Chatham, who will be honored.

Horoscope

For week of October 20 through October 27

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although your business sense will be sharply honed this week, it will not be a good week for going on any extensive shopping trips. Certain family members will be non-cooperative about money.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Although you will be good at seeing through others' motivations and ruses, you may still experience some delays in getting done what you feel is necessary. Let this ride for a while, for your own peace of mind.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll find yourself a bit swamped this week due to the amount of work you have chosen to heap upon yourself. As a result, it would be best to try to spend the weekend relaxing.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Anything of a cooperative nature is favored this week. Your natural leadership will inspire others to row along with you, so speak. Bigwigs take notice favorably.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) The early part of the week is best for you to pursue career matters. You may find yourself dealing with some domestic problems later in the week. Your best strategy in this would be to wait.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You may find yourself coming up against some unexpectedly closed-minded individuals. Rather than knocking yourself against a brick wall, simply keep to your own counsel and go about your business.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Although a domestic problem will reach a satisfactory conclusion this week, you may still want to tread lightly when it comes to joint finances. Try to avoid using any credit cards this week, as you may go overboard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) In order to achieve harmony with others this week, you will have to make an effort to listen to what they are really saying. Make an effort to extend yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You will have the best intentions this week, but it still won't be enough to make you as productive as you'd like. Things may appear perfectly mapped out in theory, but the practical application is another matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Romance will be much on your mind this week, but your imagination will far exceed the reality. Don't be discouraged by this as any romantic gestures on your part will be appreciated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) This will be a week in which you will cherish any solitude you can get. However, all may not be harmonious on the domestic front, forcing you to assume the role of mediator. The weekend is good for relaxation.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You and a special friend will see eye-to-eye this week, although others may not be in total agreement with both of you. One person in particular may be particularly resistant.

Realtors: see healthy one-family future

Realtors nationwide foresee a healthy existing single-family home sales market over the next six months, with resales remaining at about the same pace as they were at this time a year ago, according to a membership survey conducted by the National Association of Realtors.

The association's most recent annual survey, "Attitudes of Members of the Real Estate Industry," taken in April, cites 53 percent of the respondents expecting the volume of existing single-family home sales to increase between April and October, compared with 54 percent who indicated the same expectation in April 1987. In both surveys, 31 percent of the members polled predicted resale volume would remain at about the same pace.

Only 16 percent of the most recent respondents said they expect resale volume to decline over the following six months, compared with 15 percent the previous year.

Despite a positive attitude about the near-term growth of single-family resale volume, the survey found the pace of existing-home sales has slowed somewhat.

Although nearly half the respondents — 49 percent — reported that sales activity increased in their areas from April 1987 to April 1988, that percentage was down from 66 percent reporting an annual increase one year ago and from 82 percent two years earlier.

NAR analysts cited the negative influence of escalating home prices and rising interest rates as probable causes for the slowdown in resale volume increases, but they added that the overall pattern still is positive.

The latest survey found that expectations about condominium sales volume, like predictions for single-family sales, paralleled the previous year's survey results, with about one-quarter of the NAR members polled saying they anticipate condo sales volume will rise over the next six months. Almost half of those surveyed this year — 49 percent — expected the volume to be about the same over the following six months, compared with 43 percent in 1987.

Just 40 percent of the Realtors surveyed this year predicted increases in single-family home construction, placing expectations of that segment of the construction market at the lowest level since the economic recovery began in 1983.

The percentage of members who said they anticipated increases in multifamily, retail and office construction — at 16 percent, 22 percent and 17 percent, respectively — was equal in April to a year earlier. Expectations for industrial construction rose four points this year to 19 percent, and the outlook for farm and other land development posted marked increases this year compared to last.

The ability of first-time homebuyers to purchase a home is becoming increasingly difficult in many areas of the country as prices of starter homes rise, according to the survey. The typical existing single-family starter home costs $50,000 or more, according to 69 percent of the real estate professionals polled. In fact, 28 percent said the typical starter home costs $100,000 or more in their market areas. Only 31 percent said a previously owned single family starter home costs less than $50,000.

First-time homebuyers looking for a new home are finding they have to pay even more than existing-home purchasers. Eighty-eight percent of the survey respondents said typical new starter single-family homes cost more than $50,000. Two-thirds said such homes cost more than $100,000, but only 12 percent put the purchase price of a new single-family starter home at less than $50,000 in their area. Price, however, is not the only factor that affects affordability or the availability of housing. Government policies established at the state and local levels to raise revenue, or to control or direct development also can affect local housing markets.

Working parents: can't find affordable housing

Working parents unable to find housing are the latest victims of New Jersey's affordable housing crisis. "The absence of a statewide commitment to affordable housing affects all of New Jersey's residents and threatens the very fabric of our way of life," stated Anthony Ziccardi, president of the New Jersey Builders Association.

"A close look at the face of the homeless reveals the urgency of our affordable housing crisis. Homelessness is affecting a growing proportion of our population, and little is being done to counter the underlying causes. Today, the number of homeless includes a rapidly increasing percentage of families with children and at least one working parent," he noted.

New Jersey's affordable housing crisis is reflected in housing prices that rank among the highest in the nation, prices that effectively exclude tens of thousands of families from the American Dream. A striking illustration of the depth of the problem is found in statistics showing a continued decline in home ownership by married couples ages 25 to 29.

The factors which are forcing housing costs upward, from excessive regulation to high land costs, are pushing rents upward as well. A 5 percent to 10 percent vacancy rate is considered "healthy," with enough rentals available at any given time to keep prices reasonable. In New Jersey, due to pervasive rent control restrictions and regulatory excesses, rental vacancies are virtually non-existent. "It is tragic that at the very time families can afford to purchase a home, few apartments are available and the housing options for many are bleak. The consequences to this are immediately obvious in the continuing rise in homelessness during a period of prosperity. Less visible but increasingly problematic are those who crowd into sub-standard shelter because they cannot find affordable housing in New Jersey," Ziccardi said.

Aggravating a tight rental market is the cost of building new apartments. In addition to the over-regulation and high land costs which are driving home prices out of reach, rental housing construction has been suffocated by changes in the federal tax code adopted in 1986.

High housing costs are attracting the attention of the state's business community because of the implications for labor costs and an adequate supply of labor. Already employers are finding it difficult to recruit and retain a qualified work force in New Jersey in substantial part because employees are unable to find affordable housing within reasonable commuting distance of potential jobs. "The result of this situation will be to restrict economic growth in general and to reduce tax revenues as companies relocate to other states."

"Among the factors in driving housing costs upward are several which can be reversed or positively influenced by governmental action," states Ziccardi.

Redundant regulations, duplicate or unnecessary regulations which have no positive benefits for homeowners, the community, or the environment, account for 25 percent to 35 percent of the costs of a new home. Reducing the amount of over-regulation and streamlining the processes of obtaining permits and approvals has been an NIBA priority for some time, according to Ziccardi, and should be a priority for the municipal to the state level of government.

Not surprisingly, high land costs are driving home construction costs up as well. "We cannot make more land, but we can make more intelligent use of the land we have.

More information about how to promote affordable housing in New Jersey can be obtained from the New Jersey Builders Association in Plainsboro.

Refinancing may now be advantageous

In major commercial real estate markets throughout the country, many owners and investors have discovered that it may be more advantageous to refinance rather than sell their existing properties, according to Michael H. Lowinger, vice president and senior loan officer in the Beverly Hills, Calif., office of Heller Real Estate Financial Services.

"Because of current basic economic changes, more and more commercial building owners are looking to cash-flow lenders such as Heller for innovative refinancing structures to increase their financial leverage," Lowinger commented. "By basing transactions on the intrinsic value and income potential of a property, cash-flow lenders are both aggressive and flexible in providing funds for buildings that are substantially leased and operating profitably."

Lowinger points out that a building owner can gain significant cash equity by refinancing and still be able to hold the investment property for the next appreciation cycle. Often, the cash-on-cash return is equivalent to or higher than the return on alternative investments. In addition, depending on the owner's individual tax position, appreciation equity realized by refinancing may not carry the same tax liability as the sale of the property.

The recent refinancing of Wilshire Estina Apartments, a 193-unit luxury apartment building in Los Angeles is a good example, Lowinger explains. The property is located at the southeast corner of Wilshire and Beverly Glen Boulevards, along the Wilshire Corridor, in the city's prestigious Westwood section. Constructed in 1977 by the present owner, the 18-story apartment structure features such amenities as men's and women's fitness centers, swimming pool, spacious entertainment facility with a dance floor, beauty salon and valet parking. The building had an occupancy rate in excess of 95 percent for the past 5 years, and showed consistent rent increases of between 5 and 10 percent annually.

According to Lowinger, the owner was interested in realizing cash equity and had been made an offer of $48 million for the building. Even though this offer was attractive, the owner was aware that the property had an even higher upside potential — up to $70 million — since it might be converted to condominiums within a few years. In other words, the property would continue to be the best investment vehicle for the owner's money.

Typically, Heller would have loaned $35 million on this property, Lowinger said. However, an aggressive loan of $38 million was made on the basis of the property's prime location, high occupancy rate and good operating performance. The prospect of the apartments being converted to condominiums at a later date did enter into the underwriting.

Lowinger added that the first mortgage loan also is advantageous to the borrower because it is structured to allow for fixed-rate payments although the loan interest is based on a floating rate. Any accrued interest will be settled at the end of the loan term. To compensate for the additional $3 million in loan dollars, the transaction was structured so that the lender will receive a back-end fee.

Lowinger concludes that owners of commercial buildings located in strong markets and performing well should consider the alternative of refinancing rather than selling their properties. A select number of lenders with the resources to perform comprehensive cash-flow underwriting often can provide creative and aggressive loan structures that allow owners to gain additional operating and investment capital without losing equity in an existing property.

With offices in Atlanta, Washington, D.C., New York City, Chicago, Phoenix and Beverly Hills, Heller Real Estate Financial Services finances the full range of commercial real estate, concentrating on the needs of income-producing property. ## Median family: $54,600 to $204,000?

Median prices for existing single-family homes ranged from a low of $54,600, to a peak of $204,000 during the second quarter of 1988, according to a nationwide survey of 62 metropolitan areas by the National Association of Realtors.

Orange County, Calif., including Anaheim and Santa Ana, was the price leader during the second quarter at $204,000. The metropolitan area of Honolulu ranked second at $198,700, increasing from the median price of $198,400 during the first quarter. The San Francisco Bay area was third, with a median price of $196,300.

New York, including northern New Jersey and Long Island, ranked fourth during 1988's second quarter with a median price of $191,900. Boston was fifth, at $182,900; Los Angeles was sixth, at $175,600.

Among the least expensive housing areas, Louisville, Ky., with a median of $54,600, was again at the bottom of the price list, remaining unchanged in rank from the first quarter of 1988. Oklahoma City was ranked the second least expensive area during the second quarter, moving down from fifth place last quarter, with a median of $56,900. Lansing, Mich., which ranked second during the first quarter, moved up to third lowest, with a median price of $57,800. Grand Rapids, Mich., remained unchanged in rank from the first quarter and again placed as the fourth least expensive housing area on the price list, with a median price of $58,300 during the second quarter. Omaha, Neb., which was ranked seventh lowest during the first quarter, moved down to fifth from last place during the second quarter, with a median price of $58,700.

As expected, continued high home prices prevailed in the Northeast. The median-priced home in this area sold for $142,200, up 6 percent from last year.

NAR's chief economist Dr. John A. Tuccillo said, "Price increases in the Midwest were strong. Yet, despite these increases — prices in the Midwest remain modest. The median-priced existing home was in the upper fifties in Lansing, Grand Rapids, Omaha and Toledo, Ohio. And the highest-priced metropolitan area in the region, Chicago, saw an existing-home price of approximately $99,000," said Tuccillo.

"Home prices showed a wide variation throughout the South," Tuccillo said. Southern home prices ranged from the mid-fifties in Louisville and Oklahoma City, to $132,000 in Washington, D.C., and $109,000 in West Palm Beach. The strongest price increases were posted in the Washington, D.C.-Baltimore area. "There are, however, pockets of weakness, largely associated with depressed economies in the oil patch, and in some areas prices actually fell," he noted.

"The West also had among the highest rates of price increases in the country. The median price of an existing single-family home sold in Los Angeles and Orange County led the United States in price increases," Tuccillo said.

The national median existing single-family home price reported for the second quarter was $88,900, meaning half the nation's homes cost less, and half cost more. The nationwide median was 3.4 percent higher than the $86,000 price listed for the second quarter of 1987.

Of the 44 metropolitan areas recording year-to-year price increases, 12 had appreciation rates that were lower than the 3.4 percent national appreciation rate for the second quarter.

Thirty-one areas recorded year-to-year appreciation rates the same as or exceeding the national average during the second quarter. Orange County, including Anaheim and Santa Ana, with a median price of $204,000, outranked all areas.

In San Francisco, San Diego and Seattle prices were up 11-16 percent over the second quarter of 1987. But still, there is a wide variation in prices throughout this region. On the low side, prices in Portland and Salt Lake City were in the mid-sixties.

CAR CARE FOR WINTER

Cold temperatures, extra moisture in the air, and less-than-favorable driving conditions are signs of winter. Proper vehicle maintenance now will help you overcome these challenges. Plenty of good tips and advice inside.

Tune it up or it may shut you down

According to auto experts, if you own a car with an advanced electronic ignition system don't overlook the importance of a periodic tune-up no matter how well or how long your engine has been performing.

Advanced ignition systems don't always show signs of wear even though certain parts may be going bad.

Cars with conventional ignition systems, points and condenser, used to start hard, idle rough, spew smoke and offer other tell-tale signs of problems when a tune-up was needed. This isn't always the case with electronic ignition cars.

Electronic ignition systems are sophisticated enough to often compensate for problems until things get so severe that major components like caps, rotors and ignition wires start burning out. The results can be poor vehicle performance and an expensive repair bill...problems that could have been avoided with preventive maintenance.

As a rule, conventional ignition systems should be tuned every year or 12,000 miles, whichever comes first. Advanced ignition systems should receive a tune-up check every 15,000 to 20,000 miles. If you are a severe service driver, i.e. you subject your car to continual stop and go driving, a lot of short trips, or pulling heavy loads (like a boat or trailer), your car may need tuning more often.

Tune-ups involve checking the car's ignition and fuel systems and either adjusting or replacing parts. Prices and extent of tune-up work vary from shop to shop what is considered standard at one shop may be an "extra" at another. Shop around, compare tune-up offers, and always get an itemized quote before work is performed in order to see what you're paying for.

If you own one of the new computer equipped cars and your "check engine" light has been coming on, you'll need a diagnostic checkup followed by a "maintenance" tune-up as needed. You'll pay more for this type of checkup, but it's the only way to pinpoint whether you have a computer-related or deep-rooted tune-up problem.

Above all, stick with a good tune-up source once you've found one. A shop that knows your car's history is in the best position to recommend ideal tune-up intervals and help you cut corners on costs based on previous work performed.

The following is intended to serve as a guide. For further information on tune-up intervals, check the owner's manual for your particular vehicle.

Air filter: Replace as often as necessary but at least every 20,000 miles. Check and replace more frequently if you drive in dusty or dirty areas.

PVC Valve: Replace every

12,000 miles. This handy device allows some unburned fuel and emissions fumes to be reburned in the cylinders, thereby lowering air pollution and increasing fuel economy.

Fuel Filter: Replace once a year or every 20,000 miles.

Points and Condenser: (applies to conventional ignition systems only). Replace as part of tune-up.

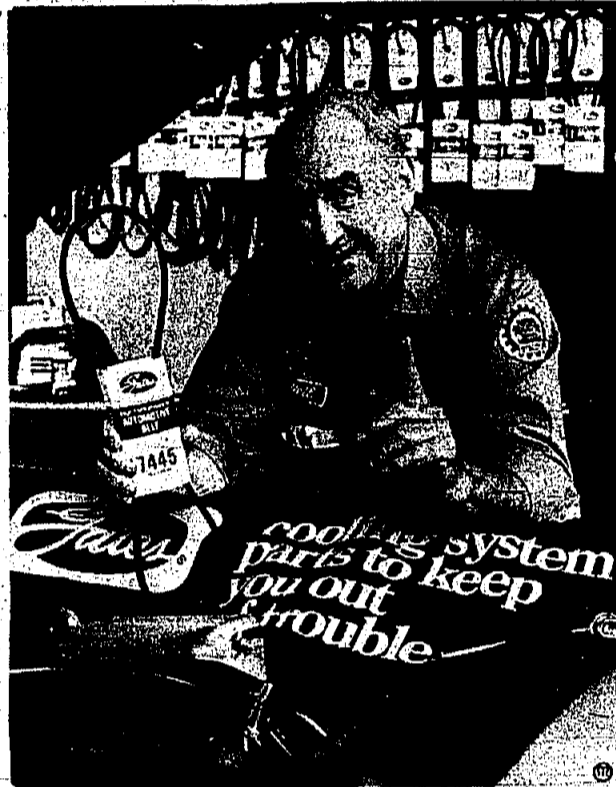

Spark Plug Wires and Boots: Replace as needed and always in sets.

Ignition Timing: Check and adjust every time points are replaced in conventional systems; every time plugs are replaced in electronic systems.

Distributor Cap: With each tune-up, check for cracks and for erosion of the terminals. With conventional ignition systems, cap and rotor should always be replaced in a set.

Emissions Filters: Today's cars can have several of these devices. Replacement intervals vary widely from car to car, consult your owner's manual. Some vehicles have warning lights to remind you when these filters need changing.

Spark Plugs: Depending on type of driving, should be replaced every 15,000 to 30,000 miles.

MOST PROFESSIONAL AUTO MECHANICS will agree with The Gates Rubber Company recommendation that engine belts should be replaced every four years during a normal tune up maintenance.

Car battery is life source of electrical system

If you're like most drivers, you probably take your car—and what's under the hood—for granted.

A good example is the battery. We hear a lot about the electrical system which powers features such as digital clocks, radios, power windows and locks, sun roofs and audio systems. But we don't often hear about the battery, the power behind the electrical system.

When you replace your battery, how do you know what to look for in a new battery? If the replacement battery you select isn't up to the job, either you will be grounded, or you'll have to replace that battery before you'd choose to.

Here's a brief guide to selecting the proper automobile battery for your car and your needs, provided by Pacific Dunlop-GNB, a leading battery manufacturer.

The battery that consistently will start your car and support your electrical system is the one that is powerful enough to handle the load.

Before selecting a battery, ask your dealer for the specifications and recommended replacement for your automobile provided by the BCI (Battery Council International). Provide yourself with an extra margin of protection by choosing the most powerful battery of those in your group size.

Once you have determined the correct group size for your car, the first consideration should be power. Automotive battery power is ranked by two factors: starting power called "cold cranking amps" (CCAs) and reserve capacity (RC). CCAs indicate the power available to start the engine. RC indicates the number of minutes the battery will operate essential accessories if the alternator fails.

The CCAs of your replacement battery should approximate the cubic inches of your engine. For example, if your engine is 350 cubic inches, the battery you purchase should have a minimum of 350 CCAs. That's the starting point.

The next factor to consider is parasitic load that will be placed on your battery. Parasitic load is created by all those electric features: audio systems, power windows and door locks, window defoggers and electronic roofs. These place a higher demand on the battery which, in turn, needs more power in the form of higher CCAs for optimum efficiency. So, if your car has any of those extras, you need a battery with a greater starting power of higher CCAs.

You also need to consider the age of your car and the size of the engine. Older engines are less efficient than new engines and frequently need extra starting power. And, the smaller the engine, the harder it is to start. So replacement batteries should have a higher CCA rating than the battery that originally was equipped with the vehicle.

The battery manufacturer who stands behind his product will provide a warranty to back up the product claims. But that doesn't mean you should choose a battery based on warranty alone; warranties don't start cars! Your best warranty is the most powerful battery you can buy.

Preheater duct time

With each gallon of gas your car burns, it consumes 14 gallons of air. For ideal combustion, that air should be at a temperature of between 70 degrees F and 90 degrees F. When it's too cold, the car will run poorly, stall, get poor gas mileage and generally be sluggish in performance.

This common winter driving symptom, says Car Care Council, is often caused by a damaged or missing "heat riser" tube. This is a flexible metal duct that directs heat from the hot exhaust manifold to the air cleaner intake.

Also known as the preheater duct, it connects to a fresh air duct at the air cleaner housing. Here, a temperature controlled valve mixes hot and cold air to keep intake at the right temperature.

Sound complicated? It's nothing more than a simple hot air furnace for the benefit of the carburetor or fuel injection.

In a similar way, the fresh air duct to the carburetor is designed to provide cool air to the system in hot weather, when under-hood temperatures may exceed 200 degrees F. If the air in the fuel/air mix is too hot, a lean mixture will result, causing power loss, excessive emissions, and/or severe engine damage.

This fresh air intake tube also often is found damaged or missing, according to reports to the council from vehicle inspection lanes. Both of these ducts should be examined periodically and replaced when necessary.

Will the heater operate this winter?

There is perhaps no greater inconvenience of winter driving than a heater that won't work.

Most passenger compartment heaters use the coolant to warm the incoming fresh air. In addition to providing driver and passenger comfort, the warm air directed to the inside of the windshield generally prevents fogging or icing which obscures vision.

The personal distress of cold fingers and toes can be avoided, says The Gates Rubber Company, by inspecting the heat producing cooling system components in your car.

Troubleshooting should begin with the coolant level in the radiator, just below the filler neck, and mixture, 50 percent each water and antifreeze. A low level will reduce or cancel the flow of coolant to the heater, thereby reducing or preventing any heat output.

The radiator pressure cap helps to raise and control the temperature of the coolant in the system. It should be replaced if the seat or gasket is damaged, or if the spring is broken.

The thermostat acts as a heat sensitive valve which regulates the flow of coolant to the radiator. When the thermostat fails or malfunctions, the engine either will overheat or take longer to get any heat, because the engine will take longer to reach proper operating temperature. It is a good practice to replace a thermostat if you're in doubt, advises Gates.

Flexible hoses convey the liquid coolant between the radiator and the engine. They should be inspected for softness, cracks and cuts. In normal service, they are affected by air, heat, chemicals, oil and constant vibration.

These conditions either could harden or crack hoses, which destroys flexibility and causes leakage, or soften and swell the hoses, producing lining failure and hose rupture.

Two other important hoses run parallel from the engine to the heater, normally found under the dashboard. These, too, should be checked for swelling and cracks, and for abrasion to the hose cover where the hoses come in contact with the engine block.

The water pump/fan drive might be called the heart of the cooling system. Coolant circulates throughout the engine by means of the water pump, which is driven by a rubber belt.

Loose or worn belts could mean failure of the drive. Check the condition of the drive belts by turning them over, Gates suggests. Replace any that are cracked, frayed, brittle, wet with oil or highly polished on the sides that contact the pulleys.

Regardless of the visual condition, belts that are more than four years old should be replaced, according to Gates.

These troubleshooting procedures could solve the problem of a malfunctioning heating system. Other trouble areas, such as a clogged or leaking heater core, faulty electrical connections and fuses, a broken blower motor or a non-operating heater control valve, should be checked by an experienced mechanic.

At the very least, this exercise will prepare your cooling system for the hard winter months ahead.

RADIATOR HOSES must be flexible to absorb vibration between the engine and radiator, but, unfortunately, they are not as durable as these metal parts. Most rubber companies recommend changing these hoses every two years, or whenever signs of glazing or wear are evident.

Harley's 85th 'homecoming'

Some 35,000 motorcyclists, many of them on classic Harleys, traveled cross-country to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, this past June, for Harley-Davidson's 85th anniversary "Homecoming Festival."

Much of the discussion between classic cycle-owners centered on care and maintenance of their machines. Unanimously, they attributed longevity of their cycles to the time spent tuning and maintaining them, as well as to proper off-season storage techniques.

As the 1988 motorcycling season draws to a close in much of the country, Harley-Davidson says it's time to give serious consideration to fall maintenance and winter storage.

Improperly preparing your motorcycle this fall can lead to annoying and costly problems when springtime rolls around. It also can greatly reduce the life of your machine.

A few hours spent preparing your cycle for its winter hibernation are hours well spent, Harley-Davidson says. Here's all it takes:

- To preserve your fuel system, fill your gas tank, add a fuel stabilizer, and run the engine for a few minutes to get the treated gas throughout the fuel system.

- Because the fuel in the tank is highly combustible, Harley-Davidson advises against storing your motorcycle in your home. However, if you must store it in your home or in an area exposed to open flames (pilot lights, sparks or electric motors), empty the fuel system by draining the gas tank and running the engine until it stops.

- Coat the inside of the carburetor with light oil and spray the inside of the gas tank with rust preventive. This will help prevent corrosion and possible engine damage.

- Remove the spark plugs, inject a few squirts of engine oil into each cylinder and crank the engine five or six revolutions. Reinstall the spark plugs.

- Fill oil to the proper level before storing your machine. On motorcycles with remote oil tanks, such as Harley-Davidsons, remove the oil line leading from the bottom of the tank to the feed fitting on the oil pump and plug the line at the bottom. Don't forget to reconnect the line next spring.

- Adjust the chains and lubricate to prevent to rust over the winter.

- Remove the battery and store in a cool area, above 32 degrees Fahrenheit, but don't expose it to direct sunlight or moisture. Give it a slow charge about once a month while it is in storage.

- Thoroughly clean, dry and polish the motorcycle.

Your local Harley-Davidson dealership can answer any questions regarding motorcycle care and maintenance. They also can offer tips and advice to add years to the life expectancy of your motorcycle.

Owners should be inquisitive

All too often, minor automobile repairs turn into major problems due to poor communications between car owners and their technicians.

While technicians seem to speak a language all their own, consumers can narrow the automotive communications gap by following a few simple rules, says Dave Bowman, a former Indy 500 mechanic.

"It's very important that both you and your technician understand what you are trying to say," says Bowman. "Good communications in the beginning will save you a lot of time later, and will ensure the problem is corrected properly. But keep things simple to avoid any mix-ups."

• Describe to the technician exactly when the problem occurs. Does it occur when you start the car, after it's been running for a while, when stopping? This information will enable the technician to narrow the possibilities down quickly.

• Require a written estimate. Never give a technician carte blanche. Tell the technician to give you a call if he finds any other problems before doing any work.

• Ask if the technician guarantees his work in writing or what his

"Smart consumers avoid problems and save money—simply by talking with their technician, making sure both parties understand each other and getting written estimates before any repairs are done."

LINE OF COMMUNICATION—A leading car care expert says that needless repairs and expense could be prevented if car owners and technicians took the time to talk with—and listen to—each other. The technician should be able to explain the repair being done to the car satisfactorily, otherwise he may not know what he is doing, and may be trying to take advantage of the consumer.

"It's very important that both you and your technician understand what you are trying to say. Good communications in the beginning will save you a lot of time later, and will ensure the problem is corrected properly. But keep things simple to avoid any mix-ups."

you a lot of time later, and will ensure the problem is corrected properly. But keep things simple to avoid any mix-ups."

Bowman, who is now technical communications manager for Allied Aftermarket Division, suppliers of Fram, Bendix and Auto-lite products, recommends that you find a technician you can trust and who's willing both to talk and to listen.

"Even if you seem to be boring the mechanic, don't be afraid to describe the symptoms fully, leaving nothing out. If the mechanic seems too bored to listen, you may want to find one who will," says Bowman.

Other important suggestions from Bowman:

• Take the car for a test drive with the technician. This is the best way for a technician to hear engine noises or get a real feel for the problem. If the mechanic can spare 15 minutes to do this, he may save both himself and you a lot of problems later.

In addition, a good technician often will suggest a series of diagnostic tests to ensure that the right thing gets fixed the first time.

policy is regarding repairs that need attention later if not done properly.

• Look at the technician's shop. Is he certified by the Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE)? What kind of equipment does he have? Does he seem to have a lot of business? Does it seem to be an orderly shop? If not, this may be an indication of the type of work he does.

• When discussing what needs to be done, be sure to explain when you last had everything checked. If you haven't had your belts, filters or spark plugs checked in a while, this may be a good time to have it done.

Preventive maintenance is the best way to keep your car running smoothly and properly. Also, by keeping a log of repairs, plus oil and filter changes, you'll know what needs to be done and when.

"Most auto repair professionals are honest and most car owners are willing to pay a reasonable price for good repairs," concludes Bowman. "The difficulties between the two groups often are caused by poor communications."

stand each other and getting written estimates before any repairs are done."

Best to avoid long warm-up

A familiar scene on a cold morning is a car idling in a driveway with exhaust billowing from its tailpipe. In the house, the owner comfortably finishes a second cup of coffee. The car will be "toasty warm" when the owner is ready to take off for work.

The owner may justify this wasteful practice with the excuse that the car operates better when it is allowed to warm-up before driving.

Wrong, says Car Care Council. When the choke is set, as is the case when a cold engine is started and then left at fast idle, the car is burning gas at a furious rate.

Engine wear is accelerated, because raw fuel from the enriched mixture washes lubricating oil down the cylinder walls. This also contaminates the oil in the engine crankcase, further inviting engine damage.

There is a greater tendency for spark plugs to foul under these conditions, too. The excessively rich mixture is an ideal environment for plug fouling.

Another consideration is the possibility of overheating the catalytic converter in the exhaust system. Unburned fuel in the exhaust is burned off in the converter. If it gets hot enough it could set something on fire.

Freeze-dry the window?

As you're rolling along the highway this winter, and your car's windows fog up, don't just turn on the defroster—clear your windows with a blast from your car's air conditioner as well, says Swedish automaker Saab.

In winter, your car's windows sometimes fog because of moisture emitted from your damp clothing and other sources. It is this moisture that condenses on your windows.

In a car's air conditioning system, the evaporator takes this moist warm air from the interior compartment and simultaneously dries it as it cools.

Inside the evaporator, low pressure refrigerant gas, called freon, evaporates and turns to vapor, absorbing heat in the same way that your hand will get cold from holding a piece of ice.

Gas, oil, and the conscious consumer

Motor oil, the most common purchase by automotive do-it-yourselfers, is also the product that tends to evoke the most questions, particularly, "when should I change it and what kind of oil should I use?"

Usually, automobile manufacturers' guidelines for oil change intervals are based on mileage figures for "normal" and "severe service" driving. Most drivers consider their regular home-to-store, stop-and-go driving to be normal service.

But, the fact is, short trips around home are not normal for an engine. Heavy traffic, stop-and-go conditions, and frequent heating and cooling of the engine all accelerate the contamination of an engine's motor oil.

This means that most drivers should change their oil to meet "severe service" driving conditions, and most owner's manuals say that it's every 3,000 miles or three months, whichever comes first.

Determining the proper oil change interval can be confusing. But Joseph V. Brancato, research director for motor oils and lubricants at Quaker State Corporation, notes that since most people drive under severe service conditions at least part of the time, most oil changes should occur at least every three months. He points out there is one easy memory trick many car owners can use.

"Change your motor oil at the start of each season," says Brancato. "For most private cars operating around home, changing motor oil four times a year provides safe and sure protection for a car's engine."

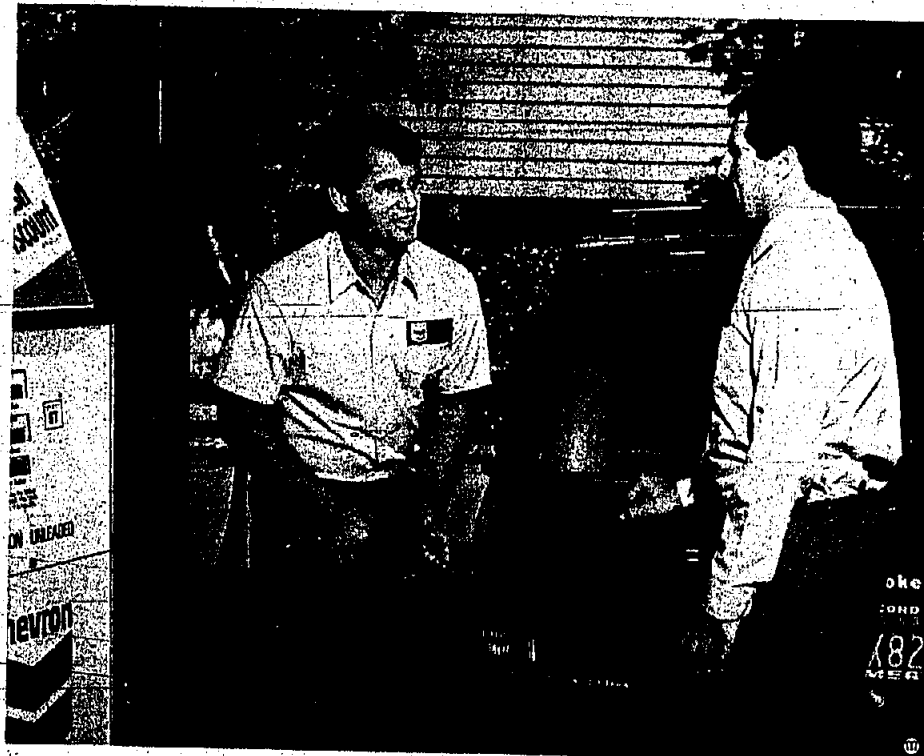

Brancato explains that, "The motor oil doesn't wear out from use. It becomes overloaded with contaminants which prevent important additives from doing their job. Seasonal oil changes allow contaminants suspended in the oil to be removed before they cause engine damage."

To make sure you're getting the latest and best additives, look to the back of the bottle for the letters SG-CD. The SG formulation, a new standard introduced in 1988, includes an increased amount of dispersants and detergents to control potential sludge deposits and reduce engine wear.

Also check to see what SAE Grade your automaker recommends. Some popular motor oils, such as Quaker State's 10W-30, are considered good year-round oils, and they also improve fuel economy with an additive that reduces friction.

When temperatures fall below zero degrees Fahrenheit, oils such as Quaker State's 5W-30 are a popular choice.

For an easy-to-read 40-page booklet telling you more about motor oil, write to: "What You Should Know About Motor Oil," Customer Service, Quaker State Corporation, Box 898, Oil City, PA 16301.

ALL GASOLINES ARE NOT CREATED EQUAL—The gas pump is a great place for taking control of your car's performance. A good gas can make the difference in areas like driveability and car noises—particularly on newer cars which demand quality gasolines like Chevron, above, which is also marketed under the Gulf name in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma. And remember cheaper gas is likely to have an excess of water in it which will quickly rot away your gas tank.

Avoid Transmission Failure.
