"PEG O' MY HEART" TO BE SHOWN IN ST. MICHAEL'S AUDITORIUM OF UNION, NOVEMBER 1 AND 2, UNDER THE AUSPICES OF SOCIETY OF ST. JAMES' CATHOLIC CHURCH, SHOULD DRAW DOWN A CROWD OF ABOUT 1000 FOR TWO NIGHTS JUDGING BY THE WORK OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE WE'VE SEEN TO DATE.

The St. James Catholic Church will open its fall season of activity, Wednesday and Thursday nights, November 1-2, in St. Michael's Auditorium, Union, with a musical comedy, "Peg O' My Heart" and a musical revue. A large committee of men and women of the church are working to make the affair a grand success and indications point to capacity crowds on both nights. Proceeds will go toward the church's building fund.

A musical performance for the benefit of the children's home will be held in the Union auditorium, Sunday afternoon, October 29, at 2:30 o'clock.

The musical comedy is being presented by permission of the copyright owners. Edward DeDreux of Summit is director and coach. The cast includes the following: Margaret Lynch, Margaret Gunn, Elizabeth Borkowski, Pat Ginty, Ray Partington, Francis Bolger, William Bolger and Theodore Ganska and Helen Welter.

The revue, "A Night Club in America," is directed by a committee consisting of Bert A. Jones, chairman; William White and James A. Callahan. Dancers in the revue include: Luella Welter, Dixie Lynch, Margaret O'Neil, Luella Murtha, Olive Conway, Rose de Giovanna, Theresa Amberg, Margaret Staehle, Anna Samartino, Carmella Santinino, Agnes Gorman, Kathryn Gunn, Eleanor Shagerling and Margaret Quibby.

Specialty numbers will be performed by Mrs. Leroy Morrison, Luella Murtha, Dixie Lynch, Luella Welter, Kathryn Gunn, Oscar DeDreux, Josephine Lancia, Nancy Lancia, Jr., Al Boninger, Mickey Ford and Major John Balbach.

Edward Cardinal, Jr. will be master of ceremonies.

The following committees have been selected: publicity, Mrs. John E. Gunn, chairman; host and hostess, James A. Callahan, chairman; Mrs. Joseph Griffin, Mrs. A. C. Prinz, Mrs. H. J. McGeehan, Mrs. John Stevens, Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mrs. William C. Davis, Mrs. Otto Schlabbe, Mrs. John Heide, Mrs. Milton G. Lott, Mrs. James Tobin, Mrs. C. Clark, Mrs. Rose Callahan, Mrs. Josephine Carrig, Mrs. Peter Marquand, Mrs. Russell Silance, Mrs. Arthur Staehle, Mrs. Fred Hart, Mrs. Peter Boehle and Mrs. Margaret Cobb.

William C. Davis is chairman of the program committee and is being assisted by Mr. and Mrs. George Holz, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Jones, Joseph Smith, Gus Book, John Kelley, Edgar Morrison, Mrs. Samuel Nasser, Miss Christine Manderson, Miss Gertrude Meusch and Miss Helen Murzak.

The grill committee consists of Charles Banner, chairman, Mrs. Edward Cardinal, Mrs. Matthew Mente, Mrs. James Benn, Mrs. Delmar Tappin, Mrs. M. Bolger, Mrs. Harry Gleason, Mrs. G. Peabody, Mrs. J. Selon, Mrs. James Tansy and Mrs. Guy Stevens.

The stage committee is headed by William White and includes Mrs. Luella Callahan, Delmar Tappin, Mrs. Frank Cardinal, John Reice, George Welter, James Callahan, Jr., Vincent Plunkov and Max Kastenmeyer. John Samartino will have charge of program distribution and the property committee will consist of George Grimm, Mrs. G. Grimm and Anton Guttling.

Don Gibson's College Club Orchestra will play music for dancing after the show. The revue is being coached by Mrs. Catherine Monahan of Elizabeth, who also coached members in the east of the recent P. T. A. revue.

Removal of Brooker Dam Seen Vital in Flood Relief Issue

Water Policy Commission Is Checking Legal Action to Start Proceeding

Recommendation of the State Water Policy Commission to remove a dam in the Rahway River on property of Ewald Brooker of Milltown road was studied by Township Committee members Monday night as a means to cure the troublesome overflowing nuisance to residents living in the vicinity. The board has been getting joint action between municipalities along the Rahway River and county and state bodies to operate toward ending the flow of the stream which has caused considerable damage to local homes.

The State Water Commission in a letter pledged its assistance to township officials and advised it had been considering drainage plans along the Rahway River. It further reported that legality of removing the dam was being considered since it is located on private property. The matter has been referred to counsel, the state commissioner's letter stated.

Arthur H. Lanox, township engineer and W. R. Tracy, engineer of the Union County Park Commission, have already recommended that removal of the Brooker dam will help to remedy flood conditions.

Residents of Batusrol road in the extreme western portion of township sought action in transferring about 200 acres of Springfield land to be annexed to Summit. To maintain its present rating for tax purposes, the township may seek a slice of Summit territory.

The proposal was advanced by H. W. Patout of Batusrol road, who said the 200 acres in question border on the Summit line and are so situated as to be more readily accessible from Summit. He declared twelve families were inconvenienced. He declared their children had to walk three miles to Springfield schools, whereas Summit schools were but half a mile away.

The committee showed generally in favor of the transfer, but Commissioner Wilbur M. Selander said some restrictions should be made in the way of land from Summit to maintain Springfield's rating. The subject will be considered by a special committee to be named by Chairman Charles S. Cannon.

The committee adopted a resolution asking for a special emergency relief grant from the State for November.

Legion To Hold "Amateur Night"

Surprise Program Is Planned at Meeting Tonight

"Amateur Night" will be held tonight at a meeting of Continental Post, American Legion, in headquarters at 240 Morris avenue. John Polts, chairman of arrangements, has provided for a surprise to members. Refreshments will follow the social meeting.

Progress is being made on plans for the post's first annual Armistice Eve dance, November 10. Albert A. Sargo is in charge of details.

A full attendance is urged at the November 2 meeting at which time election of officers will be held. The principal contest is between Commander Herbert R. Day and George L. Frost, present adjutant, for the office of commander.

John J. King is general chairman of arrangements assisted by members of the club's entertainment committee. Already Speaker Charles A. Otto of the Assembly, candidate for Surrogate, and two Assemblymen have indicated their intention to be present. Peter H. Meisel, Springfield candidate for Freeholder; Thort B. Johnson, candidate for Township Committee, and Charles H. Hill, candidate for Tax Collector, will also speak.

Leo S. Ribby, president of the club, states that while this meeting is held under the organization's wing it is open to all and he expressed the wish of the club that every township voter be present so that there may be a better understanding of the issues involved in the present general election campaign.

Republicans Plan Rally November 3

Plans are being made by the Springfield Republican Club for an open meeting in the Town Hall auditorium on the night of November 3, at which time many Republican candidates, including local candidates, will attend.

BUS FUMES REMOVED, SCHOOL BOARD TOLD

Skaters Warned

With the roller skating craze in full swing in the town, police have issued warning against the dangerous practice of skating in paved streets where auto traffic is heavy. With the warning went an order to confiscate skates of children found skating in the street. The police took in half a dozen pairs over the weekend. To reclaim these, children must be accompanied by their parents or guardians to headquarters. Skates are permitted only on sidewalks.

Pupils complained of the odors and air being late last week investigated. A. E. Hodgson told the board the transit company had installed a ventilator unit on one of the vehicles which will clear the air every four minutes. "As soon as possible," he informed the board, P. S. will install similar devices on the other two buses.

Miss Florence Gaudinier, school nurse, has tested the bus. It was reported, and found the condition to be corrected. Pupils this week are said to be satisfied with the improvement.

Miss Henrietta Schaffernoth of Springfield was engaged as a teacher in the school system. Her appointment completes the quota of twenty-four teachers, equal to that of last year. One teacher resigned at the close of the school year and seeking to economize, the position was never filled. With more classes and added enrollment, it was necessary to appoint an extra teacher.

The board went on record as favoring the consolidation of a vocational High School to accommodate smaller municipalities in Union County unable to operate a secondary school of their own. The movement has been advancing for some time and may develop into tangible form after other school authorities consider its advantages.

Hodgson Reports P. S. Co. Has Equipped Ventilator Unit in One of Machines

TO INSTALL SIMILAR DEVICE IN ALL BUSES

The Board of Education Tuesday night heard a report from supervising Principal Fred J. Hodgson that the Public Service Co., which transports Springfield pupils to Reseda Park High School, had taken action toward eradicating a complaint of pupils against excess exhaust fumes on its buses.

Springfield Boys Get Honor Rating

Fine Records at M. I. T. For Two Local Youths

Two Springfield youths enrolled at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass., are listed in the Dean's Report of Undergraduates of High Scholastic Standing. They are: Frank Lincoln Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Phillips, who is ranked as among first grade students of second honor rank. He is a graduate of Summit High School.

Russell William Bandomer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Bandomer, is among the first grade students of third honor rank. He is a graduate of Westfield High School.

The report indicates that the "lean years" are more productive of high scholarship and intellectual wealth than the proverbial "years of plenty."

"Freeholder Slate Balanced" - Collins

A remarkably well-balanced group of candidates for Freeholder comprise the Republican slate for the new nine-man board that will be presented to the voters at the coming general election. Sheriff C. Wesley Collins, of Westfield, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, points out in a statement made public recently.

The statement follows:

"From a party standpoint, the Republican voters of the county are to be congratulated on having chosen nine men whose qualifications are so high, and whose viewpoints, place of residence and interests are so sufficiently diversified to insure that every element of the county will be adequately cared for in their important task of conducting the affairs of the county government.

"It was natural that, with a change in the form of the county governing body, an unusually large number of candidates for the Freeholder positions should offer themselves in the primaries. Each had his individual appeal and his individual group backing, and some party leaders doubted the outcome. It was difficult for the average voter to know the qualifications of the candidates, and with county-wide voting in effect for the freeholder nominations for the first time, it was felt inevitable that many worthy candidates would be overlooked. There was some confusion, too, over the fact that we were selecting candidates for three-year, two-year and one-year terms.

"The primaries resulted, however, in the selection of office men of whom any party organization can be proud, who by their presence on the ballot vindicate the principle of the open primary.

"The candidates represent a geographical balance which is ideal. Four are from Elizabeth, two are from Rahway, and one each from Plainfield, Westfield and Springfield. Two of the candidates are members of the present twenty-four man board, and therefore carry over to the new group the consecutive experience which is needed in the management of any large enterprise. Three are members of former boards of freeholders, and similarly carry the backing of experience in actual governmental affairs. Four are newcomers in the field of county government, and may be expected to bring a fresh viewpoint and new ideas into the board's membership."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By William Bruckart

Washington—Every so often in the National Capital, there comes a bill, a period in which things seem to settle down. Sometimes it lasts only a few days, and again it has gone a week or longer. It has happened even under the "new deal." This is allowed, as it has been consistently heretofore by those bills, during which a lot of thoughts crystallize, and many persons gain a different perspective, if not a true one, at least a changed one.

Senator Harrison of Mississippi, one of the Democratic wheel horses, felt the situation the other day when he announced boldly and as though no one else had noted the phenomenon that "we must do something more than we have been doing." Senator Harrison's weather eye was on the congressional elections of next fall, but in the meantime throughout the government, where somewhat less attention was paid to pure politics, there were expressions in the last few days of similar import. Among that cynical lot of observers, variously described newspaper correspondents, the press, journalists, etc., the result of the sag of the last ten days was a conviction that some of the high-powered recovery machinery had been seized with sleeping sickness or pernicious anemia.

The point I am seeking to develop is that both the national recovery administration and the agricultural adjustment administration appear to have passed into that stage, from which we can look back and see the crest of the wave. The public works administration is just getting up steam, and the federal relief administration has its machinery whirling away in anticipation of the hardest winter from the standpoint of relief that the depression has brought. I have not seen the signs or portents yet that will tell whether the public works job is going to be successful, but as to General Johnson's NRA and Secretary Wallace's AAA, I have gathered much opinion from keen students to the effect that if they add much more to the recovery movement it will have to come from the adoption of new tactics.

During the sag, it seemed all at once that NRA could no longer muster the enthusiasm within its own corps to shout about its progress. It apparently had struck a snag. The reaction from the fall was immediate. When the bulletin ceased, the momentum of the effect through the country was checked.

As in the AAA, the period of comparative quiet in government activities resulted in an examination of how many directions Secretary Wallace's corps had gone all at the same time. This recent lack of continuity in policy is looked upon among the observers as having begun almost with the creation of the adjustment administration, but there was plenty of spirit and hope and health to keep all of the lines moving some months. Now, the consensus is that some of the lines will have to be abandoned because they have been pulling in opposite directions.

In attempting to depict the situation as it exists at this time, I intend no criticism. On the contrary, I believe I should reverse the words of the noble Roman and say that "I came to praise Caesar and not to bury him." For there is no doubt and can be no doubt that NRA has done a deal of good in awakening the country. It is equally apparent that the agricultural administration has done some good. It has heurtened thousands of farmers by providing some assistance, though I believe it is a sound statement to say that it has not done anything like as much as was expected.

Whether one views NRA in perspective, as the right congress remains a fact that it is plain to see. Authorities agree that it had to be something of the sort of the NRA. I have heard much discussion of the principle of NRA in the recent weeks, since it has appeared to be on the decline, and it was noteworthy that none of the authorities were in disagreement as to the necessity for something, some action, that would "take the people's minds off of themselves." If NRA has caused business men to make even a small start towards increasing their operations, if it has caused employers to add the million or million and a half workers to the pay rolls that is claimed for it, or if it has done any of the various things about which so much propaganda was spread, then it ought to be admitted that NRA has made a contribution towards recovery. But it does appear to most observers here that its value is waning.

One of the reasons why NRA has reached the stage in which we now find it, is because of congressional short-sightedness. Perhaps congress ought not be blamed for all of it either, because it is just possible that advisers of the President did not use their heads. At any rate, the national recovery act was so drawn that the administration could club business with the code provisions and force the "partnership" with the government, but omitted supplying the ad-

President Calls on Labor and Capital to Pull Together—Progress of National Recovery—Arias Presents the Complaints of Panama.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

STANDING before the late memorial to Samuel Gompers in Washington which he helped to dedicate, President Roosevelt may well have wished that that wise, resourceful and moderate leader of organized labor were alive today to help in the battle for national recovery. During the World War Gompers aided tremendously in bringing the workers and employers of the United States together to "pull in harness," and the President in his address called on them to get together again in the present emergency.

At the President's side stood William Green, who succeeded Mr. Gompers as president of the American Federation of Labor and who is doing his best to carry out the policies of his predecessor. Mr. Green turned to Mr. Roosevelt and said: "I tender the assurance of the devotion and loyalty of the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor to you, the Chief Executive of our nation, and to the United States."

In his address the President said: "In the fields of organized labor there are problems just as there were for the spring of 1917—questions of jurisdiction which have to be settled quietly and effectively in order to prevent the slowing up of the general program. There are the perfectly natural problems of selfish individuals who seek personal gain by running counter to the best judgment of sound leadership. There are hotheads who think that results can be obtained by noise or violence; there are insidious voices seeking to justify methods or principles which are wholly foreign to the American form of democratic government."

"On the part of employers there are some who shudder at anything new. There are some, a decreasing number, I believe, who think in terms of dollars and cents instead of in terms of human lives; there are some who themselves would prefer government by a privileged class instead of by majority rule.

"But it is clear that the sum of the objections on both sides cuts a very small figure in the total of employers and employees alike who are going along wholeheartedly in the war against depression."

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, appeared before the convention of the American Federation of Labor and ardently urged the union men to cease their strikes, to put full faith in the NRA and to enter into real partnership with industry and the government. He strenuously defended the recovery program.

FROM the newspapers and also from letters the President has been brought to a realization of the huge salaries paid to stars of the movie world and to certain of the moving picture directors. He called General Johnson on the telephone and directed him to take the matter up, find out whether these salaries are "topsy-turvy" and if so, whether they should be done to level them down. Johnson turned the inquiry over to Sof A. Rosenblat, NRA movie administrator. Dispatches received from Hollywood said the film industry was nervous over the matter, fearing the investigation would reveal secrets concerning salaries that have been kept hidden during the depression.

SO GREAT has become the pressure on senators and congressmen to obtain jobs for their friends on the Tennessee valley project that Dr. Arthur Morgan, chairman of the TVA, has announced that every employee, even the common laborers, will be selected by civil service tests. The examinations, he said, would be along the same lines as those given prospective Navy department employees.

"I really do not blame members of congress for the situation," he explained. "There are so many people desperately in need of work that the senators and representatives themselves are hard-pressed."

Senator Morgan said that administrative costs of the project would be reduced materially through direct civil service action, which would release for other work a large staff that had to be maintained to care for more than 1,000 daily applications for jobs. "First of all," Senator Morgan remarked, "few persons know that we are out of politics by law."

"Secondly, if the government goes in to business it has got to go into it in a businesslike way."

He pointed out that stories of the ambitious public-works program for the Tennessee valley had attracted a floating population from all parts of the country, imposing a heavy burden on already harassed communities. He added that Tennessee val-

Zone privileges to compete unfairly with native business on the Isthmus. The zone, for instance, pays no duties on goods imported from the United States, and Panama does. This condition has become especially irksome since the legalization of beer in the Canal Zone commissaries and the army and navy posts established a string of beer gardens which undercut the native places and capture much of the zone payrolls.

A similar situation exists with other products than beer. Panamanians maintain. They point to the sale of such luxuries as Doulton china and silk as a violation of the original treaty of 1903 with the United States in which it was agreed that only necessities for American employees would be imported and sold by the Canal zone.

Another matter brought up by President Arias is the question of the large number of West Indians imported to the Canal Zone for work by the United States government and who have since been discharged because of economy and have gone over to the cities and towns of Panama. They are without work and are being taken care of by the Panamanian government. Senator Arias wants the government to appropriate funds to send these people back home, and this has already been accomplished by Gen. Julian L. Scheley of the zone.

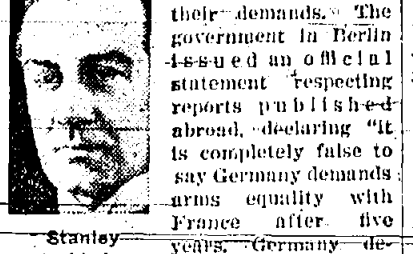

CONTINUING the trend toward government price-fixing, the President has created a new agency whose function will be to obtain and maintain higher prices for commodities. It is called the Commodity Credit Corporation, has an initial capital of $9,000,000 subscribed by the government, and will lend funds of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to producers which the RFC cannot do legally.

The first undertaking of the new agency will be to establish and maintain a price of between 10 and 15 cents a pound on cotton through loans of government funds to cotton farmers to enable them to hold this year's crop on the farms for higher prices. Other commodities, not yet announced, will be taken in hand later. The loans to producers are to be secured by the commodities.

SENATOR JAMES J. DAVIS of Pennsylvania, director general of the Loyal Order of Moose, is at last freed of charges of violating the federal lottery law in connection with the charity balls, conducted by the order. A jury in New York found Davis and Theodore G. Miller of America, 41, not guilty after a trial lasting nearly four weeks.

WITH Florida now on the list, 33 states have agreed to repeal the Eighteenth amendment, and only three more states are needed to put an end to national prohibition. Florida went wet by a vote of approximately 4 to 1.

HUPP for some success in the disarmament conference was received through it was still rather faint. The hope was based on the fact that both Germany and France were becoming more specific in their demands. The government in Berlin issued an official statement respecting reports published abroad, declaring "it is completely false to say Germany demands arms equality with France after five years."

years, Germany demands a five years' moratorium on the disarmament of other countries. As to weapons for training purposes, all disarmament must now cease. But Germany does not demand the same number of weapons as others possess."

France, represented by Premier Daladier, replied to the German statements by repeating his plan for a four year trial period during which all armies would be bound not to augment armaments, followed by destruction of offensive weapons. Daladier said: "No one contests Germany's right to live the life of a great power. No one thinks of humiliating Germany."

The British were growing impatient over the deadlock, and Stanley Baldwin, first president of the council and probably the country's foremost statesman, uttered a stern warning in an address at Birmingham.

"When I speak of a disarmament convention," he said, "I do not mean disarmament on the part of this country and not on the part of any other. I mean a limitation of armaments that is a real limitation."

"If a convention is signed, the nation which breaks it will have no friend in this civilized world."

CHANCELLOR HITTLE'S government has put an end to the freedom of the press in Germany. A new law, drafted by Minister of Propaganda Goebbels, declares editors and members of editorial staffs of newspapers, periodicals and news agencies must uphold unreservedly the rights of the present regime.

It holds newspapers no longer are to be organs of free opinions, but must be classed with the radio, theaters and schools as public institutions spiritually influencing the nation. The decree establishing the first six sections of the law was followed by one prescribing the death penalty, or, alternatively, fifteen years imprisonment for anyone who imports or disseminates periodicals classed as treasonable.

THE United States and eight other nations have protested to the German government because of attacks on their nationals by Nazis who never are punished for the assaults. Apologies from Berlin are declared insufficient. Thirty Americans have been assaulted since April 12, usually because they did not salute the Nazi flag.

OF SUPREME importance to Japan is the question of improving its relations with the United States, according to Viscount Kikujiro Ishii, who returned to Tokyo from the economic conference in London. The viscount, who formerly was ambassador to Washington, declared he was shocked to find his people talking of war with the United States. "To think of such a thing," he said, "is not only ridiculous but tragic."

Ishii advocated an arbitration pact between the United States and Japan. He said he is convinced there is ample ground at present for such an agreement, which would guarantee peace at a time when militarists and jingoists are making the best of the war fear to advance their own ends.

Foreign Minister Hirota, it is believed, favors such a pact with America. But War Minister Sachio Araki indicated he would put a stop to all such peace moves and that the army would force the cabinet to pursue an isolation policy.

PUBLICATION in Moscow of charges that Japan is plotting to seize the Russian-controlled Chinese Eastern railroad in Manchuria and of documents allegedly supporting the accusations brought relations between Japan and Russia to the breaking point. The Japanese deny the tale in toto and are very angry, but observers in Tokyo do not believe the government is ready to go to war just yet. An armed conflict with the Soviet union may come before long, however, and the prospect is worrying the League of Nations leaders in Geneva.

SIX Latin American republics have signed at Rio de Janeiro a pact outlawing aggressive war, forbidding forcible acquisition of territory and setting up machinery for conciliation, complementing the Kellogg-Briand pact. The signatory nations are Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Mexico, Uruguay and Paraguay.

BEAUTY TALKS

By MARJORIE DUNCAN

TO MAKE SPINE FLEXIBLE

A STIFF spine brings with it a multitude of evils. It hampers the functioning of the vital organs. It robs the step of its spring. It makes people look prematurely old.

Here are a few simple hints to help you limber up—make your spine more flexible, your body more supple and graceful. Don't go about it too strenuously. Take it easy at first. If you are physically able, and have the time, by all means go in for some sport suited to your age and general condition. But you can do all that is necessary in the privacy of your home.

Here is an effective spine limberer: When you are wearing no restrictive clothing, stand with your feet a few inches apart, soles flat on the floor. Imagine your soles positively glued to the floor. Leave all the rest of the body limp, ready to sway this way and that on the supporting soles. Lean over, letting the head and arms hang limp, fingers touching the floor as nearly as possible. Try to undulate the spine, try to wiggle it in waves so there will not be a single vertebra which has not felt the motion. Sway the limp body in every direction. Then stand erect and sway the body forward, backward, and to each side. Wriggle shoulders, loosely, up and down. If you find the exercise monotonous, turn on the radio and do it to music. It is more enjoyable then.

If your spine curves in too much at the waist line, try to limber that particular section. It is a condition called lordosis and is the result of tense, drawn nerves. Constant wearing of high-heeled shoes will cause it. The tense nerves pull the spine in and this automatically pushes the abdomen forward in an ugly curve. Another ugly curve is formed across the back below the waistline. In the case of the too fat woman, the fat and the ugly curve compound themselves to effect that is ludicrous. These ugly lines may be corrected by the spine limbering exercises. The fat woman should wear medium heels or her daily walk will counteract the good effect of her daily spine exercise.

When sitting, make sure that you sit well back in the chair, thighs filling the seat of the chair, back erect but not entirely straight and not rigid, feet flat on the floor, shoulders back, not lapsed upward, head up and back, chin horizontal. Pull up—grow tall. Hold your head as though you were proud of something, and well you may be if your posture is correct and graceful.

When standing, remember head up, chest up, shoulders back, not up, head held high, toes pointing straight ahead, hands and arms relaxed at the sides.

AN AGE OF BEAUTY

IT'S an age of youth we're living in. And beauty is measured first in terms of good grooming and second in youthfulness. Because firm flesh is the rightful heritage of the "young ones"—it is also becoming to all ages. A firm, flowing, graceful line—that's youth and beauty—both. Even adolescents can boast it. Women, especially. A shaking, wriggling little bulge here and there that boldly "tells the world" "here I am to spoil youth's firmness" is no longer tolerated. Not by Miss Twenty. Not by Mrs. Sixty. Not by a far shot.

Corsets have made a come-back. But they aren't grandmother's kind. Nor mother's variety. If these were in vogue "before your time" you have only to look at the family album to see the effect. Steaks, many of them—stiff faces—they straggled like the figure into something that looked more like a young girl's than less like a human, feminine figure.

Compare those bulging, heavy muscled-up with the slender, graceful figure. Fashion is wise—and the older ladies who do well with a bit of soft padding, maintain a refinement here, a clever cut there, a piece of elastic and you have a foundation garment that is weighty, not at all cumbersome, no interference with breathing nor the proper functioning of the entire system. And the way these little sentries mold the figure is nothing short of magic. They disguise the flabby bulges, they give the figure a shapely, flowing line that speaks of youthful firmness. Best of all, they are priced so that every woman's purse can afford one.

It's all for those little gables, gables and such—the new, light, clever kind. Not that I advocate covering bulges. Far be that from me. Those of you who have followed this column closely know that I am a stickler for exercise. More power to the young girl and young woman whose figure naturally is firm, bumpy-less and graceful. By all means exercise yourself back to youthful firmness. And while you are doing it—enl in an ally in the form of the new little corsets.

Correct sitting posture is as important to health and beauty as correct standing posture. And poor sitting posture can cause constipation, indigestion, biliousness, muscle, headaches, poor appetite, sluggish liver and dozens of similar evils. Stand! and sit erect and the muscles of the abdomen are in their proper positions and the digestive organs—stomach, liver, intestines—are receiving their requisite blood supply. Slouch and this circulation is impeded.

Unwise to Break Faith With Child

Promises and rewards are two closely allied measures made use of by parents to stimulate and encourage their children in good conduct and in their schooling or chosen work during undergraduate days. Used wisely, they are potent factors in securing the desired ends and reactions. It sometimes happens, however, that promises are forgotten. The child either may not get what he has worked to attain or the promise may have been given so long before its object was attained, that it has slipped the memory of the parent although it has remained a vivid factor in the child's application and endeavors. Not only is a child discouraged by such forgetfulness, but worse than this, he loses faith in his parent. He (or she) does not keep his word.

The child may take a fuss about it. "It is the parent often gets annoyed and states that now, anyway, the child cannot get the reward—whatever it was, for it is forfeit by the behavior. In reality the child has justice on his side, for a forgotten promise is none the less binding when once it has been made, even though memory has grown dim. If the child is silent, the lasting effect of loss of faith in a parent's word is even worse. The child can be promised anything thereafter and it will fall on unheeding and disbelieving ears. Not only is the parent's word discredited, but the word of all persons, since parents typify the best, to their offspring."

Attaining an unearned reward is another danger to be shunned. When parents make promises dependent upon some special action or attainments and then give the reward without regard to success of the child in whatever it is offered for, the parents lose their grip on the child.

Reciprocity is absolutely essential when there are promises of awards. The child must be kept faith with. The promise must be remembered. It cannot be so lightly given or regarded that it becomes ineffectual to the person making it. Parents must beware of how they make promises, but having made them, they must stand. So essential is this that no reward should be given unless it has been earned. The success of a child in later years may rest on his ability to fulfill conditions in his youth. He gets to be a spoiled child, otherwise, and one who has little respect for laws when he is an adult.

Old Timers Showed 'Em An eight-oared shell of Harvard garrison, who rowed for their alma mater 50 years ago, recently made its way down the Charles river, we learn from the Winged Foot. As one old-timer in the boat put it: "We showed the undergraduates how we used to win back in the early '80s, when technique was just as important as it is now."

Too Much "Party" Last Night Too Much Food, Late Hours, Smoky Atmosphere

YET—This Morning No "Acid Headache"—No Upset Stomach

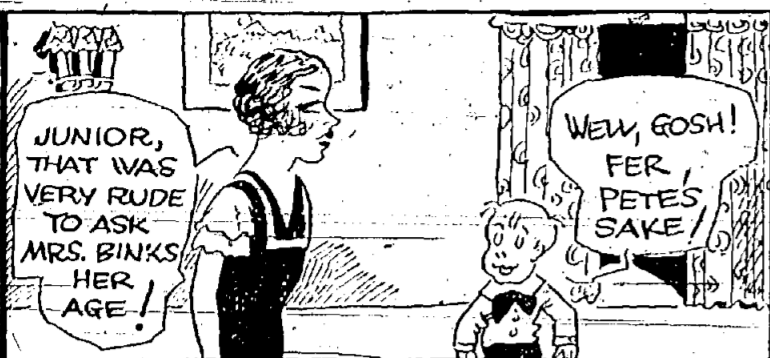

Scientists say this is the QUICK-EST, SUREST and EASIEST way to combat FEELING THE EFFECTS of over-indulgence—the most powerful acid neutralizer known to science. Just do this: TAKE—2 tablets of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water BEFORE bed. In the morning take 2 more tablets with the juice of a WHOLE ORANGE. That's all! Tomorrow you'll feel great!

Or take the equivalent amount of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in liquid form, or the new, marvellously convenient tablets. Be sure it's PHILLIPS'... the kind doctors endorse.

IMPROVED UNIFORM-INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for October 22

PAUL IN ASIA MINOR

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13:1-5, 13-15; 14:18-21

GOLDEN TEXT—And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. Mark 16:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Far Away Friends Near About Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Ship-Save-Sail. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Send Missionaries Abroad? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Missionary Obligation.

1. The Beginning of Foreign Missions (v. 1-5).

This marks the beginning of foreign missions as the deliberately planned enterprise of the church.

1. The gifts of the church at Antioch (v. 1). Young as was Antioch, the new religious center, she had prophets and teachers. When Christ ascended on high, he gave gifts to men for the purpose of perfecting the saints unto the work of the ministry (Eph. 4:1-12). The church does not exist for itself, but for service to others.

2. First missionaries sent forth (v. 2-3). Barnabas and Saul were the first foreign missionaries. They went forth by the hands of the church at the command of the Spirit. The work of evangelizing the world was laid so heavily upon these men that they refrained from eating in order to seek the will of God in prayer. They were directed to send forth those whom the Spirit called, teaching us that the real call for service comes from the Spirit. The Spirit called and the very best men were sent from the church at Antioch. Before sending forth the missionaries, there was a season of prayer before laying hands upon them, indicating that ordination has its proper place in sending forth missionaries.

3. Preaching the Word of God in Cyprus (v. 4, 5). Because the gospel is "good news," it is natural for the missionary to go among his acquaintances. Christ commanded the one out of whom a demon had been cast to go to his own house and tell what great things the Lord had done for him (Luke 8:39).

4. Withstood by Elymas, the sorcerer (v. 9-12). Elymas, under the influence of Satan, sought to turn the mind of Sergius Paulus from the Word of God; and to hinder the gospel as it entered upon its career of conversion of the heathen, Paul denounced him as full of guile and villainy.

11. Paul and Barnabas at Antioch in Pisidia (v. 13-16). From Cyprus Paul and Barnabas, with John Mark, went northward to Perga. Here, for some reason, Mark parted company with the missionaries, and returned home. We are not told as to why he went back, but it is a pleasure to know that he later re-joined his friends. Before Paul's death, he spoke favorably of Mark, declaring that he had found him profitable unto the ministry. (II Tim. 4:11). Reaching Antioch in Pisidia they entered a synagogue on the Sabbath day. Though Paul was now a missionary to the Gentiles, he did not depart from his custom—to go to the Jew first.

111. Paul and Barnabas Preaching the Gospel in Lystra (Acts 14:1-28).

1. At Iconium (v. 1-7). Their experience here was much the same as at Antioch. They preached in the synagogue, causing a multitude of Jews and Gentiles to believe. The unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles to the most bitter persecution.

2. The attempt to worship Paul and Barnabas as gods (v. 8-18). To escape the united assault of the Jews and Gentiles, they fled to Lystra and Derbe, where they preached the gospel. The healing of the lame man occasioned new difficulty. This man was a confirmed cripple, having never walked. On hearing Paul preach, he was born in his heart (Rom. 10:17). When Paul perceived that he trusted Christ, he called with a loud voice so that all could hear for the man to stand upright. The cure was instantaneous for he leaped and walked. This miracle was so notable that the very thing which should have been a help now became a hindrance. The people sought to worship the missionaries.

3. The stoning of Paul (v. 19, 20). Wicked Jews from Antioch and Iconium pursued Paul with such relentless hate that they stirred up the people at this place, who had been willing to worship the missionaries, to stone them. This shows that satanic worship can soon be transformed into satanic hate. They not only stoned Paul, but dragged him out of the city for dead. God raised him up, and with undaunted courage, Paul pressed on with his duties as a missionary bearing the good news to the lost.

The Name Jesus. If the name Jesus were left out of our prayers, our hymns, and our worship, we would mourn as if the room were empty from the chock of mourners, the sun were blotted from the heavens, and the sweetest note stricken from the psalm of life.

Proof of Discipline. In his sufferings the Christian is often tempted to think himself forgotten. But his afflictions are the clearest proofs that he is an object of God's fatherly discipline.

Life's Span Shortened by White House Cares?

Is the life span of our Presidents growing less? Our ablest mathematician says that it is, after he had made some lightning calculations; so let us take a look at his figures.

The average age of our first ten Presidents at the time of their death averaged a little more than seventy-seven years. Then ten Presidents taken from the center of the list, beginning with Harrison and ending with Hayes, give us an average of slightly over sixty-seven years. Now, we take the last ten deceased rulers and we find that their average amounts to around sixty-four years. In this list, our demagogic mathematician did not take into consideration any of the Presidents that met with violent death.

Our figure-wizard says that he compared the ages of ten business men of the same period as our first Presidents and found that their average, while ten men of recent years, while ten men of recent years averaged around seventy years. These men were all selected at random (and he failed to tell us their names).

These figures may mean little or much, but at any rate they are most interesting. It is a fact that being the head of our nation is too much strain; that the practice of the present President in selecting his aids, the learned men of the country's universities is certainly worth watching. They cannot do his worrying but they can lift a big load from his shoulders.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Healthy Appetite. The Household By Lydia Le Baron Walker

A striped paper makes a ceiling appear higher than it really is and is excellent to use in low-studded rooms.

THE selection of wall paper best suited to the rooms of a dwelling is not a matter to be given slight consideration. The design is of major importance, no less than the color. The exposure of any specific room is a guide to color for it. The size and shape of the room is a guide to correct choice of pattern. The exposure of a room signifies its position in relation to the points of the compass. A room in the north part of a house is said to have a northern exposure. One in the southwest part of the house, that is one with windows on south and west so that light comes from both sides, is said to have a southwest exposure, etc. Because light from the north is cold, it should influence the selection of paper for a room with windows on the north side, which let in no sunlight, or practically none.

Select Paper That Will Reflect the Light. According to the exposure of the room in connection with the amount of sunlight it gets, is it cold or warm in its natural lighting? It should have wall treatment to counterbalance either a lack of sunlight or a flood of it. These are the reasons why a north, northeast, or northwest room should have a warm paper, while a south, southeast, or southwest room does not require it. The most pronounced warm colors are yellow, suggesting sun and red suggesting fire. But, since red is an irritating and irritating color, in proportion to its intensity, it has to be handled with care when used for decorative purposes. Yellow, on the other hand, is stimulating rather than irritating and shades, tints, and tones of it can be successfully employed on walls.

Proportions of Room. It is not the exposure, but the size and shape of a room as mentioned before, which determine the style of design or pattern to have in a paper. The reasons for this are geometric. They have to do with counterbalancing of high or low ceilings and the proportions of wall and floor space. The pattern of a wall paper can subtly make a room appear high or low, studded, tall, larger or smaller than it actually is.

A wall paper with stripes makes a ceiling seem to be higher because of the upright lines which tend to make the vision follow their perpendicular extension. A wall paper with a pattern which tends to make the eye follow lines across a wall, lowers the apparent height of a ceiling. This is not so badly done as in the instance of striped paper but there are many wall papers in which the repetition of the design is so cleverly planned that the eye follows it along horizontal lines.

The two points considered today, color and design in their broad application, are of primary importance. They are of first consideration. ©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

The Fear of Death By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The three major fears are classified as death, poverty and disease. The fear of death, while not the most important or most serious, is perhaps the most common. The fear of poverty and disease seems to attack those in more mature life, while the fear of death manifests itself to persons of almost all ages. While the loss of a person from a psychological point of view, the fear of death is the most terrible. Persons shudder at the thought of it and a superstition still clings to many circumstances connected with the experience. Some persons still believe it is a sign of approaching death for one to see in a mirror the form of a dead person; or to pass by a group of caskets in a funeral procession is an ill omen.

Much of this fear would doubtless be dispelled if we could only understand just what does happen in the event of death. It is not a case in which, "Who knows what dreams may come," or a condition of semi-material existence afterward. Death is the most natural experience in the world. Just what happens in all material life, occurs in the physical, when the tissue breaks down. Death occurs when the body ceases to function. When the mind, or soul, passes on, the body is of no more value than its component parts of it. Then, whether it be of which parts, when someone is dying and dies, is not even worth a dollar, only 98 cents. Strange that we should exalt the body when it is of so little value. There is a true value upon the body and one of the causes for fear of death will have been removed.

The fear of death will also be dispelled if we think of it more as a transition than a finality. Death is only the passing of the personality from one state of existence into another. It does not mark the end of things. In truth it is the beginning of a larger and more beautiful life. Immortality is being proved true today, not only by teachers of religion; but, the latest discoveries in the field of science attest the reality of an immortal world. Death cannot destroy those things we have any more than it can destroy into itself. "Love is stronger than death," said the wise man of long ago.

A wonderful journey into a world of spiritual realities seems as though it might be heartily welcomed for those whose race is run. "Why fear?" ©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

Martyrs of Medicine Make Up a Long Roll

Not All Great Heroes Made on Battlefield.

Washington.—Three scientists in the medical forces seeking to solve the mystery of sleeping sickness have submitted to bites from mosquitoes which previously had bitten victims of this exotic malady. Their purpose is to determine whether insects carry the infection. Of the particular sort of peril to which these unknown men are subjecting themselves at St. Louis, where sleeping sickness has caused about ninety deaths, the classic modern examples are those of Father Damien, who went among the lepers, and the doctors who offered themselves for the experiments in Cuba to find a way to control yellow fever.

No heroic oath was involved, no solemn obligation. The army had released Cuba from Weylerism and was willing it to set up as a republic. Yellow fever broke out. Surgeon General Sternburg, U. S. A., ordered a commission of American officers to investigate. Dr. Walter Reed, major in the medical corps, headed it; other commissioned members were Dr. James Carroll, years before a private; Dr. Jesse William Lazear, and a Cuban, Dr. Aristide Agramonte. Doctor Lazear, a Baltimorean, died from the test.

Yellow Fever Fight. As early as 1818, Dr. J. C. Nutt of Tulane university stated the hypothesis that yellow fever was transmitted by an insect. In 1851 Dr. Carlos Finlay of Havana accused specifically the mosquito, but the guilt of the mosquito had not been proved. First to submit to bites in the army investigation was Doctor Carroll. He was severely stricken with yellow fever, but recovered.

Doctor Lazear applied to himself the mosquito that had infected Doctor Carroll. No results. One day a mosquito bit on his hand. He let it do its work. Five days later he was seized with yellow fever. It raged through his system and in ten days he was dead. Reed had been to Washington to report and returned after this death to obtain further confirmation that the mosquito, stegomyia fasciata was the transmission agent. Privates John J. Moran and John R. Kissinger volunteered. They had enlisted to fight for the Stars and Stripes; now the "black vomit" was attacking their comrades and had killed Doctor Lazear. Said Major Reed: "Gentlemen, I salute you."

They were isolated. Kissinger was bitten by five mosquitoes and developed a typical case of yellow fever. He recovered. Moran and others went through the same ordeal; all survived. From Cuba to Panama.

What the commission and its volunteer subjects had learned fulfilled the task assigned. As a result of measures enforced thereafter throughout Cuba by Gen. Leonard Wood and Maj. William Gorgas, not a single case appeared there in 1902. Gorgas took the knowledge gained to Panama, and while the canal was being constructed, banished the age-long tropic agony and left the Canal Zone a health resort. The frightful epidemics which had decimated cities became things of the past.

Exploration, struggles for liberty, religious persecution, industrial processes, aviation developments and the practice of healing, all have had martyrs, but the martyrs of medical experiment are of another category. In the 1798 epidemic of yellow fever in New York sixteen out of the forty physicians then listed lost their lives, "martyrs to their calling." It was in the course of practice. The three volunteers in the sleeping sickness experiment, outside the line of professional duty, are taking a double risk. If they get the disease, they can expect no relief—there is no known cure.

Building Boom Started

FIGURES show that the long awaited residential construction boom is beginning to make itself felt. During the first half of August, construction of this type, as reported to F. W. Judge Corporation, totaled $10,876,000 as against $8,812,200 for the same period last year, a gain of 23 per cent. This marked the fourth consecutive month in which advances were made over the comparable months in 1932.

For a number of years there has been a definite home shortage in America—for at least three of those years building was "virtually at a standstill" and existing structures were subjected to more than usual depreciation, because of inattention to needed repairs. This wasn't due to lack of desire. It was due principally to lack of funds in thousands of families, and to a psychology of fear that prevented others, having ample funds, from spending. The first class is returning to its jobs now and regular pay envelopes are brought home on Saturday nights. The second is discovering that rising prices will shortly make it impossible to obtain new buildings or to improve old ones at bargain prices. And both classes are going into the market for better living quarters. Still another beneficial influence is the Home Owners Loan Corporation, which makes possible home financing that could not otherwise be obtained.

Yes, there's every indication that we're on the verge of a major building revival—that will be particularly striking in the residential field. All who can should aid the relief program by taking advantage of low prices for land and material.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor of the SUN:
 Why you use this letter to give credit to my Springfield Police?

On Wednesday of last week my son, George Arnold, had his bicycle stolen from the school rack and reported it to the police. At once they got on the job, hunting for the person who took it. On Friday, Patrolman Sarge called at the house and took my son with him, scouring the neighboring towns trying to find it with no success. Then on Monday the police called again, this time bringing the bicycle back with them in less than an hour after locating it in a section of Newark.

Patrolman Sarge showed his colors as he was determined he was going to find the bicycle and he did. I cannot give the officers enough credit for the way they worked, trying all in their power to locate same.

Has 64 Bull Rings

In Portugal there are 64 bull rings where bullfighting is carried out in Portuguese style, which differs chiefly from Spanish in so far as the bull is not killed. It is a milder sort of affair. Lisbon has the most important arena, seating 11,000 persons.

SPRINGFIELD

Population—1929 4,066 (est.) 1930, 4,175. Assessed value—1931, $24,488,310. Tax rate, 1932—Township, $8.22; state and county, $1.06. Incorporated 1827, settled early in 1700. Springfield is essentially a township of homes. It is 35 minutes from New York City on the electric D. L. & W. Railroad and has excellent bus connections to Newark, Elizabeth, Summit and Plainfield. The railroad stations at Millburn and Short Hills are less than a mile from Springfield Center. The Railway Valley Railroad has a freight station in Springfield, giving service for factories, commercial and industrial purposes. State Highway Route 26 makes it convenient to reach New York in thirty minutes by car when completed. Numerous state and county highways pass through the township. It has good streets; water, gas, electricity and a newly opened sanitary sewer system. Of interest is Revolutionary history with its historic Presbyterian Church where Rev. James Caldwell preached to the battle of Springfield fought on June 23, 1780. Several colonial landmarks are to be found in Springfield, one of the oldest communities in Union County.

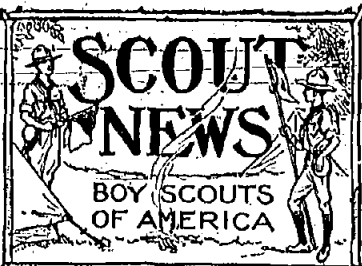

THE WIZARD

What the SUN Advocates

Believing that the following improvements are vital necessities to nourish Springfield's betterment and substantial progress, the SUN advocates:

1. A high school.
2. Removal of dilapidated buildings which are "sorespots."
3. Sidewalks wherever needed.
4. Encouraging clean factories, to increase the rentals.
5. An active Board of Trade to stimulate "Buying in Springfield."
6. Postal-carrier delivery.
7. Reduced bus fare within town limits and to Millburn R. R. station.
8. Full time position for the township clerk's office.
9. Set of Building Zones, before township is developed.
10. A county park.

Friday's meeting was ushered in with a new type of opening ceremony originated by Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Robert Marshall and Senior Patrol Leader Kenneth Hoagland. The new manner of opening the meeting was decidedly different from the old.

The meeting had hardly begun when it walked a "five-gallon-hat" with Jack Blunt under it. Mr. Blunt who hails from Virginia City, Nevada, was the speaker of the evening. He brought along a large Western saddle, a pair of spurs, a Western twang in his speech, and answers to all the questions about the West the fellows could ask. Mr. Blunt also a former rodeo rider and he satisfied the Scouts' curiosity as to the "how and why" of rodeo life. He also explained the use of the various parts of the saddle, as he described the real West of today.

Mr. Blunt was one of the most interesting guests the troop has had in a long time and more programs with speakers that entertain the Scouts as much as did Mr. Blunt will increase the attendance at meetings.

Ten Scouts from Troop 66 journeyed to Camp Swastika Saturday and remained there over the weekend. The weather was all one could ask for and the fellows had an enjoyable time. The next problem was solved by simply having each Scout bring his own food-stuffs to cook when he got there. We wish that we had been present to share those pancakes and sausages with the Fleming Arrow Patrol, Miami, Ah, me!

Speaking of the Fleming Arrows we wish to compliment Patrol Leader Ray Schmidt and the rest of the patrol on their initiative in starting a troop library in Patrol Leader Schmidt's home. Although this goes under the head of project work we like to think of it as a step in the troop's history and greatly encourage more "work of this" sort. Here's hoping the library antecedents, Fleming Arrows.

With Scoutmaster Hoagland still intent upon making this troop the crank troop of the council the Scouts put on a snappy appearance as they

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be controlled.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time of after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit, you need not take a "double-dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on sensory stimulation. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. P. A.

SYNOPSIS

A girl finds herself in a taxi cab in New York with a strange man who speaks of "my next shock." He leaves her for a moment, and she drives on for she fears him. She stops at the Hillmore, wondering who she is. Her memory is gone. She has a wedding ring. At the hotel a young woman vanishes with the girl's $500.

She looked up at him smiling. "Perhaps they know me?" "No—they didn't act like that. More as if they were pointing out a celebrity."

"Where are they?" "They wait a minute, here's our cab, young lady," he scolded. "Hop in and don't jump away like that again. I'm a nervous fellow."

"Hop in." He lifted her gently off her feet and set her in the cab. A minute later he was beside her, having told the driver to go to a certain speakeasy.

"But Rocky—if those people were pointing me out it must have been for some reason."

Rocky settled himself beside her and drew out a cigarette. "Well candidly, Baby, I didn't like their looks. If they were friends of yours, you're better off without them, and while I don't want to be melodramatic—"

In the gaiety of the evening she had forgotten her old conviction that something terrible lay in her past from which memory had merely shut her out.

Rocky laid his hand over hers. "Forgive me," he said, "I was foolish not to go up to those people, but I had a hunch—just a feeling—not to do it."

"The cab had stopped at a red light. A small boy was darting between the lined-up cars holding out papers."

"Oh, Rocky, we forgot about the tabloids. Let's look in."

"O. K.," said Rocky, feeling in his pockets. "I've been away so long I don't know what the latest scandals are myself."

Rocky's eyes dropped to the headlines. "KILLER BRIDE'S GUN FOUND. Diane Merrill's Father Identifies Gun Discovered on Ferry Boat."

The papers slid to the floor. "For a moment she remembered. She knew everything, then she collapsed. She crumpled into a heap on the taxi cab floor, moaning and clutching Rocky's knees."

When she came to her senses she was lying across the bed in Rocky's apartment while he leaned over her with anxious, fear-stricken eyes.

"You fainted?" "Yes—it was. It was something—" she could not go on. She could not remember what it was.

She closed her eyes, sighed. "How did I get here?" "He flushed. 'I carried you. You were unconscious.'"

"You were kind." She was too exhausted to say more. Nor could she bring herself to mention the papers. Just as she had forgotten the words over the radio, she had again forgotten the headlines in the paper.

Her mind seemed to refuse to go back toward them. She knew that something too horrible for contemplation had happened—something that she didn't have the strength to think about it.

Then she saw that he was very excited. He walked around the room picking up things, throwing them down. He seemed beside himself with some new strange emotion.

"What's wrong?" "He sat down in a chair, biting his lips. He hardly noticed her question. She repeated: 'What's the matter?'"

He rose and came to the bedside. Seating himself beside her he took her hand. But there was something odd and unconscious in the gesture. "Tell me everything again. Every single thing you remember."

She fixed her dark eyes on his, and something in his earnest seriousness made her begin again. She rehearsed the whole story: the man in the cab, her hatred, her insane desire to get away from him.

"What ought you to do?" "Well, something I'm not going to do." She would stand no more. "Rocky, have you found out who I am?"

"Supposing I have found out?" She was silent. "It must be something pretty awful," she said after a pause.

"I don't know what to do." She pulled a cushion from behind her shoulders wearily. "You'd better tell me."

Still he walked up and down. "You've got to trust me." "He had reached that far in his reasoning; that he could not tell her what he knew, and that she would have to do what he thought was best for her."

She sighed. It had been such a long hard day, taxing mentally and physically. She could not rouse herself to greater effort. She dozed, slept a little and woke to find him standing with all her luggage in the middle of the floor, a paint brush in his hand.

She watched him take a knife and begin to whittle her bag, on which were the initials D. V.

She spoke sharply. "What are you doing?" "He kept on working at it. 'Better go back to sleep, Baby. You're going to need all the rest you can get.'"

"Rocky, what are you doing?" "Wanting to wreck your property." "I see that. But why?"

"I'm going to paint everything black. Now look here, Baby, there are a lot of things you don't understand. And this is one of them. Turn over, close your pretty eyes and go back to sleep."

"Doris swung her feet over the side of the bed. 'You're crazy if you think I'm going to let you spoil my bags like that.'"

"You spoke just too late, lady." "He began to apply black enamel over the outside. 'Baby!'"

"What?" "If you're rested you'd better go in the next room and look over the clothes that Doris left here. Pick up in my brown suit case. You'll find it lying on the bed."

"This is the queerest thing that's happened to me yet. I must be dreaming." She put her finger out and touched the wet black-paint. "What are you doing this for?"

"Just a precaution. I ought to destroy it, but I'm not ingenious enough to think of a way at the moment. I want to get started in about an hour. Get well out of New York before dawn. I forgot to mention that I'm taking you on a motor trip to Canada. So pack up what you need from Doris' things. You're not to be allowed anything of your own."

She looked at him speechlessly. He put down his brush. "You are going to let me take care of you?" She said nothing. "Aren't you?"

"Yes." "Well, then—' 'Can't I know anything?' He stood close to her looking down. "Only that I'm doing it all for your welfare."

"The silence between them was sweet. They did not look at each other, but it was as if he had offered her something precious and she had accepted when she said, 'All right.'"

"Good girl. Now listen, pack up everything you need with what you can find of Doris' things. Take nothing of your own."

"Rocky?" "What, Nulances?" "I can't help feeling yours being rather sweet."

He opened her bags and began smearing paint over the dainty brushes and mirrors inside. "Control your feelings, then, darling, and get to work."

"But Rocky, why must you—if you're going to leave it here anyway?" "Doris might come back. There'd be hell to pay if anyone found this luggage. Look here, how long do you intend to stand there and argue with me? You go pack. I've sent for a basket of food and the minute it comes we beat it."

She was bewildered. Either she must trust him completely—or she was being so nice, doing it all for her. She crossed hastily and went to look over Doris' things.

She sat on the bed for a minute, her elbows on knees, fists jabbed into her cheeks. What could this mean? There must have been something more in the papers. Rocky didn't want her to know. It was sweet of him. He thought she was too ill. She got up suddenly and began to pack, wondering in a mist of romantic thoughts if she'd ever be able to stop thinking about him, now that she had begun to see what he was really like.

There was a rap on the door. It was a boy with the lunch basket. Rocky came in, ready to start. "Rocky!" she started, bit there was earnestness and gravity in his face. He held something in his hand.

"Can you be ready in a few minutes?" he asked, his lips white. "She rose rather shakily. 'I guess so.' She would have to go with him. 'But why?' she insisted. 'You said you'd take care of me and I—'"

"Doris," he said, exasperated, "can't you trust me? You've got to trust me. This is all for your good. I'm no slacker any more than you are. Let's give each other a break."

"Did you save those newspapers?" she asked suddenly. "He shook his head. "But I'm not enough to read them now," she said urgently. "I know you've been afraid they'd shock me—but I'm all over that silly foolishness now—won't you get another for me?"

He shook his head again. "Not now. We ought to be going." "Doris looked at him ruefully. 'Why won't you let me see a paper?'"

"Doris, snap out of it. You are going. I've made all arrangements. It's the only way out. You'll see what I mean, later. Come on, get your things!" He stood up with a bright forced smile.

Doris too rose. She looked up at him, a steady glow in her eyes. "Rocky, you haven't given me any reason why I should go. You won't even answer my question about a paper. Is there something that I ought not to see?"

He didn't answer. "Because if you think there's something there that will shock me, that's just what I need. If I can be shocked hard enough, I'll remember everything. Don't you understand?" She saw that he didn't, and put her hot palms lightly to her temples. "Please Rocky, get me a paper."

He looked down at her with a conviction that was beyond stubbornness. "It's no use for you to keep repeating that request," he said. "It's utterly impossible." He took out his watch. "You have five minutes in which to dress for the street. And oh yes, I nearly forgot," he held out a pair of dark horn-rimmed spectacles. "I found these for you."

Doris stared at them. "What for?" "For you to wear—if you like," he said. "But I don't like." Doris was definite.

Rocky smiled pleasantly. "Take them anyway. We might be doing some fast driving—they'll protect you from the wind."

Doris tossed them onto a chair. She was perfectly sure that Rocky would pick them up again, and force her to take them, even wear them, if he chose. He was getting his way about a lot of things.

CHAPTER VII

As they got into the street Doris noticed that Rocky's manner was very strange. He pushed her into the doorway, and looked cautiously up and down the dark street.

"Come on," he whispered. "What is this?" said Doris pettishly. "Hurry up."

Rocky had adjusted the top on his roadster. Doris climbed into what was now a glass-enclosed coupe.

"Aren't we going to be rather hot?" "Can't have the top down. Not until we get away from New York anyway."

The engine was purring. Once more Doris fancied that Rocky looked about fearfully. "You're acting like the girl in Tango's. What is all the excitement?"

"What did you say about a girl in Tango's?" Doris told the story of the odd, frightened girl who pushed her into a closet.

"She recognized you?" "Do you think she did?" "Oh yes. Yes, of course. And she was a good sport. I'd like to meet that girl and give her a party. She probably saved your life!"

"Rocky, this is ridiculous. You can't be mysterious like this. Do you mean to tell me you know what made that girl act that way?" "Certainly I do."

"Then don't be so aggravating. Tell me." "They had skirted Central park and were going up Lenox Avenue—Rocky pausing at a red light smiled down on her."

"Warm enough?" "Oh, yes." "Light me a cigarette, will you?" She gave him the lit cigarette.

"Quite the little domestic wife, aren't you?" Somehow the sting had gone out of all his lines. She could no longer feel any antagonism toward him. His mockery seemed to contain a secret tenderness.

Dawn broke as they left New York. Doris smiled the iridescent smile that rose from the fields.

"Oh Rocky, look, clams!" A truck was driving up to a garish roadside resort. Men were unloading clams fresh from the sea.

"Can't stop." "Oh, Rocky, please, they look so delicious." Rocky slowed the car. "If you'll promise to stay in the car and let me bring you some—" he began.

"Why are you such a tyrant? I think you're just showing off." "Want some clams?" "Of course I do."

"Under those conditions." "Oh I suppose so." "A tin got out of the car and slammed the door decisively. "Look here, you better put on those dark glasses."

He strode over to the stand. Doris put on the glasses. She knew they made her look hideous. But the morning air, the feel of the fresh new world all about her, and above all the sense of companionship with Rocky made her light-hearted. Whatever there was to worry about was unknown to her.

Rocky came back with a large clam loaded down with horse-radish. "It's still alive." "Oh, dear, I wish you hadn't said that." "Nonsense. They like being eaten." He went back for another one. Doris smiled. The hot sauces burned her throat pleasantly. She felt as if she could eat a dozen clams. A car was coming toward her—a pale blue closed Victoria, garishly trimmed. It seemed crowded. As it neared her, she heard a snatch of song. Doubtless a party of all-night revelers.

How I Broke Into The Movies

Copyright by Hal C. Herman

BY CORINNE GRIFFITH

MY CHOICE of a screen career was really more or less accidental. I didn't grow up with any idea of going into motion pictures, as so many other actresses have done. I always loved the theater, and always had a strong interest in the silent drama; but it was an impersonal sort of feeling, I never associated either of them with the thought of a career for myself.

Music was to have been by means of self-expression. While I was still attending school in New Orleans I had my heart set on a thorough musical education. I was to have studied in New York under the best teachers, and then taken several years abroad.

Whether I could have done anything with this art professionally I really don't know. I was not considering it from the point of view of earning a living at the time—merely as a sort of sublimated sideline.

But before any of these roseate dreams of travel and music in the capitals of the world could come true, my father suffered severe business reverses and the family resources collapsed. Suddenly, and without much warning, it was not only necessary to abandon my ideas but to go out and earn a living. Like many girls, I was without any particular training for battling the world. I had not progressed far enough with my music to make it profitable for me, and I knew nothing else that seemed to offer a means of earning a livelihood.

I had relatives in California—and went there. The West was certainly kind to me; for I had been on the coast only a short time when an incident, trivial in itself, biased a way for me just when I most needed it. I was dancing one evening at a Santa Monica ballroom with some friends. I did not even know at the time that a brunette beauty contest was being held; but presently I heard my name called out. During the process of elimination I won the contest—much to my surprise and somewhat to my amusement. I had no idea that it would lead to anything. But among the judges was Tolmie Sturgeon, then a director for Vitagraph, and he offered me a small part. Needless to say, I accepted.

I played one or two "bits" with Vitagraph and then appeared in two pictures with Marie Williams and one with Harry Morey. They cast me in wild "ramp" roles at first; which was excellent training, as I have since appreciated; for without previous stage experience it would have taken much longer to get over my stiffness and awkwardness before the camera, especially now that talking pictures are in vogue. But these "ramp" parts proved just the right thing to loosen me up and make me forget myself.

I remember in one of them I wore my first long tulle; with a mingled feeling of pride and worry. It looked very decorative, but also very dangerous, and I was in continual fear at first lest I trip on it and embarrass some highly dramatic scene with an inglorious fall that most certainly would have changed the picture's tempo from drama to burlesque!

After very few of these roles I was fortunate enough to be sent east and starred in my own right. Fate was good to me, and the winning of that beauty contest undoubtedly saved me many heart-breaking months of discouragement in the extra lists.

Marilyn Her Model

Virginia 14th Stephens, generally known as Gipsy, is eleven years old. An exceptionally clever dancer, she has been three, as two years ahead of her grade in school, and yet is popular with little girls who cannot speak a line. She has brown eyes and bronze hair, and her favorite wish is to grow up to do the things Marilyn Miller does, a combination of dancing and emotion.

Evelyn Knapp

Evelyn Knapp had a successful New York stage career before entering pictures in 1930. Some of her more recent productions include, "The Bargain," "Side Show," "A Successful Alimony" and "Big City Blues." She also had leading roles in "Columbia's" "This Sporting Age," "The Night Mayor," "My Hostess" and "State Trooper."

CODE AND HOME NOT IN UNISON

There's a good deal of talk about shorter working hours for the American housewife under the NIRA; but I imagine that's about all it will ever amount to!

Every time we begin a new national enterprise, the patient home-body is promised something, and although she always gives her enthusiastic support, she gets very little relief. She's like the farmer. Life for her is more promise than pay.

But for that we shouldn't blame the President or General Johnson or the Brain Trust or any man or set of men. It's just our unfortunate fate. Daughters of Eve, you know, suffering the consequences.

Somehow codes and time clocks do not fit into our schemes of life. When the baby's formula must be repaid and papa yells for more pan-cakes we can't stop to worry about whether we are complying with the New, or just lying along under the Old Deal. Codes may come and codes may go, but housework goes on forever. And we don't much care. In fact, we rather like it.

We're going to do our full share to get this country back to sanity and prosperity, but we shall not commit ourselves too far as to rules that seek to regulate how and when we shall put out the wash or do up the dishes.

Times can't be run like factories, and we wouldn't want them to be.

In spite of modern efficiency, we still like to labor in the kitchen and to spend a whole afternoon cleaning out dresser drawers, or making a batch of fudge!

Home work has to have inspiration behind it; therefore we have to be told we must not indulge our passion for cleaning house at unexpected moments or for moving the furniture when the urge hits us.

My heart has often bled for the overworked housewife. However, I'm still opposed to mammoth knocking out when the clock strikes. The New Deal is grand—and all that; but I have the feeling that we'll be better off in the long run with mother doing overtime, as usual—Mrs. Walter Ferguson, by New York World-Telegram.

Here is quicker relief from pain—the fastest safe relief, it is said, ever known. This is due to a scientific discovery by which BAYER Aspirin starts "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass here tells the story. A Bayer tablet starts to disintegrate or dissolve—go to work—almost instantly. This means quick relief from pain—lowered blood pressure, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism. And safe relief. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

STORY HOUR

From about Columbus, we got a picture which we could have Miss Wain had had some time by Santa Maria. We also had a picture of the Indian in the background. It is now GOLIGHTLY, Grade 4.

On his way he was hunting and was attracted by Indians. JOHN ANDERSON, Grade 5 GR.

COLUMBUS DAY

The twentieth of October is Columbus Day. He discovered America on that day in 1492. We are studying about Columbus. LADIA VARECKA, Grade 12.

ASSEMBLY PROGRAM

The Columbus Day Program was presented by 7B in Assembly-October 10. It opened with a flag salute and the "Star Spangled Banner." The Glee Club was heard in the prayer response and John Brand played a violin solo. Several other selections were played by the Glee Club. Compositions were given by Helen McFar, Maurice Zubatko, Edith Molitor and Marie Murray. A Columbus play was also shown with the following players in the cast: MICHAEL HALL, Eugene Trickett, George Talger, Kenneth Sprague, Matthew Edwards, Jack Martin, Patsy Rasmussen, Fred Bond, Ruth Wilson and Ruth Brock. Louise Trickett, class representative.

FIFTH GRADE NEWS

We worked hard during September to win the attendance banner. We did and our average was ninety-eight per cent. Now we're trying to keep it. We made a new banner. It shows three boats that Columbus owned. JAMES STEWART.

WHY THEY'RE "INDIANS"

Many years ago there were no white persons living in our land. They were known as Indians. When Columbus sailed west and discovered America he thought he was in India. He thought the people were Indians. Since then the Indians in America have been known as Indians. HARRY SEIDNER, Grade 3.

GRADE 8A REPORT

The eighth grade played the seventh grade recently in touch football and won 24-0. The losers put up a good fight. The eighth grade played the seventh in soccer October 17 and won 1-0. FREEMAN HUNTINGTON.

WHAT'S WHAT

We have a sand table in our room and we're going to make a Florida village in it. Fourth grade learned

PHYSICAL TRAINING

Some persons call physical training "gym." Anyhow we have a good time in gym. When we play basketball we are fair and do not cheat. When we go outside, we play football and sometimes soccer. We have a dressing room for ourselves and we keep it neat. Our class, the seventh graders, only have "gym" three

N. J. INDIANS

We are studying the New Jersey Indians. Some of us have learned poems of "Hiawatha" by Longfellow. We drew a picture illustrating the story. Harold Palmer, Grade 3.

9TH GRADE WINS

The ninth grade defeated the eighth grade in touch football, 12-3. The game was exciting from start to finish. George Arnold of the ninth grade recovered a fumble and made a touchdown. Harold O'Neil made another touchdown on a trick play. Harold O'Neil, Grade 9C.

Sweet Corn Quality Depends On Freshness and Succulence

No Vegetable Rivals New Jersey Sweet Corn As a Summer Favorite, Secretary Duryee Points Out

By WILLIAM B. DURYEE
Secretary, Department of Agriculture
Trenton, New Jersey

ONE of our truly American vegetables is sweet corn. Long accepted as a favorite always to be found on the tables of our native folks, sweet corn was readily adopted by the newer arrivals from Europe.

Probably no vegetable can rival New Jersey sweet corn as a summer favorite. No other vegetable is so perishable, so sensitive to improper handling or so disappointing when served after careless handling or cooking. Quality in sweet corn depends almost entirely upon freshness and succulence. When lost, these properties can never be restored and with them has been wanted the true flavor and aroma so characteristic of fresh sweet corn.

Corn Season Longer
With such highly perishable properties and with an outstanding demand for it in the city markets, the supplying of quality sweet corn presents a very definite challenge to both growers and merchants. These elusive but choice properties must be guarded at every step. Persistent consumer demand for a longer season has been met by enterprising growers. In the south, especially in Texas, sweet corn is grown for our early market but it is only from New Jersey that consumers can select their summer supply of sweet corn and be able to serve choice ears the day after they are harvested.

Early plantings in Burlington County, for varieties carefully selected for flavor and sweetness, provide most of our July supply, followed by the more generally planted crop for city consumers, the ears are harvested early in the cool of the morning so as to preserve the natural moistness and succulence in the green husks. These are then packed in crates and kept cool until ready to begin the evening journey to the city. There they are available for the housewife early the next morning, thus permitting the serving of sweet corn barely a day removed from the ear.

Buying Suggestions
In buying sweet corn, we suggest that you avoid any ears on which the cob leaves or sheath are wrinkled and dry. Sometimes an effort may be made to remove such withered outer portions of the husk but this can be readily detected because the remaining inner leaves are thin, pale and bleached. Ears of fresh sweet corn are covered with deep green, unbleached and unwilted husk, with drops of moisture between the leaves. Examine each ear carefully and select those with smooth, pliant, stout, plump and uniform kernels which, when punctured, exude milky juice. Avoid ears on which kernels are tough and wrinkled and of pasty content. We suggest that you buy only a day's supply at a time and that it be kept cool and moist until ready to be husked just before cooking.

Choice, tender sweet corn and butter form an unusually tasty combination which is relished at every table. However, one must always keep in mind that sweet corn must, like milk, be absolutely fresh and requires a full measure of marketing ability on the part of the housewife to make certain of a wise selection.

Next week Secretary Duryee will tell about varieties of New Jersey apples.
