COPS SAVE SEVEN TRAPPED IN FIRE IN RUBY STREET HOME HERE MONDAY

Man, Badly Burned, Revived By Patrolman's Son, Taken to Overlook Hospital

MOTHER, 6 CHILDREN RESCUED FROM ROOF

Patrolman William J. Thompson, his son, William Thompson, Jr., James Stewart, truckman, of Ruby street, and several members of the volunteer fire department and of the police department early Monday morning rescued a man and a family of seven from a flame-swept house in Ruby street.

The policeman, with the fire at its height, made his way into the burning dwelling and with the aid of Chief Runyon and Patrolman Solge, dragged out the unconscious and scorched form of William Edwards, colored, father of six children. Patrolman Thompson's 19-year-old son, a boy scout, using methods known to all scouts, revived Edwards after ten minutes of untiring effort. A few minutes before, Stewart took the mother and her children one by one, from a porch roof where they had taken refuge.

Edwards, burnt on the face, head, body and arms, and frozen by his burns, sunk his teeth into young Thompson's shoulders, while being taken to Overlook Hospital, in Summit, by Patrolman William C. Selander, Geo. Payell, Jr., and Thompson. The bite was treated at the hospital.

About 5:30 in the morning, the members of the family were sleeping soundly when the oldest son, Osborne, thirteen, was awakened by the cracking of flames. He opened a hall door and found the stairway afire. He shouted a warning to his father and aroused the others.

There was no way to escape, except through the second story window to the porch roof. The seven, Mrs. Edwards, Osborne, Richmond, sixteen, Alice, seven, Helen, twelve, Matthew, seven, and William, five, were cut out to safety by the fire department was handicapped on its arrival when they found no water in the section, except in a few wells nearby. It was necessary therefore to use chemicals to fight the fire. It spread rapidly and the building was soon in ruins. The fire department has always been harassed in fighting fires in this section, since it is always difficult to reach a sufficient supply of water.

The origin of the fire was undetermined. The family was sheltered at the homes of neighbors, and the local branch of the Red Cross, as well as township officials and welfare organizations, will aid the members. At the hospital, Edwards' condition is said to be serious. The house was owned by Edwards, and the damage was estimated at $4,000.

DOCTOR CONVICTED OF TIPSY DRIVING

Cranford Physician Convicted He Reached for Medicine

An unusual case, in which a doctor lost his driving license for two years, due to drunken driving, took place in police court Tuesday night when Fred C. Ewin, the doctor, living at 47 Alden street, Cranford, was fined $200 and costs and his license suspended for two years by Police Recorder Everett E. Spinning. It is believed that this is the first case in the State in which a doctor's license was revoked on the charge of drunken driving.

Ewin collided with a car driven by William Pats, 407 North 12th street, Newark, October 20, on South Springfield avenue. He was arrested by Patrolman Wilbur C. Selander, on a complaint made by Pats. He was pronounced unfit to drive by Dr. Donny Q. Deinger, of this township.

Dr. Ewin testified that he had been stricken with a heart attack, which he was troubled with quite frequently, and that he was teaching two large classes of wine, wine about the time the accident occurred. He also admitted drinking two large glasses of wine shortly before the collision.

Lacie Joyner, of this township, stated that he had driven her back to Dr. Ewin's car in a household before the accident, and he noticed the car was weaving from one side of the road to the other.

The Rev. L. C. Hoppe, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Cranford, and Dr. Theodore Foster, 320 Springfield avenue, both testified as to the character of the defendant.

The case of McFinnott vs. Lewis, 150 Orchard street, Newark, charged with operating a car while drunk, was postponed until next court night, November 12.

Lewis was arrested by Patrolman Selander Sunday morning at 2:29 a. m. after his Fiat had collided with a sedan, driven by Thomas J. Allen, White Oak Ridge, Short Hills, on Fleeter and Hannah street. He was declared unfit to drive by Dr. Deinger. Samuel Moran, 13 Cherry street,

THE TAX SALE

Springfield's annual tax sale will be held soon, again recalling that assessment payments are needed promptly to meet obligations on bonds when they become due.

Taxes are needed promptly to meet current expenses assumed in the annual budget. It is, of course, understood that there are individual and private factors which make it impossible for all residents to meet their tax and assessments immediately when due.

Under the law, the township is authorized to borrow on tax revenue notes pending the time of collection of taxes. But these notes cannot be continued indefinitely. Besides which when they mount high, borrowing capacity for other purposes is impaired.

Every owner of property can help himself, and help the place he lives in, by meeting assessment payments and taxes as promptly as possible. When payments are in arrears beyond the time allowed by law, the only recourse the Township has is to sell the property. This does not mean that property is irretrievably lost. The owners still have two years to redeem. But by the sale the Township secures the revenue it must have to live.

Municipalities exist only through taxes. There is no other way to meet the necessary costs of government. When there is failure to pay taxes, the municipality has no method to collect the debt, except by sale directed through law.

When outsiders buy at tax sales, the Municipality receives the money. When the township buys, it merely secures the Certificates of Tax Sale. These Certificates are not available for use as money would be. When the Township has bought at a sale, and the property is not redeemed, the Township receives no further taxes on such property.

It would be well worth while if the Tax Sale Certificates held by the Township could be absorbed either by the owners or by the general public, if the owners do not wish to redeem.

The effect would be that the Township would receive the amount due on the Tax Certificates, and would, thereafter, continue to receive taxes on the property. There would be a conversion of dead wood into live assets.

Lauds Own Rule

CELEBRATING eighth birthday of Fascism, Premier Benito Mussolini (above) reviewed 25,000 militia in Rome and then recounted achievements of own regime in office self-made martyrs and their wailings and bemoanings evoke scant sympathy. Parents might well take a lesson from the birds. Fledglings are unceremoniously pushed from the nest, and learn to fly willy-nilly. Presently they are catching their own works and joyfully shifting for themselves. It is characteristic of parents who have overcome hardships, to want to make things easy, too easy for their children. They are confident that in some mysterious way their offspring will acquire stamina and offspring will acquire stamina and compulsion of overcoming obstacles, conquering handicaps, making their own decisions, and bearing the consequences. Parents wonder why they receive no thanks for having made things easy for their children, having relieved them of responsibility. Someone has briefly summed up parental philosophy thus: "Have them, love them, leave them." And in the last admonition lies our debt to posterity. We have them, we love them; our pleasure and pride in them is our reward. But our obligation is to "leave" them to send them forth to struggle out of pitfalls of their own making, to conquer their own dragons, in short, to live their own lives. And when they, too, hand on the torch in the march of the generations, they are beginning to pay the debt they owe their parents. For we get nothing for nothing in this best of all worlds, least of all the gift of life.

AS A WOMAN THINKS

Those of us who have lived long enough to have acquired some understanding of the ways of the world, know that we get nothing for nothing on this terrestrial ball. Even as there is no royal road to achievement, so is there always some kind of return required for favors done. Early in life this philosophy of compensation—or at least one angle of it—was ineluctably drilled in us by a woman relative whose influence still remains a living force, though she has long since gone to her reward. She could not endure the thought of being under obligations to anyone. There was nothing ungracious in her attitude, and she was always eager on her part to do the many, neighborly services and kindnesses which add to the joy of living. Looking back, it seems to me that it was her inherent honesty coloring her viewpoint; she had a horror not only of financial debt, but of all unpaid obligations—a certain pride in being able to say she owed no man anything. Perhaps she had learned that an unpaid obligation can be an embarrassing thing. We are sometimes asked to repay in ways that are difficult, sometimes beyond our power, and frequently reluctant. And often the return asked is out of all proportion to the original favor.

Parents, sometimes, in their ambitions for their children, put them under intolerable obligations. We recall the story of a musician, told us by an insurance solicitor. This man, an only child, had taken out a $10,000 policy for the benefit of his elderly parents, after they had made sacrifices, over a long period of years, to pay for his musical education, so that there had been nothing left to provide for their declining years. He was a teacher of music—not especially gifted, not particularly successful. He might have selected some other profession if allowed to have his own choice. He was so burdened with the thought of what he owed his parents, that he renounced marriage. His entire income went for the support of his parents and the paying of insurance premiums, to assure them a measure of independence after his death. His life was not his own.

There is something cruel in this forcing our obligations, or ambitions, upon the present generation, from being their own. It is good, better, for parents not to make martyrs of themselves for

LIONS CLUB HEARS

MADISON MINISTER

Last Week's Meeting Attended by Thirty Members, Guests

Before thirty members and visitors at the Lions Club meeting and luncheon in the Villegiantini Inn Friday afternoon, Rev. Dr. D. T. Stephenson spoke on the subject, "What We Owe."

President Charles H. Huff conducted the meeting. Six of the visitors were from Westfield Lions, one from Union Lions and two others from Newark.

Dr. Stephenson, who substituted for Dr. William M. Gilbert, of Drew University, who could not attend, is pastor of the First Methodist Church of Madison. He said, "We are the debtors. We benefit from inventions in which we play no part. Although the majority of beings believe the world owes them a living, nevertheless it is their duty to repay for Dr. William M. Gilbert, of efforts of unselfish and untiring men and women." He depicted the Lions as a group working to benefit their community, and added we can pay for what we owe by supporting our schools, paying our taxes, attending church services, or, in short, making our community a better place to live in. Since the meeting of the Lion's Club this afternoon is the first of the month, there will be no speaking. Business matters will be discussed, and plans for the coming month outlined.

Boy-Murderer

WHAT is the world coming to is the question you well may ask, when you hear the story of 12-year-old Eddie Moran, who strangled "Mother" Howes, widow of the magician Howes, who was a great friend of Houdini, in her flat in the lower west side of New York. The murder was committed because she awakened and caught him in the act of stealing the mere pittance of $3. He is being held by the Children's Society of New York, and will probably be delivered to some institution until he is 21.

CALDWELL SCHOOL NOTES

RAMBLING AROUND
SPRINGFIELD

Some change has taken place in Springfield — somewhere, at this time, someone is calling a person by his wrong name, or else someone is failing to recognize a brother. What's the reason? The Springfield Police Department is attired in new uniforms — last week, they were delivered, and as a result, more policemen are keeping their shoes shined and brushing their hair than was ever done before.

The local Junior Council will hold a parade tonight. Of course, we can expect to see many children miss up on their regular going-to-bed hour, to watch the parade, but after all, it's only once a year, and there's no school tomorrow.

Wonder what was the expression on the countenances of Policeman Nelson A. Stiles, and Firemen John J. King, Thomas J. Hankins, Edward C. Townley, were last week when they made a thrilling rescue of three-year old Johnnie Cunningham of Toole's avenue, only to find him sleeping safe and sound on the floor of the room.

Last week, Bob Bunnell's team of directors, defeated Brother Dick's team, in the drive for securing the greatest number of shares in the Battle Hill Building and Loan Association. It is suggested that the winners fast for a week, so that they might enjoy the dinner, which must be furnished by the losers — of course, no hard feelings — its, all in the fun.

If anyone in Springfield or nearby communities should want to get an automobile driver's license of a registration card, or anything distributed by the Motor Vehicle Department of New Jersey — and does not wish to be inconvenienced by going to Elizabeth, or Summit, patronize your own town. The Lyons-Conley Company, located at 277 Morris avenue, 3 doors west of the Post Office, will be equipped to supply you with all your needs on and after November 15.

In answer to the inquiry why the SPRINGFIELD SUN appeared to be different last week, why so many persons could read the print without straining the eyes, it is the extreme ideal duty of this news-monger to inform you that the SPRINGFIELD SUN is printed with a new set of type, with more space between the lines, so that it is plainer and clearer to read.

How many persons were reminded of the drunken driver compass episode of several weeks ago, when they read the little cartoon, S. O. L. by Earl Bird, in the SUN, last week. The Associated Press which wrote the story, probably erred in mentioning Springfield, Miss., instead of Springfield, N. J. However, we know that someone, with a compass in his hand, did drive along Morris avenue, two weeks ago.

The sign guide placed in front of Detrick's Service Station at Seven Bridge Road and Morris avenue is something well done. It is attractive and many motorists who hitherto have been confused at coming to the junction will appreciate having the direction pointed out to them — if the State Highway Commission would only place some sign markers at the corner

MOUNTAIN AVENUE
ONE OF BUSIEST

Volume of Traffic Increases
5.25 Percent, Report

Mountain avenue, near the Rabbery Valley Railroad, proved to be one of the heaviest county road points in Union county, according to a report by County Engineer Roy C. Collins, Tuesday, in making public the results of a census taken at fourteen points in the county during the months of June, July, August and September.

The heaviest traffic location in the county is on Stuyvesant avenue, Union, at the Essex county line. The average increase of traffic for Mountain avenue over last year was 5.25 per cent.

Engineer Collins in giving his report, says:

In general, the traffic census showed that more and wider roads are necessary. It shows that the greatest flow of traffic through Union County is from the northeast to the southwest. It shows that the percentage of heavy commercial vehicles is rapidly increasing, which means that the eight-inch reinforced concrete pavement now considered practically standard will soon have to be increased to nine or ten-inch pavement in carrying out new construction; also that the three-inch asphalt pavement now on six-inch concrete base will soon have to be placed on seven-inch or eight-inch base in new work.

G. O. P. AUXILIARY
HAS GET-TOGETHER

Cards Played and Talks Made,
Refreshments Served

Fifty persons attended the card party and get-together social of the Women's Auxiliary of the Springfield Republican Club, held Thursday afternoon in the Lions' Club rooms in the Brookside Building.

Twenty-five prizes were donated by Springfield merchants. They were the American Stores Company, Slack's Confectionery, Huff Hardware Company, the Springfield Pharmacy, Springfield Department Store, Frank the Tailor, Colantone's Shoe Store, Schneider's Delicatessen, Pirano's Confectionery and Robert S. Bunnell. The Springfield Battery and Electric Store furnished a radio to provide music for the afternoon. Games played were whist, bridge, pinochle and bean bag.

Lewis P. MacIntyre and Frank S. Geiger, Republican candidates for the Township Committee, spoke.

Mrs. Helen Galland, captain of the Girl Scouts troop in Springfield, made an appeal for cooperation and support.

Mrs. G. M. Duttweiler, vice-president of the club, was in charge. Those assisting her were Mrs. Everett T. Spinning, Mrs. Mildred Widmer, Mrs. Montague Martyn, Mrs. DuBois, Mrs. Fred A. Brown, Mrs. Charles D. Horster, Mrs. C. H. Bibby, and Mrs. T. R. Douglas. Crullers and cider, made by Mr. Geiger, were served.

Several suggestions have been made that the auxiliary meet more frequently, but this far no definite plans have been made.

of Main street and Morris avenue and at Flemer avenue and Morris avenue, perhaps traffic would be hurried, since many jams are caused, on week-ends and at busy times of the day by motorists inquiring the direction either to Summit, Millburn, Plainfield, and Union.

OUR NATIONAL PARTIES

In a government such as ours it is necessary that there be at least two parties, to act as a check on each other.

In all we have had four political parties—Whigs, Federalists, Democrats and Republicans.

Each has represented, in its day, noble principles of government, which fact is oft overlooked by a critical public.

During Colonial times there were no political parties. It is true that the people were not of all the same opinion, some upheld the King in everything he did, and others were less vigilant of their sovereign and looked after their own freedom and principles. Even during the revolutionary days there were no organized political parties. The different sides merely assumed the old English party names. The Whigs were the fighting patriots and the Tories opposed the war.

When the Constitution was submitted there were some who vigorously opposed such a doctrine, but the vast majority upheld the truths and principles it contained, and thus was born the first two parties, the Federalists and anti-Federalists.

The Federal party was the very foundation rock of our government. It advocated strong central government.

Because it distrusted popular government the Federal party before many years had to turn the reins over to the Jeffersonian Republican party, to which was applied in derision the name Democrat, after the Democracy of France. Finally this name was officially adopted and has remained ever since.

Although the Democratic government advocated for the most part strict constitutionalism, it adapted itself to emergencies.

It was not until 1832 at the presidential election of Clay and Jackson that there was a decided split, and a rival of the Democrats, which led them a wary race for the next twenty years, came into power in the party of the Whigs. The Whigs disappeared in the '50s and the present Republican party came into being in Pittsburgh in 1856, and carried the following presidential election. It was the republican form of government of Lincoln and the abolitionists which was responsible for the overthrow of human slavery. Aside from the abolitionary question there was not much difference between those parties, for the tariff question, which is the main issue between the two parties today, had not as yet cropped up.

Experience has taught the Democrats to lean toward nationalism and the Republicans toward democracy, until at the present day there is just a narrow gap between both opponents as compared with the issues that Hamilton and
