Fireman Brian Lenhart, 29, surrendered himself to Cranford Police Friday morning on one count of lewdness, officials said. He is suspended from duty awaiting trial set for Nov. 16, Fire Chief William Gras said. Lenhart was charged with lewdness because he allegedly exposed himself to a student in a parking lot at Union County College on Oct. 5, Cranford police said.

The police said Lenhart contacted his attorney who advised him to go to the Police Department. He was released on a complaint summons.

Slote restores Democratic majority

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

The Democrats are now in the majority on the Township Committee as Herb Slote was carried to victory with 228 votes over his Republican opponent.

Slote, who won nine of the 14 districts with a total of 2,823 votes, said he was pleased with the outcome of the election.

"Victory is sweet after a hard-fought battle, and I expect to work equally as hard for the benefit of Springfield," Slote said.

The two Democratic committee members, JoAnn Holmes and Marcia Forman, were both present to celebrate Slote's winning. They said they are looking forward to a productive future for Springfield and because of the victory, it is more possible.

"I'm very pleased to have a Democratic majority and we look forward to really doing some good for Springfield," Holmes said.

Holmes also said that the people have expressed the same desire as she and Forman: cooperation among committee members to move the township forward.

"The people have spoken on what they want and we will carry out their mandate," she said.

Forman said the future of Springfield will also be advanced with the more open lines of communication that will be felt because of the new Democratic majority.

"It will be a pleasure to work with people with whom you can discuss things with honesty," Forman said.

"I expect the same sort of cooperation from the Republicans as we have shown them in the past," she said.

"I'm looking forward to a productive year," Forman said.

Slote, who has said he does not consider himself to be political but instead working for the best interest of Springfield residents, has outlined some of his future plans as a committeeman.

The philosophical essence of his campaign was "commitments to the facts, the taxpayers and my constituency," he said.

He has also referred to the Township Committee as a board of directors of a public-owned corporation in which all taxpayers are shareholders.

"The members have an obligation to conserve our money, to act ethically, and to keep the town's interest above their own," he said.

Republican Joseph Cappa, who came away with 2,595 votes, said he wishes Slote the best and that he will continue to be involved in the community.

"I'm because I like being involved and maybe sometime in the future the tone will be better set," Cappa said.

He said he was proud of the campaign because "we played a fair game and stuck to the issues." The Democrats, however, played by the "big lie theory" by bashing Harry Pappas, he said. "If you hear it long enough people will believe it to be true."

They used the only issue they had, Cappa said, so "I'm not surprised, yet I should be shocked."

From left, Marcia Forman, Herb Slote and JoAnn Holmes join in a Democratic victory celebration Tuesday. Slote won the election by 228 votes.

Kelly, DiGiovanni, Stender gain county seats

By Tom Canavan
Editor

Incumbent Republicans Linda-Lee Kelly and Linda DiGiovanni were returned to their seats on the Board of Chosen Freeholders Tuesday and will be joined by Democrat Linda Stender, who was the top vote-getter on her ticket and beat the third Republican candidate, Harry Pappas, and Independent Bob Carzon.

The victory for the "three Lindas" retains the Republican majority on the freeholder board, but narrows the party's control to 5-4.

While the results are unofficial, DiGiovanni was the top vote-getter with 66,971, Kelly came in second with 66,853 and Stender third with 64,762 votes.

Other unofficial results, which do not include Plainfield, revealed that Pappas received 58,395 votes, Democratic candidate Amette Quijano received 57,485 votes and Democratic Hillside Mayor Peter Corvelli received 56,562 votes. Carzon's votes could not be determined at press time.

Union County Register Joanne Rajajoli also was returned to her post, narrowly defeating her opponent, Republican Darlene Leary, by a margin of 65,497 votes to 62,000 votes.

DiGiovanni took her hometown of Springfield. The Democratic ticket swept in municipalities such as Linden, Elizabeth and Hillside.

Despite a backslash over taxes in Hillside, Corvelli took his hometown with 66,971, Kelly came in second with 66,853 and Stender third with 64,762 votes.

Pappas lost his hometown of Springfield. Of the six major candidates, Pappas received the least number of votes in the township with 2,133. Stender was top vote-getter in Springfield with 3,120 votes.

Stender, the mayor of Fanwood, could not be reached for comment at press time.

Kelly, the current chairman of the freeholder board, said her victory represents county residents' satisfaction with the Board of Freeholders.

"They felt we were doing a good job and they approved of what we were doing because we were looking out for their best interests," Kelly said Tuesday at the Westwood restaurant in Garwood, where the Republican County Committee convened to tally the results.

But a victory today means more work tomorrow. According to Kelly, the board's first priority now that the election is over is to start working on next year's budget.

"It's still very important to keep taxes down," she said, adding that another priority is to lure "more jobs into Union County and jump start the economy." The way to do that, she explained, is to move forward with the Union County Alliance, which she said will play a vital role in the future of the county.

Another issue which Kelly touched on was the overpopulation of the deer in the Watchung Reservation and how to reduce the number of the herd.

Christie Whinman's victory in the gubernatorial race will have an impact on the growth of Union County, Kelly predicted. "A change in the top might very well stimulate the economy in Union County," she said. "It should have a big impact on us."

DiGiovanni agreed. "It will be a big shot in the arm for the economy. She'll work real hard to bring industry back to New Jersey. If we keep the majorities in the Senate and Assembly, it will make it a lot easier to work together and get the job done."

DiGiovanni said her top priority in her second term on the freeholder board is to bring "accountability to

Republican Joseph Cappa, who came away with 2,595 votes, said he wishes Slote the best and that he will continue to be involved in the community.

Victorious incumbents ensure GOP majority

By Chris Gatto
Staff Writer

Republican candidates in the 21st District swept to an overwhelming victory over Democratic challengers in Tuesday's election, ensuring GOP representation for the district in the Senate and Assembly.

Senator C. Louis Bassano trounced Democratic opponent Cathie Perschay Seidman, a Millburn resident and former prosecutor in Brooklyn, by a count of 44,171 to 23,518 votes. Linda Dye, an independent candidate in the Senate race, trailed with 895 votes.

"I think things are looking good right now. I'm very pleased with the results so far," Bassano said at about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday. "I think this delegation is starting to turn its attention to the types of majority we're going to have in both houses, assuming we're going to have a majority in both houses."

Republican gubernatorial candidate Christine Whinman won that race over Gov. Jim Florio and the GOP was able to maintain majorities in both houses of the Legislature, something for which Bassano and other Republicans had hoped.

Assemblywoman Maureen Ogden and Assemblyman Maurice Laubacher, Republican incumbents, defeated

Democratic challengers Robert Everett of Union, and Michael Kurzawski, a Roselle Park Borough councilman.

Ogden, led vote-getters in the Assembly race with 42,596 and Laubacher joined her in victory by scoring 41,296 votes. Everett finished third in the four-person Assembly race in his hometown and district-wide, gaining 6,983 votes in Union and 24,298 overall.

Kurzawski finished third in Roselle Park with 1,781 votes, but last overall with 24,072 votes.

Standing alongside Bassano at the local Republican headquarters in Union, Ogden said, "Things look good for us. We did well — our whole team. You know of course, Lou, certainly it's his hometown, but Maureen and I did (well too). We're really, really pleased to receive such a strong endorsement from the people of Union."

"Even though we live in Essex, we've tried hard to make everyone feel as though we care about Union (County) as much as we care about Essex (County), because we do."

In the Essex County portion of the district, Bassano defeated Seidman by more than 8,000 ballots, tallying 20,684. Dye gained 555 votes.

Ogden and Laubacher defeated their opponents by more than 2 to 1 margin in their native Essex County. Ogden scored 22,737 votes and Laubacher 22,466.

Police and firefighters wrestled a blaze labeled as suspicious at the Springfield Budget & Motor Inn on Route 22 where some officers suffered from smoke inhalation.

Firemen label blaze as suspicious

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

A fire on the second floor of the Springfield Budget & Motor Inn on Route 22 last week was labeled suspicious and is under investigation, fire officials said.

Originally, police responded to a call from a resident claiming there was a woman, identified as Suelly Schlain of South Orange, standing dangerously close to the highway.

When Officer Chris LaFragola was interviewing the woman, he discovered the blaze and called for help. He, along with Springfield Officers Steve Hollyfield and David Hartong, Union County Officers Thomas Rickety and Luis Cancio and Mountainside Officer James Doherty, began to evacuate the approximate 20 occupants.

Police Chief William Chisholm said people were jumping from the second floor windows and were helped to safety.

Fire Chief William Gras said, "The fire alarm system in the building was not working so occupants did not have an early warning and were left trapped in the burning building."

The former Howard Johnson is closed for repairs from the "severe heat and smoke damage throughout the entire second floor and minor smoke damage to the first floor," Gras said.

The fire allegedly began and destroyed the room registered to Schlain and severely damaged the rooms on either side before spreading to the stairwells and hallways.

The woman, who was not injured, was taken to Mountsinclair Regional Medical Center for evaluation, police said. Apparently she was experiencing mental stress and is scheduled to be interviewed again, police said.

The Fire Department was assisted, by mutual aid from the Union Fire Department which provided a tower ladder. Summit sent a ladder truck and Mountsinclair and New Providence stood by at Springfield headquarters.

Repercussions mount on referendum

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

Taxpayers will face a 1 1/2 point increase as repercussions from the recently defeated bond ordinance mount during the borough's attempts to fulfill state mandates.

Instead of having the costs spread over the 20-year life of the $4.5 million bond for capital improvements, taxpayers will incur costs on their next tax bill, including $60,000 for a new gas tank.

According to state mandates, municipalities are required to remove gas and oil tanks by Jan. 1, 1994, and replace them with tanks that meet the state's new requirements. The borough included this process as part of the capital improvements in the ordinance declared Oct. 19 by a 2-1 public vote.

Westfield, filling the tank, completing paperwork to keep records straight, and driving back to Mountaintide will take about a half hour, he said.

This will cost the borough $15 per trip when police officers make the trip since officers make approximately $30 an hour, Vigilanti said.

The logjam does not end with the tank. The borough is also facing possible complications because the ordinance also included a new fire truck, payment of bond anticipation notes authorized in 1991 for the renovations and improvements to the Rescue Squad building, and improvements to the sewer system.

The mayor said there are no options to make the payments, declare emergency appropriations, reintroduce the bond ordinance or to wait and put the improvements in 1994's budget.

Police suspect link in robberies

An 82-year-old woman was wrongfully robbed Monday night in approximately 11 a.m. while she was on New Providence Road near Hillside Avenue and had a canvas bag stolen, police said.

The suspect, described as dark-skinned male wearing dark pants and grey sweat shirt with a hood, pushed the woman from behind and knocked her to the ground and ran up the Hillside Avenue toward Westfield with her bag. He then, police said, went into a beige panelled mini-van and left the scene.

Two other robberies happened in a similar way in Linden shortly after with a man again being the same description, police said.

Mountaintide police have issued a warning to all residents particularly to those walking alone to stay alert and if they feel threatened to go to a near by house and call the police. They also warned residents not to isolate themselves.

Mountaintide Police arrested John Garaghy, 19 of Mountaintide and Edgar Ramirez, 19 of Westfield, and charged them with possession of marijuana under 50 grams.

Benefit run for Red Cross

The Westfield/Mountaintide Chapter of the American Red Cross in cooperation with Jack LaLanne Fitness Center of Springfield has extended an invitation to all area residents to join them on Nov. 13 for an Adult CPR Marathon at Jack LaLanne Fitness Center.

The Red Cross will be offering Adult CPR Training to those who would like to learn CPR. This course will be a combined effort with Jack LaLanne, which will be offering a free one-day pass to use the facility with each registration.

Participants can register for the course at Jack LaLanne Fitness Center Inc., located at 99 Route 22 East, Springfield, or by stopping by the Westfield/Mountaintide Chapter of the American Red Cross, located at 321 Elm St., Westfield, or by calling for details at (908) 232-7090.

This class gives the basic tools for what to do when the unexpected occurs.

Pre-registration is requested to reserve a spot in the morning or afternoon class, on a first-come, first-served basis.

Police blotter

A similar incident was reported between a woman and a man fitting the previous description in Kenilworth 20 minutes later. This woman however, allegedly would not release her pocket book and so the man kicked and punched her before he got her bag. He then, police said, went into a beige panelled mini-van and left the scene.

Holiday luncheon planned

"During the luncheon, there will be a variety of bouillabaisse and craft tables offering many items for the holidays. There will be a silent auction, including vacation get-aways, tickets for sport events, and much more.

The luncheon is open to members and non-members, and the cost is $25 per person. The deadline for reservations is Nov. 18.

Musical benefits deserted village

On Nov. 19 and 20, a new musical will premiere at Trailside Nature and Science Center in Mountaintide. The musical, titled "Village," was written and directed by Amy Marie V. Keller, a senior at Kent Place School in Summit.

"Village" is a fantasy about the history of the Washington Reservoir's Deserted Village of Pevely/Glenade Park. The non-profit work of historical fiction examines the unique social pressures experienced by nine eccentric teen-age girls in 1888, when the village was used as a summer resort.

All ticket money will be directly donated to the Union County Deserted Village Trust Fund in hopes that the county's major restoration project for Feltville will continue to increase public access to and public awareness of this nearby historical site.

Acting in "Village" are: Heather Marko, of Garwood; Jeanette Ponder, of East Orange; Amy Marie Keller, Suzanne Ballantyne and Elizabeth Allen, of Roselle Park; Eleanor Lipat, of North Caldwell; Blair Brown, of Westfield; Dana Lieberman, of Cranford; and Jessica Stillman, of South Plainfield.

Clown paints new colors for clowning process

By Heather MacGregor
Managing Editor

The circus theme was expressed throughout the life of director Federico Fellini and he used clowns as symbols for mankind in many of his productions.

The meaning of this seemingly vague comparison is demonstrated in the actual life philosophy of a 22-year-old recent graduate of the Ringling Bros. Barnum & Bailey Clown College, Jason Schneider.

"I was a one-on-a-lifetime opportunity," he said. "So I applied and was accepted and now I'm a graduate."

"Clowns are human cartoons and just to think about being a human cartoon is incredible," he said.

He said during the eight week program he "learned a lot about himself through self-expression."

Although he said he does not plan to go into the circus, he will do anything to promote his youthfulness," he said, smiling as he reflected on his latest accomplishment.

"It was like going to school in a toy store" that had all of the colors of the spectrum, with custom made toys and costumes, and "playing in the biggest sandbox in the world all day," he said.

"It was learning how to spit water, but my friends were learning calculus," he said.

"I always enjoyed making people laugh," he said, "and I love comedy and slapstick humor." So he decided to give it a try.

This former philosophy major and graduate of Brandeis University said he indulged his desire for comedy as a member of the improvisational comedy team.

"I love humor and I love to make people laugh," Schneider said, so despite the odds, Schneider said he decided to go clown college and give his lifelong dream a try.

His arrival to clown college, he said, left a lasting impression and carried him through the difficult days that he would face ahead.

As the clown college bus drove through the museum grounds, the students were welcomed by signs, cheers and media covering the event. When the bus arrived at the warehouse, where the students would be taking their classes, the driver knocked on one of the doors and as it opened out came balloons, bubbles and confetti to greet the future graduates.

"We were such stars in town," he said, remarking on the signs and people throughout the town welcoming the clown class.

The school did not spare any fancy fare or expense in educating the clowns, he said. Performers from all over the world participated in training the clowns as part of the school's foreign exchange program.

Classes began with a warm-up period in the morning that led to activities including mime and clowning, which taught the fundamentals in being a clown: slapstick, falling off chairs, acrobatics and sleeping.

If you were not in great physical shape when you arrived, you certainly were when you finished, he said. "Makes watching the Jano Fronda week-out look like the Frugal Gourmand."

There was never any time to spare. They even worked through lunch, as the clowns were "forced" to watch classic comedies from the school's video library. "Sometimes you could hardly eat because you were laughing so hard," he said.

Classes were in partitioned "three rings," and taught by performers, often Clown College graduates, that had taken time off to further clowning.

Of the 30 students, 10 were awarded entrepreneurial positions on the road working with the "Greatest Show on Earth." The college, he said, did not teach how to become a clown; instead it improved upon the raw talent and worked with character development to help the students create their own clown personality.

Every Saturday the clowns would perform their gag presentations, free of charge, to the residents of Baraboo and continue based on audience reception of their ideas. The gags were performed with custom-made props and costumes supplied by the school and made especially for each performance.

Just like any graduation process, at the end there was a final exam to find out what was learned during the previous weeks. These students, however, had to face a different challenge; they had to create "the world's funniest final exam."

In the circus world the audience does not just focus on the clowns but on the entire atmosphere. But Clown College was different, he explained, because the clowns were the stars. "There were a circus," he said.

They learned to speak with their bodies so the audience even in the top row would understand the emotions the clowns were portraying. The lessons were so strenuous the clowns were exhausted from acting happy or whatever emotion they chose to display to the audience.

"Clowning is a deep and emotional art form that is taken as seriously as ballet or being a doctor," he said, and to many grownups and children around the world it brings one of life's greatest gifts — laughter.

selected from approximately 2,000 applicants to travel to the college in Baraboo, Wis., the home of the Circus World Museum and the place where Ringling Bros. began. The class ranged in age from 18 to 33 and worked six days a week from 8 a.m. to 10 or 11 p.m. on performing and refining their clown skills.

Springbrook Park residents re-unite

By Jim Beebe

A group of men and women recently reunited for whom growing up in the neighborhood of Springbrook Park during the 1940s and '50s was a wonderful memory.

The one-day celebration of those years was on Saturday, Oct. 16 at Frank and Mildred Kerr's house in Mountaintown.

This inspired gathering was the brainchild of Sue (Kerr) Sabatini, who resides in Calif.; Don Baker, from Jersey City; and Dennis Beebe, now living in Solvang, Calif., who as youths lived in the neighborhood bounded by Balfour Avenue, Short Hills Avenue, and Park Lane just west of Morris Avenue.

"Bob Keihin" exclaimed Bill O'Dell, currently a Madison resident, as he recognized a childhood pal not seen in over 30 years. Similar joyful exclamations were heard again and again as people arrived, after traveling from Connecticut, Colorado, California, Texas, Minnesota, Maryland, Georgia, New Hampshire, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and upstate New York to be present at this special event.

For many hours small groups mingled on the lawn outside the Kerr home under a beautiful autumn sky, greeting each new arrival with bright smiles and a challenge to recognize a long-lost friend. "Springbrook Park was a great place to grow up," said Don Baker, who like many others at this reunion, had attended James Caldwell School and Jonathan Dayton Regional High School. These included former ex-student athletes such as Robert "Tuffy" Hartz, Regional Class of '62; Jerry Sabatini, '59; Bob Keihin, '58; and Rich Baker, '60; and Bill O'Dell, Stony Hill Prep '58.

Activity centered at a tent pavilion where photos were displayed and a buffet lunch was served. Raucous laughter echoed from the tent as stories were told about adventures and misadventures in the streets of the subdivisions, at school and the Union County Park "woods," which then adjoined Springbrook Park along Park Lane. Memories received a monumental job as faces were recognized, such as "Little Stevie Stoves" who now stands 6 feet 2 inches, and life accounts for the past three decades were exchanged. The emotional rollercoaster ride was relieved by glasses of beer from a keg, a dice jockey playing oldies, and a volley ball match in which the "little kids," now 50 years or younger, finally beat the "big kids" — 51 and older.

Thanks were given for all who survived harrowing life experiences, like Bill Kelsay who executed 160 plus parachute jumps during two tours with the USAF pilot rescue unit in Vietnam. Though not a resident of Springbrook Park, Bill caught wind of this event and was drawn to attend. This magazine also drew Janis Brunker, who drove two hours from Connecticut to spend less than an hour meeting with old friends before another social commitment obliged her to travel home. The celebration went on far into the evening as the reunioners danced and sang along with the dice jockey's music. Late at night the reunioners reluctantly bade farewell to one another and set out for their distant homes.

Former residents of Springbrook Park gathered for a reunion to celebrate their old neighborhood.

What would bring so many people so far? This reunion was a testimony to the wonderful haven that Springbrook Park was for those who spent their formative years there three decades ago. If you missed this reunion but would like to get in touch with some old friends, call Don Baker at (201) 434-2955. Jim Beebe is a former resident of Springbrook Park.

Openings available for discussion

Several openings are still available to participate in Springfield Public Library's Great Books Discussion Group. The group, which meets monthly on Thursday mornings between 10 and 11:30 a.m., discusses the short classics of Aristotle, Faulkner, Locke, Chekhov and Tolstoy, to name a few.

Currently the discussion is led by Springfield resident May Daniels, who describes herself as a "pioneer in search of education." Other group participants are welcome to lead the discussion, as well, if they so desire. The next scheduled discussion will take place on Nov. 18. New participants are required to register and pick up a book at the library. For information, call (201) 376-4930.

Gaffney appointed

Union County Register of Deeds James Rajoppi appointed Constance Gaffney of Union as a special deputy register to her office.

Gaffney has been employed by the Register's Office since 1969. She began her career as an index clerk and through promotion advanced to principal index clerk. She supervises the indexing division of the office. Prior to her tenure in the Register's Office, she worked for a short time for the Board of Freeholders.

In the position of special deputy register, Gaffney will perform the duties of the register and deputy register in their absence. The special deputy register has the same powers to perform all the duties conferred by law upon the register and deputy register.

"Constance is a well-liked, competent staff member who has extensive knowledge of the functions of the Register's Office," Rajoppi said. "I am very pleased to appoint her to this position and know she will perform her duties extremely well."

Gaffney was sworn in to the office of Special Deputy Register by Superior Court Judge Christopher Dietz. A reception in the Office of Register followed.

Plan to boost economy, create jobs

Elizabethtown Gas Company has proposed an economic development program designed to spur growth and create jobs in the utility's seven-county service area. The program will feature reduced natural gas rates for businesses which start, relocate or expand.

In announcing the plan, Elizabethtown President Robert P. Kenney said, "Our goal is to stimulate economic growth in this region and improve the overall business climate by offering to help reduce the energy costs of businesses which are looking to either start up or grow."

The company, which serves 230,000 customers in Union, Middlesex, Hunterdon, Warren, Sussex, Morris and Mercer counties, filed its plan with the New Jersey Board of Regulatory Commissioners asking that it be made effective Dec. 1. The program is a reduced rate for natural gas service for a three-year period that will trim the bill of a typical commercial customer by approximately 18 percent. The reduced rate is available to any business with 10 or more employees that locates in a new or vacant building anywhere in Elizabethtown's service area, or to an existing business which expands by more than 5,000 square feet.

Under the proposal, a business which would use 300 therms of gas per month would see a bill of $288.25 instead of $350.96. One that would use 1,000 therms per month would see a bill of $564.35 instead of $688.01. "Energy costs — particularly in this part of the country — can present a barrier to the business community. The discount contained in our proposed Economic Development Service tariff will help bring down that barrier," he said.

Kenney added, "We are proposing to the BRC to have Elizabethtown's shareholders and ratepayers share the cost, just as we will all share the benefits of new businesses and new jobs in the area. We are offering to absorb the rate discount."

Elizabethtown's rate reductions would be contingent on the customer entering into a minimum three-year service agreement with the utility. Federal, state, county and local government entities would not be eligible for the incentives.

Persistence pays

Two residents recently fought Town Hall and won. Rich Coan and Charles Jacques persistently challenged the Township Committee on the legality of procedures concerning the introduction of an ordinance which created the Special Improvement District. Their persistence often bothered committee members, who would not provide adequate answers to their questions and instead brushed off their inquiries as absurd. These residents, however, remained steadfast and every week demanded answers to their questions.

The two men became doubtful about the redevelopment plans in late 1991 and unsuccessfully brought them to the committee's attention.

These residents recently discovered the committee did not follow the proper procedure. Their most recent request to the Township Committee was to prove the validity of the ordinance.

The committee could not.

At that point, the men were taken seriously and thanks to their efforts, the ordinance will now be reintroduced properly.

In a world where spathy dwellers, these residents took a vested interest in their community and it proved beneficial. This example should give residents another reason to get involved and stay involved with local government.

Hindsight is 20/20

Now that the votes have been cast and counted, we hope the candidates elected on the local, county and state levels will serve us well.

No other day like Election Day offers the excitement of democracy. The anticipation of the races, the tension of the debates, the promises, and the anxiety created by political advertisements climaxed Tuesday. On Wednesday, most people were glad it was over.

But the anticipation really has just begun. Responsibility does not end when the polls close. The electorate must keep a watchful eye on those who were elected, attend meetings, read newspapers, write letters and seek satisfaction. Fall is not the only time to be concerned with government. If we act as watchdogs throughout the year, we will be able to choose viable leaders when election time arrives. An informed electorate is the only electorate which can intelligently choose leaders to direct our future.

It is easy to say that hindsight is 20/20 two days after Election Day, but now is not the time to wonder if we've made the right choices. We must stay aware of the actions of those we choose.

Democracy does not ensure that the better candidates win. But it is the best system for choosing our government leaders.

To quote Winston Churchill: "Indeed, it has been said that democracy is the worst form of government except all those other forms that have been tried from time to time."

One thing is certain. We made some important decisions Tuesday, and we hope we'll be better for them.

"Freedom of the press is the staff of life for any vital democracy."
—Wendell L. Willkie

Should school district be deregionalized?

YES

By Jay Folgerbaum
More than 50 years ago, six towns in Union County united to form a regional high school district. At that time, it was a viable and successful option due to the limited funds each town had available with which to run a high school. Now it appears that the Union County Regional High School may have outlived its usefulness. Five of the six school boards which comprise the UCRHS have commissioned the firm of DeLaitre and Fouchon to prepare a study of the feasibility of deregionalization. The first phase of the study has been completed and the results, according to a report given by Dr. Gary Friedland, superintendent of schools in Springfield, support the educational and financial soundness of deregionalization.

While the report addresses 13 different scenarios of how a deregionalization plan could be implemented, three plans are particularly interesting to us here in Dayton. These three plans show Dayton being run by the local school board, while David Breatley High School would be responsible and run by the Kenilworth school board. Mountainside and Garwood, because they do not have a school within their towns, would be free to negotiate with any school district to accept their students.

Economically, the various plans would be advantageous to Mountainside as they would realize a tax savings regardless of where they wind up. Springfield would seem to break even if it ran Dayton with only Springfield students. However, if Mountainside were to continue to send its students to Dayton, Springfield would probably enjoy a tax savings. The response of David Breatley would not result in a savings for Kenilworth, but it would provide the town with the school they have been fighting to get to reopen.

Originally, the region was formed to save money. Half of the towns that comprise the region are not saving money; in fact, they are paying a larger percentage of the budget than the percentage of students they send into the region. It is not just to have any town pay more than its fair share. The regional approach is no longer satisfying the needs of its constituents. So far, four of the six districts have passed resolutions which favor deregionalization and a fifth, Garwood, voted to continue with a regional system.

With four towns passing resolutions, the deregionalization study

Deregionalization. You won't find the word in a dictionary. But it's going to be one of the most important words any of us will hear during the next few months.

Whether you are aware of it or not, Springfield's local Board of Education, along with the boards of some other towns in our regional high school district, is pushing for "deregionalization." To deregionalize means that our regional high school district would be broken up and each town would have to find a way to provide a high school education for its students.

One person who is thinking a lot about these questions is Regional Board President Burton Zilmer. According to Zilmer, several local boards of education, including Springfield's, hired a consultant to help them decide about breaking away from the regional district. "The towns feel they can do it better and cheaper," Zilmer said, "but the public doesn't know much about the situation — mainly because there has been no information given to them."

And that's a very important issue. As Zilmer sees it, "There is only a handful of people holding a 'rough draft' of the consultant's report, but it was enough to get them to push for deregionalization." Zilmer feels strongly that the public should be able to see this rough draft. "They used tax dollars to make it," he says, "but they completely shut the public out of the process."

No matter how you look at it, one thing is clear — local boards of education passed resolutions calling for deregionalization, based only on a "rough draft" report, and without giving copies to the public.

One of the first things every one of us must ask — and get our parents to ask — is who is pushing for deregionalization and why? What's the real benefit to us — the customers of the education system? And, most important, if the quality of a deregionalized system depends in any way on having a certain number of students in our school, just how will that number be guaranteed before our fate is decided?

The regional system has served our needs for nearly 37 years. Some people want to eliminate it overnight. We ought to wonder why.

Board must make statement

To the Editor:
It has never been the practice of the Springfield Board of Education to negotiate its employee contract in public, however, after weeks of reading letters from the Springfield Education Association, it has become necessary to state the position of the Springfield Board of Education.

Despite letters and comments to the contrary, the Board of Education has offered the Springfield Education Association a salary contract settlement that equals or exceeds those settlements reached throughout the county and neighboring school districts.

Currently, members of the Springfield Education Association enjoy comprehensive medical and dental insurance for themselves and their families, as well as employee retirement coverage. In these economic times, when health care benefits are being severely cut, the Springfield Board of Education is seeking only to maintain the current generous health benefits that exist in the present SBA contract.

The Springfield Board of Education knows that the settlement offer made to the SBA is both fair and competitive. We value all the employees in our district and the importance of the education of our children, but we are also ever mindful of our financial responsibility to the citizens of Springfield.

Freeholder hearing was a set-up

To the Editor:
Editor's note: The following is an open letter sent to Freeholder Frank Lehr.

I have just come away from the meeting you chaired. Despite my statement to the contrary, you were not looking for scientific facts. It was a stacked deck: You began by begging the issue and creating a straw man. No one there would deny there is a problem. You hinted that maybe some don't think it's a problem, therefore opening the flood gates to those who distastefully presented their horror stories. Despite the promise to cut off anything redundant, you let repetition reign.

Before the horror stories unfolded, your introduction took at least 15-20 minutes of the two hours. Then you professed David Breatley as the authority with equal time for a rebuttal. His presentation was well rehearsed, full of half-truths and scare tactics, particularly when he indicated the deer as a factor in Lyme disease despite the N.J. Board of Health saying that reducing the deer population would have no effect on Lyme disease. His was a treacherous offering and you know that it would be. By the time he was finished it was 8:45 and the meeting was to end at 10 p.m., which it did. You then again set up Dan Bumbler to "answer" questions as if he was the expert. He's already decided what's "best," and I'm afraid you have too.

You helped foster the sense that something has to be done right away. But we've lived with this problem this long, we don't have to do something next week. Don't be stampeded into thinking we do, that it, not unless you want to. And don't apologize for getting the Fish and Game Commission involved, your disingenuous disclaimer notwithstanding. You know that when you asked their help you were asking for a hunt, plain and simple.

Hoping the minds of the freeholders are truly open, I'd like to summarize some of the things I wanted to say:

While I am against hunting deer to kill them, and against embracing the Fish and Game Commission in solving the deer problem in the Watchung Reservation, I must admit that what I am against is motivated by emotion, but I am against emotion deciding what should be done, such as telling us that something has to be done now. We have to do what is practical, rational and logical. But first we have to find what is the best thing.

What is rational is that any inclination to a deer hunt now, and prouder over, is irrational, particularly so without first being able to guarantee the safety and peace of those whose homes are either right in the reservation or within feet of its perimeter. (Have you even thought of the lawsuits that could arise against the county if someone is harmed in any way?)

We do not logically know if killing deer would solve the problem. Rather, logic tells us, judging from the experience of other communities, that rather than solve, it complicates and worsens the issue. At the same time, I have no expertise nor do most of the people who spoke have the requisite knowledge or experience. But there are people with experience and know-how. Accordingly, an ad-hoc commission should be appointed, charged with the duty of consulting, exploring, asking what other communities have done, so as to find the best ways of dealing with the deer problem, and make no mistake, there is a problem. Then it should be the responsibility of the freeholders and the ad-hoc commission to convey to the people in the community what is known and what the alternatives are. Only then can we effect a plan, that looks not to county or state agencies who are likely to do a poor job, but rather to our own community volunteers resources, to help preserve our deer as the beauty of our natural resources within the reservation — that includes the foliage, the people, and the deer.

True meaning of justice was lost in beating trial of L.A. trucker

I'm having trouble reconciling the definition certain black leaders attach to the term "justice." Having grown up in the racially divided city of Newark with a father who talked and acted with conviction on the issues of social justice, I thought I knew what it meant. I was taught that justice was "color-blind."

So like most of you, I was outraged when I first heard the verdict in the Reginald Denny case. How could the jury conclude, after watching the nauseating video of the Denny beating, that defendant Damian Williams and Henry Watson were not guilty of the attempted murder?

Denny and seven other victims in this case were attacked by Williams and Watson because they were white and unlucky enough to be in South Central Los Angeles after the acquittal of the four cops in the original Rodney King trial — there was no justice there.

We all saw the Denny attack with our own eyes. We saw him being pulled from his truck. We saw Williams smashing Denny in the head with a brick and then doing his sickening victory dance for the cameras. He was also shot. We saw Denny being held down and repeatedly stomped. We saw the grotesque image of his battered face and body. It was a miracle that he survived this savage attack.

But according to the jury, all this, as well as other evidence, was not enough to prove that someone was sort of balance," said Jones.

Last month, Jones was replicated as the NAACP head by Elaine Harrington. I recently read a flattering profile on Harrington, in which she talked of her work with Martin Luther King — she was jailed after a boycott — in the struggle for civil rights and social justice. I called the now NAACP head to get her reaction to the Denny verdict.

I asked, "Was justice served by the 'not guilty' verdicts in the Denny case?" There was a long silence — maybe 20 seconds. She finally asked, "What do you mean?" I repeated the question. Another long pause. Then finally, Harrington said in a clear voice, "If what you mean is that, given the historical structure and oppression of my people for more about a PBS documentary depicting the actions of a group of black citizens and leaders who maintained that Williams, Watson and two other defendants in this case were "political prisoners." They chanted, "Free the L.A. 4 Now!" "Don't Leave Your Brothers Hanging," and "No Justice, No Peace."

In the program, Congresswoman Maxine Waters, who is black, said the four men were being "denied justice." Williams' mother demanded justice for her son, and is applauded by civil rights leaders. Another family member who said the entire trial was unfair was asked what would he say to Denny. He hesitated, then said, "I would say, 'Now you know what it feels like to be black.'"

At the time, I called former president of the state National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Keith Jones, and asked him if it would be a travesty of justice if the defendants got off. "It could not call it a travesty because the process is as unfair to the people of color. When you look at the justice system from a historical perspective, you see a gross imbalance. If they got off, it would be seen by some as creating some sort of balance," said Jones.

Businesses, ecologists not far apart

Despite what some people may think, environmentalists and business are not worlds apart, according to John Paling, a professor of corporate conservation studies at the University of Florida and a former professor of zoology at Oxford University in England.

Paling met with employees at Elizabethtown Gas in Union last week. The presentation was sponsored by Cogen Technologies of Linden. During his talk, titled "Businesses and Environmentalists: Two Worlds, One Planet?" Paling examined the complex interrelationship between economics and ecology.

"Business is potentially the best ally the environment could have, not the least because 90 percent of the world's resources are first used by business or industry," Paling said. "Businesses also have huge leverage in terms of the number of people they interface with."

For these reasons, Paling suggests shared by Cogen Technologies Inc., a major producer of electrical and thermal energy in the state and a proponent of environmentally advanced technologies. The company also arranged for Paling to travel throughout the state in a natural gas vehicle supplied by Elizabethtown Gas. Cogen's New Jersey facilities use natural gas to produce electricity and steam.

"We firmly believe that a company's long-term success is directly related to its ability to balance economic and environmental considerations," said Regan Phillips, Cogen's vice president of New Jersey operations.

According to Paling, this is the type of forward thinking that can affect change and make a difference. In his presentation, Paling referred to the book Total Cost Accounting by Frank Popoff, president and CEO of Dow Chemical.

"Popoff and other business leaders are recognizing that the environment is a precious commodity, and that industry — for its own sake — will need to adopt a new method of accounting that places a value on the 'free' services that nature provides," Paling said.

"What this means is that businesses will begin to factor in the long-term cost of their environmental impact in their financial statements. For example, the cost of replacing trees cut for paper and lumber should not simply be borne by future generations," he said.

"Once we re-evaluate the hazards that exist, we can prioritize the most important areas of concern," Paling said. "In many instances, valuable resources are being wasted on the most insignificant risks."

Yesterday's amusement parks live in memories

In the late years of the 19th century and even in the early years of this century, no one had dreamed up theme parks such as Disneyland, or Great Adventure, but we did have what was known as an "amusement park." Conroy Island had about the biggest and best known park in the metropolitan area, but it was not the only one around here. There was Palisades Park located just north of the George Washington Bridge, high up on the top of the rocky cliffs at the edge of the Hudson River. In Singac we had Grandview Park near the shoreline of the winding Passaic River, and closer to home was Olympic Park in Irvington, as well as Dreamland Park at the Elizabethtown-Newark city line.

These parks made no attempt to educate anyone by using any sort of theme; they just provided fun and entertainment. Their main attraction was the rides, some mild and some scary, which their patrons enjoyed. They all had merry-go-rounds, one of the earliest forms of a park ride. Here even the youngest child could enjoy the thrill of being high up on a horse.

The Way It Was

By William Frolich

It did not matter that the horse was made of painted wood, and that Daddy was standing alongside to make sure you did not fall off; it was fun. It was more fun when you were old enough to ride the outside row of horses all by yourself, and could try to catch the brass ring, which meant that the next ride was free. Most of the carousels had a metal arm loaded with a number of 2-inch steel rings located at arm's length from the outside horse. A rider could grasp one and pull it free from the metal arm each time that he rode by the arm, which their patrons enjoyed. When the supply of rings in the arm was exhausted, the operator swung the arm out of the way and held up a brass basket so you could throw the rings back to be used again for the next ride. If you had caught the brass, or gold-painted ring you gave that one to the ticket-taker as payment for the next ride.

There were other rides that were not too scary, unless you were afraid of heights, for some of the ferris wheels were bigger than others, and while the view from the top was impressive, so was the distance to the ground, for some people. Another easy ride was the Caterpillar, a sort of merry-go-round without horses, which instead had a string of small cars on a circular track which was set on a wavy, oblique angle. Once the ride was under way, a green canvas cover arose from one edge of the cars and enclosed the riders. From the outside the green cover suggested a caterpillar, and from the screams within, it seemed as though the rider had just had dinner.

The roller coaster was the big thrill of the park, however. Just watching a string of cars climb up that first hill to the top of that wooden lattice which held the track was enough to frighten some faint-hearted riders away. That was nothing compared to being in the front seat and watching as the track seemed to disappear as you went over the edge and down that first drop. Then it was up the next hill, and around a turn, and down another precipitous drop. After about a minute and a half it was a relief to feel the cars slow down and finally come to a stop, only to have your companion say, "Let's do it again!"

The Old Mill ride was a good way to relax after some of the scary rides. This ride used a narrow boat which usually floated along through a maze of darkened passageways and was driven onward by the force of the flow of the water. Here and there throughout the ride were creepy monsters that lit up as a boat approached, but some of the young couples in the boats ignored them and took advantage of the darkness for a brief romantic interlude.

The fun house was another standard attraction in most amusement parks. Here you walked along narrow passageways that twisted and turned like secret tunnels in an old castle.

Spooks and skeletons would reach out their arms toward you, but never quite "far enough" to grab. In some fun houses when you entered a doorway, you found yourself in a most unusual room. It was a square room with four walls, a ceiling and a floor, but the whole room was tilted at about a 10-degree angle toward one corner. The effect was disturbing to persons used to level floors and perpendicular walls, and it upset your sense of balance.

All of the parks offered a variety of ways to spend your money. There was the Shooting Gallery, where you fired real .22-caliber bullets from real rifles at a string of moving metal ducks, or small clay pipes, or other targets which fell down when hit. The "dodge-ems," or bumper cars allowed drivers to relieve their frustrations of auto traffic, as here the idea was to bump into as many cars as possible, and to avoid being bumped by someone else.

Grandview Park in Singac had an outdoor theater where vaudeville acts performed during the day and movies were shown as soon as it was dark enough. Dreamland Park was noted for its large swimming pool, and Olympic Park had a pool and a roller skating rink. Palisades Park, inspired by the Olympic Games, installed a "Bobbed Run," which resembled a roller coaster, but there were no tracks for the cars to ride on. Instead, there was a twisting, curving smooth wooden trough through which the long car of riders plunged and turned on its way to the end of the ride.

In contrast to the theme parks of today, the cost of a day in an amusement park was quite cheap. Fifty cents, or $1, was the usual admission charge, and parking was free. Many patrons came by bus or trolley, for a nickel. The rides varied between a nickel, dime or a quarter, with the roller coaster the most expensive.

Sad to say, all of those parks have vanished, and with them has gone a lot of fun. Modern versions of some of the rides exist today in the theme parks, but they are not the same as the ones we enjoyed 50 years ago.

Drive Clean

Of all your daily activities, driving a car is probably the single most polluting thing you do. Motor vehicle emissions in many urban areas are the greatest contributor to ground-level ozone, a major component of smog. Ground-level ozone causes respiratory problems and can lead to permanent lung damage. It is the most serious air pollution problem in the region.

Motor vehicles also emit a number of air toxics, which can cause serious health problems, including cancer. Car emissions also contribute to acid rain and global warming.

You can help clear the air by changing your driving habits.

- Carpool, vanpool, use public transportation. This not only reduces pollution, but cuts down on fuel expenses, wear and tear on your car and the stress of driving in rush-hour traffic.
- Combine errands into one trip. A substantial amount of pollution is released during the "cold-start" phase, the first few minutes it takes to warm up your car.
- Avoid drive-up windows, stop-and-go traffic and excessive idling. Idling your engine for longer than a minute is worse for air quality than starting up the car again.
- Moderate, steady speeds are better for air quality because they save fuel.
- When possible, bicycle or walk instead of driving.

The savings in terms of air quality add up. One person using mass transit for a year instead of driving to work prevents an average of 9.1 pounds of hydrocarbons, 62.5 pounds of carbon monoxide and 45 pounds of nitrogen oxides from being discharged into the air. By idling your engine every day, you can also save up to $3,000 a year on gas, insurance, parking fees and wear and tear on your car.

Patient's wishes granted because of a living will

Editor's note: This column is reprinted from the Union County Senior News and does not constitute legal advice. This topic, living wills, is a complex subject. Advice about a specific situation should be sought from a lawyer.

Yes, living wills are legal in New Jersey especially now that the long-pending Advance Directives for Health Care Act has become law.

Each person has the right — within certain limits — to control his or her medical treatment. A patient's consent is required to begin a treatment and, once started, to withdraw it. This principle applies to all forms of treatment, including life-sustaining treatment. It can include medication, equipment such as breathing machines and feeding tubes, and procedures such as dialysis.

No distinction is made between refusing treatment and withdrawing treatment. The patient may begin a treatment and later decide to terminate it.

No distinction need be made between treatment providing artificial fluids and nutrition and life-sustaining treatment. A patient may refuse to receive fluids and nutrition through a tube in the veins, nose or stomach, just as a patient may refuse other life-sustaining treatment.

The legal right to refuse or withdraw medical treatment, including life-sustaining treatment, is given not only to a patient with a terminal condition. It is also given in other circumstances, such as when a patient is permanently unconscious, or when the treatment is likely to be "ineffective" or "futile in prolonging life" or "inhumane."

But what if a patient cannot make these decisions because he or she is unconscious or mentally incompetent? Someone can then make the decision for the patient.

That "someone" is called a surrogate health-care representative. Ideally, it is someone the patient has chosen in advance, through an advance proxy directive. If the patient had not chosen anyone, the physician or medical institution will turn to close relatives or friends for medical-care decisions.

And what medical-care decisions may that proxy make? The proxy must be guided by the patient's wishes, not by what the proxy would personally want. Again ideally, the patient has indicated his or her wishes in advance, through an advance instruction directive often called a "living will." This document or other "clear and convincing" evidence of the incompetent patient's wishes will be followed.

But if no living will or other clear evidence exists, then the proxy acting with the physician and medical institution must search for "trustworthy" evidence of the patient's wishes, all evidence of patient intent, however casual or remote, may be considered. However, if no evidence is found, life-sustaining treatment may not be withheld unless the patient's pain is so avoidable and severe that the effect of the treatment would be "inhumane."

Therefore, it is important to have both a living will and a power of attorney for health care. These documents ensure that your wishes are carried out. They also avoid disputes among family members, and needless litigation.

New Jersey law Beginning in 1976 with the New Jersey Supreme Court decision in the Karen Ann Quinlan case, New Jersey has been in the forefront with a body of law on the refusal of life-sustaining medical care. The principles outlined above, which are based on those court decisions, have been incorporated in the New Jersey Advance Directives for Health Care Act (P.L. 1991, c. 201, effective January 1992).

Advance Directives for Health Care

A power of attorney for health care, or proxy directive, is a document in which an individual, or principal, authorizes an agent to make health-care decisions on his or her behalf. It can be as broad or as narrow as the principal desires. It contains general and/or specifically enumerated powers and may be executed before or after the principal becomes disabled. A durable power of attorney cannot be revoked or modified after that event has occurred. Several originals may be prepared for convenience, and kept by principal's physician, health-care representative, and principal. The power to make health-care decisions may be included in a power of attorney for financial matters, but the better practice is to execute a separate power of attorney for health care that may be combined with a living will.

A living will, or health care declaration, is a document in which the individual indicates his or her medical treatment wishes and may specify conditions under which certain forms of treatment are not to be administered. A written document is strongly recommended although not essential; oral declarations, while recognized in New Jersey, are more difficult to prove. It is revocable, and several originals may be prepared, for convenience, and kept by declarant's physician, health-care representative, and declarant. It may be combined with power of attorney for health care.

A statement relating to anatomical gifts states an individual's desire to donate all, part or none of his/her body for transplant or other medical or scientific purposes. It may be combined with power of attorney for health care and living will.

Sheriff initiates 'SLAP' program

Union County this week initiated the Sheriff's Labor Assistance Program, or SLAP, a community-based corrections program which punishes current behavior and emphasizes responsible productivity.

The program is structured to modify undisciplined, irresponsible conduct through supervised public work and the experience of strict accountability. The screening of non-violent offenders reserve jail space for more serious offenders. It is an alternative to either a jail sentence with pre-approved work release or house arrest with electronic monitoring. The program exchanges the negative influence of incarceration for the positive development of self-esteem and law-abiding citizenship.

SLAP participation is a privilege which can be rescinded by an assigned Superior Court judge for violation of program rules and regulations. The hearing is informal with no right to counsel or appeal. Absent extenuating circumstances, an adverse determination transfers the SLAP participant from community privileges to incarceration for the remainder of the sentence. Swift and certain response is intended to deter violations and ensure the integrity of the program.

Participants serve their SLAP jail term, day for day, with no credits or if the offender is indigent, this fee may be waived by the municipal judge at the time of sentencing. An operation fee of $2 is then assessed for each SLAP day served, unless waived at sentencing.

This program fosters rehabilitation and punishes illegal conduct. It saves Union County thousands of dollars in unnecessary incarceration costs and provides otherwise unavailable supervised inmate labor for public work projects.

Borough recognizes good neighbors

By Heather MacGregor, Managing Editor

Mountainide residents were honored for efforts in making the community a better place to live, as their names were added to brass plates on the Mabel Young Good Neighbor award plaque.

Bobbi Weeks and Joan and Joseph Beierle were chosen by a good neighbor selection committee to be recognized for their contributions to the community.

Bobbi Weeks was an originator of a reading intensive program in the public school to instill a desire to read and often provided additional help for children who needed extra help. She was also the coach of the girls softball team and active in the Community Presbyterian Church and the Public Library.

The Beierles gave their time to children in an unorganized fashion. They are a very friendly couple and always keep their door open to children.

Former Mayor Frederick Wilhelm said, "They made a difference in a lot of children's lives by opening their hearts and their home to them."

Wilhelm, who was also once an honoree, explained what the dedication in Young's honor means for Mountainide and how it all began 11 years ago.

Young, he said, was a volunteer in every sense of the word. "She was a steady volunteer. She was a volunteer in most everything and everything that was going on."

"Without any fanfare or flourish she worked" and never looked for any commendation," he said. When she retired from teaching, at her testimonial dinner, Mountainide initiated the award to thank her, and future honoree residents, for making the borough a better place to live.

"You can get people who stand out, and others in almost obscurity, but they are doing something and that is the purpose of the award," he said.

Talent turns into business

Veronika Bellezza, of Mountainside, has taken a talent and turned it into a valuable asset for business. After winning four consecutive gold medals in boys-and-girls combined katas at the Garden State Games (1989-1991), Bellezza was asked to assist her karate instructor, Chris Goodcock of Chatham, with teaching karate classes at the YWCA in Summit.

She has been an assistant instructor there since 1991.

Bellezza, who is 17, is also an assistant instructor for classes held at the Florsham Park Recreation Center. In September of this year, she was hired by the Jewish Community Center in Livingston to set up her own program and serve as head instructor for their karate classes.

When she isn't teaching all these classes, Bellezza is attending karate classes herself.

"I'm currently training for my black belt," she said recently. "I attend classes three times a week and work out in the gym whenever I have extra time."

Bellezza has been studying Japanese-style Iashiyu karate since she was in the fourth grade. Currently, she is the senior at the Mountainide-Bear School in Mountainside.

"Next year, when I'm in college, I will still study karate, but I would also like to continue teaching. I hope to set up self-defense courses for other students. Karate has been important in my life and I would like to share its physical-and-spiritual aspects with others."

Veronika Bellezza demonstrates a correct karate punch to Flannery Murphy of Chatham and David Shis of Summit during a class at the YMCA.

Light shed on new tax law

Ken Goldmann, CPA, with Morrison and Associates in Cranford, and John Blas, partner in the Westfield law firm Lindbergh, McCormick and Eastbrook, will combine forces to answer questions on "The New Tax Law and You" at Children's Specialized Hospital, Mountainside, on Monday evening, Nov. 15, at 7:30.

The special program is sponsored by the Planned Giving Council of the CSH Foundation Board of Trustees in an effort to acquaint the public with the rapidly changing tax laws. Ways to make charitable gifts without incurring capital gains tax will be highlighted as well as how to avoid painful tax consequences in 1994 by utilizing beneficial strategies of 1993.

Philip Salerno III, vice president of the CSH Foundation, said, "We are pleased to have John Blas and Ken Goldmann present this pertinent seminar which is not only free of charge to the public but everyone who attends will receive a helpful booklet, "Your Guide to the New Tax Law," as well."

Salerno asks that those interested in attending the lecture at the hospital confirm their attendance with him at 150 New Providence Road, Mountainside, NJ 07092; (908) 233-3720, Ext. 310.

DARE plans new focus

By Dennis Schaal Staff Writer
The local Drug Abuse Resistance Education program, run by the Police Department, plans a new focus on the student population — seventh- and eighth-graders at Gaudin.

Two officers, Detective Steve Stocki and Edward McNary, recently took part in a week of State Police DARE training in Seagirt that covered teaching middle school students about the dangers of alcohol and drugs.

Next year, one or two officers may receive State Police training in DARE activities aimed at the high school — a prerequisite for additional expansion.

In the last few weeks, the DARE officers have been busy visiting the grammar schools to inform kids about safety precautions for Halloween. The cops have distributed "reflected" bags" and other materials, Stocki said.

The existing town DARE program, in addition to its visitations to elementary school students, generally targets fifth-graders.

Stocki noted Tuesday that the program hopes to elicit interest among the Gaudin students regarding its anti-drug message through "cooperative learning." He noted that students would be divided into discussion groups for role-playing and decision-making. If school authorities agree, the expanded program could get underway at Gaudin before the end of the year, Stocki said.

Two other officers previously received DARE training geared to the fifth grade.

"We just don't want to lose touch with the seventh- and eighth-graders," the detective said. "We don't want them to feel like they graduate and that's it."

R. Park at New Providence features battle of 6-0 teams

By J.R. Parachini Sports Editor
Now let's see what the Roselle Park High School football team is all about. Six blowout victories and a week off bring the Panthers to a critical point in the season.

Roselle Park visits New Providence for a 2 p.m. contest Saturday. It will be a battle of 6-0 teams vying for the Mountain Valley Conference-Valley Division crown.

Both clubs are also battling for playoff berths in North Jersey, Section 2, Group 1. Roselle Park most recently won the crown last year and New Providence won back-to-back titles in 1988 and 1989.

Last year Roselle Park blanked New Providence 24-0 in its third MVC-Valley Division crown and first

Roselle Park backfield among the best in state

Roselle Park takes a state-leading 17-game winning streak into Saturday's Mountain Valley Conference-Valley Division contest at New Providence. Both teams are 6-0.

Roselle Park's backfield is among the best in the state. Here's a closer look:

Senior fullback Nick Fowler leads the team in rushing with 613 yards on 60 carries (10.22 average). Fowler has a team-high 12 touchdowns, all rushing, and also ran in a two-point conversion to give him a team-high 74 points. Fowler has scored a touchdown in at least every game this year, and has four 100-yard plus games.

Senior right halfback Kevin Kirby has seven touchdowns this year, six on the ground and three receiving, for 54 points.

Senior quarterback John Schinasi has completed 27-of-45 passes (60 percent) for 557 yards, nine touchdowns, at least one in each game, and one interception. Schinasi has connected on three touchdown passes to Kirby, two to Marco Lozonaris, and two to Carlos Schinasi.

Schinasi has made 31-of-38 extra points and is 1-for-1 in the field goal department. Roselle Park is 1-for-2 on two-point conversion attempts.

Roselle Park has outscored its opposition 276-20 and has scored 40 touchdowns. The school record is 58 set last year. Roselle Park has scored 81 points in the first quarter, 91 in the second, 84 in the third and 20 in the fourth.

Fowler gained 96 yards on 19 carries. Kirby had 59 on nine and Carlos Schinasi had 52 yards on 10 carries. The Panthers, who went 22 quarters without giving up a point during last year, have given up seven in the first quarter, zero in the second, six in the third and seven in the fourth.

This year's starting defense has given up only one touchdown. Maxwell's third-quarter score two weeks ago that came on a quarterback sneak by Marco Lozonaris. The special teams gave up the first score and the reserves the third in that contest.

Roselle Park has outgained the opposition 2,508-365 in total offense. That's an average of 428-61 per game. Only Marlboro, with 115, has gained over 100 yards.

Roselle Park has committed only three turnovers, losing two fumbles and throwing one interception.

Roselle Park is 11-0 on the road the past two seasons. So this year, as it gets ready for its sixth straight road game Saturday.

Panthers do well to reach Group 1 championship tilt

By J.R. Parachini Sports Editor
The Roselle Park High School girls' tennis team proved to be one of the best Group 1 outfits in the state this year, reaching the Group 1 final for the second time.

The Panthers lost in the title match to South Jersey power Haddonfield 5-0 at Mercer County Park in West Windsor last Thursday, but have nothing to be ashamed of. Haddonfield has won the Group 1 championship the past seven seasons (1987-1993).

"They had many quality players," Roselle Park head coach Nancy Sturcke said. "We tried very, very hard against them but they were just a little more accomplished."

Haddonfield began the week with a 26-5 record and were ranked No. 6 in the state.

Roselle Park began the week with a 15-2 record and No. 2 ranking in the state. Roselle Park was ranked No. 1 in the county at 16-2, handed Roselle Park its only regular season defeat.

The Panthers were vying for their sixth consecutive Mountain Valley Conference-Valley Division crown Tuesday against Ridge. The home match was moved because of inclement weather Monday. Roselle Park defeated Ridge 5-0 in the final set.

Roselle Park reached this year's Group 1 final last Thursday by downing North Jersey, Section 1 champion Leonia 4-1 in the Group 1 semifinal.

Roselle Park won every match except for first doubles against Leonia.

Tara Bogota defeated Monika Modarelli 6-2, 6-2 at first singles and Adrienne Appello beat Julie Ulrich 6-3, 6-4 at second.

"Tara outlasted her opponent on the baseline," Sturcke said. "Adrienne had a tremendous effort. Sue returned everything."

Roselle Park High School Junior Anthony DeBenedictis won his second consecutive North Jersey, Section 2, Group 1 cross-country race last Saturday at the NJSIAA sectional championships held at Wrinmoco Park in Elizabethtown.

DeBenedictis' time of 16:02 was the fastest in the section. Roselle Park finished seventh in North Jersey, Section 2, Group 1 with 183 points. Whytau Pace won the section with 37 points and Newark School was second with 63.

Field Hockey
Roselle Park improved to 11-2-2 with a 5-0 win at Middletown Monday in Mountain Valley Conference action. Justice DeLuzo scored three goals and assisted on others scored by Rayns Riccardulli and Michele Fairchild.

Boys' Soccer
Roman Mill scored on goals in the first half to lift Dayton Regional past Hillsdale 6-1 last Saturday in Mountain Valley Conference-Mountain Division action.

Brian Hart also had two goals for Dayton, which improved to 12-4-1 with the win. Teunusse Chris Rehno had one goal and four assists.

Two artists offer exhibitions at Y

The YM-YWHA of Union County's Art Gallery, Green Lane, Union, will open its season Sunday at 7:30 p.m. with two artists, Ruth Levitan Friedman and Peter Honskiy. The artists will join in an exhibition of varied themes, and will preview their works. They also will be available to meet the public on a one-on-one level. Most artwork will be on sale at the art preview, it is announced, and refreshments will be available.

Levitan Friedman has been painting for many years in oils, acrylics and pastel. She has received awards in local and statewide art shows and has had her work in private collections. She has exhibited in the "Meet the Artist Show" in South Orange, The Kenilworth Art Show, the Millburn-Union "Festival on the Green," the Union County "Alive and Kicking" Art Show for Seniors, and the Trenton State Seniors Art Show. Her most recent art exhibit is in the Hillside Public Library.

Levitan Friedman said she sees her art "not as an obsession, rather something I need to do in order to find a means of expressing my feelings about the world around me. I strive to have the beauty of nature reflected in my work."

"Some of my work," she continued, "shows my concern for the drastic changes occurring in our environment. I see art as an individual's expression of beauty, and I want to bring out the beauty in the world in my art. I feel that people lose sight of this, and it is important to bring this message to the forefront. This is my goal in art."

Further information about the exhibition can be obtained by calling Sheila Nushofer, director of adult and cultural arts at the Y, at (908) 289-8112.

Local artists to exhibit works in Linden Library

Local artists Regina Moll and Irene Polinus currently have several paintings on exhibit at the Sunnyside Branch of Linden Library, 100 Edgewood Road, Linden. Moll is exhibiting several pastoral scenes in the circulation area of the library, and Polinus has 11 paintings in the non-circulation area. They include the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Elizabeth, the Cherry Blossoms in Washington, D.C., a Royal Oriental Lady, a clown, a cat and a Raggedy Ann. Both are members of the Linden Art Association.
