

5,000 ENJOY SUCCESSFUL JULY 4TH CELEBRATION

Collections Today Total $800 But Amount Will Be Raised by Later Returns

There has been about $800 collected to date for the Wentz boy fund, according to figures received by the SUN today.

Rambling Around Town

WHAT AN AFFAIR AND what a success was the town party at United Singers Park Friday night for Bobby Wentz!

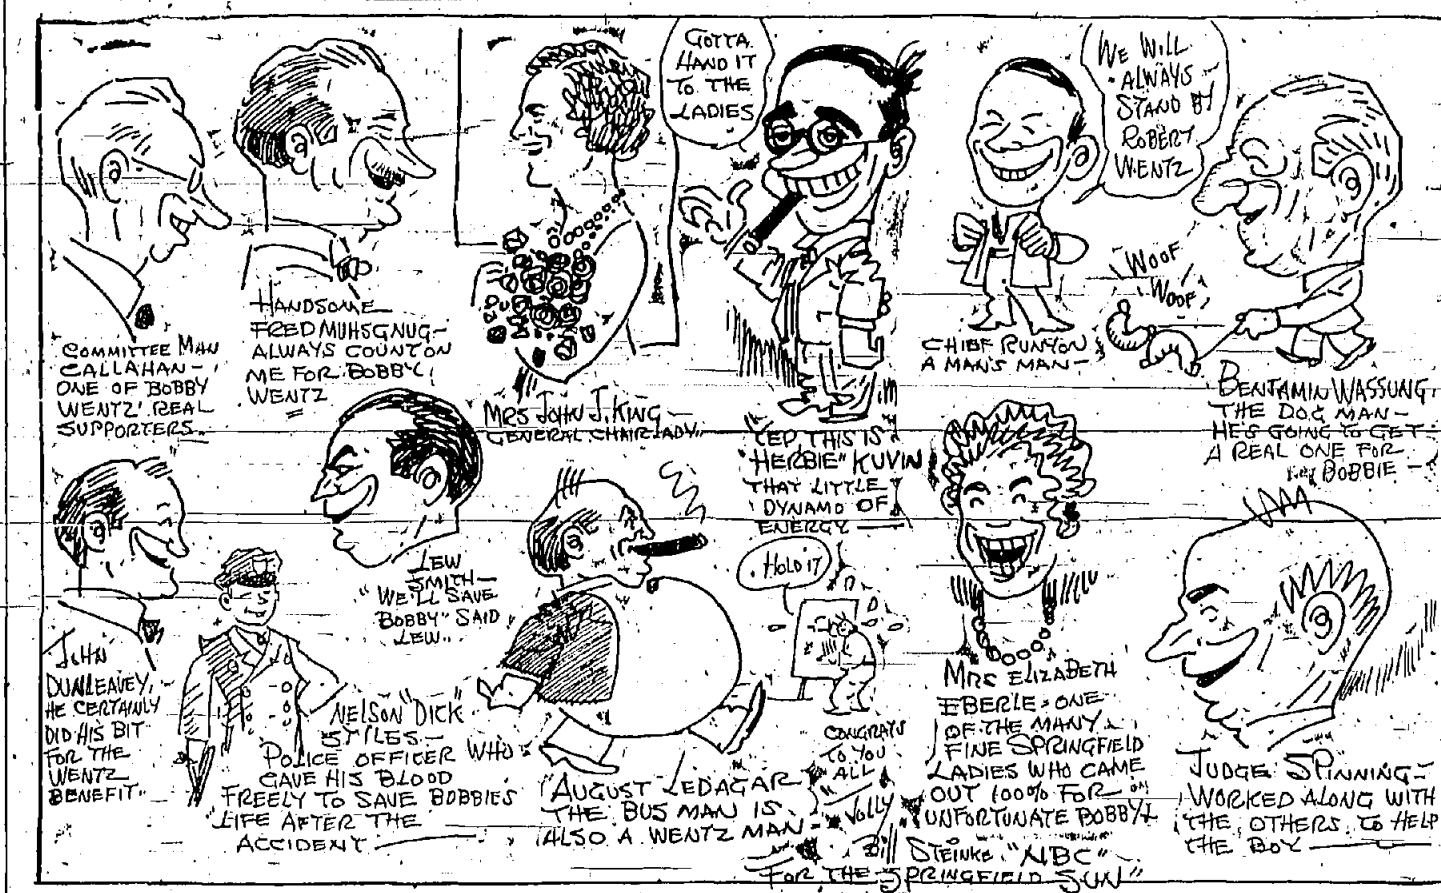

Local police regulations are strict on regulating closing hours of liquor places licensed in the township.

The goal is expected to reach the $1,000 mark. In view of slow returns coming in daily to the fund group it is not possible to determine final collections until all money is received by the committee.

Over 700 persons attended the park benefit last Friday night, jamming the grounds to capacity.

Contributions reach total of $300. Mrs. Robert D. Treat, chairman of donations for the Wentz fund, announced yesterday that about $300 has been received in collections by her committee to date.

CAREFUL ADOLPH

Herr Hitler is killing off the conservative "radicals" that are threatening him and next he will have to deal with the "radical" radicals, which might not be so easy.

With Russia's natural resources and raw material and Germany's technical development and skilled mechanics, an alliance between the two would make a combination that would upset the international equilibrium. We can feel sure that the 6,000,000 Communists in Germany are not licked yet although they may be laying low. We expect lots to happen Eber Der Rhine before Christag.

WHY A COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER?

Theodore Roosevelt was once asked, during a friendly discussion of relative value, to name three things which he would consider most essential to his welfare should he be marooned on an uninhabited island? His answer was most significant when he said:

"First, I would most desire my family. Second my home-town newspaper. Third my gun."

The fact that his home-town newspaper came second in importance to his family speaks volumes for that institution and it is not altogether strange that a person with Roosevelt's perception of values should make this choice.

The community newspaper is essentially a serial history and biography, combined, of the people and events in the territory which it serves. Through its succeeding volumes the community's progress—or retrogression—is unconsciously portrayed. It makes its subscribers' problems its own problem; a sympathetic understanding exists between publisher and subscriber which is entirely absent in urban publications. This spirit of fraternalism extends to closer relationships between the advertiser in the home-town paper and those whom the advertiser serves. His appeal is not so much one of "better bargains" and "cut prices" as it is of friendship, cemented by years of pleasant and constructive community association. His advertisements are a message from one friend to another.

It is the function of the community newspaper to direct and to further the cultural, educational and spiritual life of its community, in addition to the dissemination of news. It holds as a sacred obligation the furtherance of all projects designed for public benefit, and it opposes with equal determination that which is detrimental. It is the clearing-house for opinions expressed by expert and reader, alike.

The community newspaper occupies a traditional place in the existence of its home town parallel in importance to the school and the church. It is an integral part of the realization of pioneering effort to constructive living, the mouth-piece of an enterprising and progressive element of national life. The spirit of neighborliness is engendered by the familiarity with which it treats its family of readers; its flexible editorial policies permit of the same reportorial treatment of the news of twin calves born to Bill Jonas' cow as is given to news of worldwide importance. And the same fine editorial discrimination compels the absence of news in its columns which directs unfavorable attention to a member of its circle.

By close adherence to a policy which is dictated by a philosophy peculiar to rural society, the community newspaper has come to be regarded as an indispensable part of the rural civic plan. Its subscribers enjoy a sense of proprietorship; a feeling which is shared by the average home-town editor. It is the tie which binds the common interest of John Brown, who operates the corner store, with that of Jim White, who maintains a fine herd of Jerseys on his farm three miles south of town. By its influence the community spirit of interdependence is promoted, intimate news is made available to those far removed from childhood associations, and through its sympathetic knowledge of community affairs it has become a vital necessity to all community programs of progress.

Your community newspaper needs you—you need your community newspaper!—W. H. Mills, Hanover, Mich.

NO MORE GARBAGE

Vacationers along the New Jersey shore line will from now on be able to enjoy more pleasant summers, as New York City has at last stopped dumping its garbage into the sea. It has been quite common during recent years for bathers along the Jersey shore to suddenly find themselves swimming among grapefruit skins, cabbages, onions and other forms of garbage carried to our shores by a northeasterly tide from New York's former dumping grounds at sea. Naturally, it was with a sigh of relief that the municipal officials along the shore and those planning to spend the summer there heard the good news that New York City last week had started to use its huge new incinerator plant.

Garrying its fight to the United States Supreme Court, New Jersey finally won the right to have New York prevented from dumping its garbage at sea. But months afterwards the refuse still continued to come in. The deadline given New York by the court for construction of its incinerators and to cease the garbage dumping was June 1, 1933. But all New Jersey and the Supreme Court got from New York was promises—and some more garbage. Pleading lack of funds, New York was given until July 1 of this year to get the incinerators working and their dedication last week was just three days before the deadline.

The next thing for those at the shore to worry about is preventing tankers from discharging oil in spots from which it can be carried to the shore.

CASH AND RELIEF

It is very easy for those of us still able to meet our needs to become amazed at the thought of men on relief rolls striking for cash instead of food orders. At first glance, such a move appears unreasonable and ungrateful, but if we stop to think a while it is not difficult to see that nothing could be harder on a man's morale and self-respect than a relief food order.

It must be most unpleasant for those who have always managed their own affairs—economically and who now, through no fault of their own, find themselves penniless and on charity lists, to be forced to present food orders at grocery stores before the eyes of their neighbors.

Relief workers in general, including the federal relief administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, have come to the conclusion that cash can be made to go as far as other forms of relief and, also, that it can meet small necessities not procurable under the rigid food order system. There is no reason why both the food order and the cash systems cannot be carried out successfully. It should certainly not be difficult for relief administrators to tell the difference between the men who can handle the cash responsibly and those who should be given food orders.

BABIES ARE FARSIGHTED

Just because a six-months old baby begins to notice your watch-chain, it is no indication of dawning intelligence—his eyes are just beginning to adjust themselves for close vision. For the first six months a baby's eyes are so far-sighted that it can notice little but the difference between light and dark, according to Dr. H. G. Rowell of Columbia University in a talk before the Better Vision Institute of New York City. From this time for five or six years the eyes of the child are developing into maturity more rapidly than the rest of its body.

"The growing eye must be watched," says Dr. Rowell. "Children's eyes need annual tests. They need the best possible conditions for work and play. These requirements are of vital importance because eyes, like the rest of the child, have not attained adult strength and sureness."

"A very young child must not do close eye work because, up until the age of five, six or seven, most eyes are far-sighted to some degree."

"Most eye troubles which school children have may be classed as nuisances rather than of serious import to life or health. Nevertheless, to the educator these nuisances assume important proportions because a large majority of the information we receive comes through the eye. We need the best vision possible. Indeed, when in school we are trying to find out why a child is failing in reading, we first make a very careful test of the child's vision. Cross eyes, of course, ought to be discovered and remedied, or at least be under treatment, before the child enters school."

Criticizes Report Over C. C. C. Fracas

Capt. Martinelli Asks That True Story Be Told

To the Editor of the SUN: Please mention the fact in your newspaper that the misleading article that was published in one of the Newark papers and the Summit papers about police dispersing CCC men is untrue and unfair to the members of CCC Co. 1272, Summit, N. J.

As commanding officer of CCC Co. 1272, Camp 24, I wish to state that the police did not disperse my men as there was no need of it. I arrived on the scene soon after my trucks arrived at the mentioned camp and ordered my men to board the trucks and return back to camp (which they did promptly).

This unpleasant affair arose over the remarks passed by men loitering near the said corner to the boys (CCC) moving from the winter quarters at Springfield to summer quarters at Summit.

I appreciate it very much if you will mention this fact in your newspaper so that due justice will be given to members of this company.

JOHN MARTINELLI, Captain, Coast Artillery, Commanding.

There Would Be Fewer Divorces If Wives Took Proper Care of Their Hair and Clothes

By Alice L. Tildesley

JEAN HARLOW, swathed to the neck in a white apron-like garment, from below the hem of which her blue flannel slacks and white tennis shoes showed briefly, sat in a booth at Jim the Bobber's and regarded her hair in a hand mirror.

Jim, a suave, slim, gray-haired gentleman whose surname is a secret, bent over her and smiled.

"Full bangs in front and the rest of the hair slicked back behind the ears — so!" he repeated, his swift fingers illustrating with the famous platinum locks.

Jean surveyed the back of her silver-glinting head with interest, an intent little frown between her gray-blue eyes, while she sighed, "Oh, dear, I don't know."

"To change the personality," went on Jim softly, "you wish to be different — this is new. No?"

Watch Your Hair

JEAN puts the handglass down reluctantly. "But you'd have to cut the bangs," she considered. "I sort of like myself, but I'll have to ask my mother, on account of beauty" — her smile made her eyes dance — "she takes such an interest."

"She'll probably come back in a day or two and let me try it," said Jim, as Jean darted out to her car. "She's the sweetest thing in pictures and just as unaffected as she was when she first came to me as an extra girl."

"She's always taken exquisite care of her hair, which is something girls who try to imitate her vogue of platinum tresses don't seem to realize. Her hair is really ash-blonde, so that getting the platinum shade isn't difficult. Brunettes and redheads shouldn't try to go platinum — the bleach must be so strong that the hair is likely to be burned, and, besides, it takes a certain inward and powerful beauty to glow as a platinum blonde. It washes out a negative person."

"I wish you'd tell girls and women who care about how they look to watch their hair."

"Don't think that you can run into a beauty shop and come out looking marvelous unless you put in some time caring for your hair between visits. If you put bleach on the hair that grows out between treatments, don't forget to tell the operator or you'll find yourself with half your hair in your lap. And have oil treatments frequently if you're having things done to your hair color if you want to keep your hair."

Changing the color of your hair is something you should consider carefully before you have it done, is Jim's opinion. "Of course, picture stars often have no choice in the matter," he said, "for they are told that they must go blonde for a certain film, or go dark, or red-headed, or whatever it is. Babe Daniels went blonde for a few films and looked older and less vivid. Fay Wray's own hair is brown, but since she has been going red or blonde for pictures she seems to have gained a new and snappier personality."

Jim's face became serious. "So many women today are losing their husbands. Why? Because they won't take the trouble to be beautiful. Even right here in Hollywood, where most of the beauties of the world congregate and where girls have proved how important it is to look your best, there are women who get careless, who let themselves slump, who show they don't care."

"They seem to forget that their husbands spend their days among girls who take care of their looks, for there are no better groomed women than the shopgirls and office girls, who must keep themselves neat always because they are before the public all day. Men accustomed to girls whose hair is waved and shining, whose nails are manicured and whose make-up is watched, come home to wives who haven't seen the inside of a beauty shop for a month, whose hair straggles, whose skin is rough, nose shiny, clothes untidy and shoes run down. No wonder we have divorces!"

Changed Personalities

"YOU needn't spend much money on beauty, but you must spend time. You can do without an extra dress or hat or some small luxury and learn how to make the most of yourself. It's worth it."

"If you are handy with your fingers, you can keep your own hair in trim between beauty-parlor sessions, but you must know how to curl the ends and pinch the wave back if it comes out. Norma Shearer can do anything with her hair. She can set a wave exactly as it should be, use the tongs in the right spot. You never see her with straggling locks. You wouldn't if she were marooned on a desert island. She'd find some way to fix her hair."

"Her hair naturally waves back. It's a mistake to change hair that Nature has decided should go back, and Norma would look all wrong if she brought it forward. Either one side or the other should be put back. Norma knows this because she understands herself. But though she's an expert, she is always willing to listen to suggestions, whether she adopts them or not."

"Unless I have something to say that seems valuable, I never try to give suggestions to a girl who understands herself and the roles she is playing, because I know she has studied the character she will portray and her own ideas about it."

"Sometimes I don't agree with the way a star wishes to have her hair out or waved, but if she is a person who has succeeded by her own efforts, I let her alone, for I know that her way belongs to her own personality and she would not be satisfied with mine. Constance Bennett believes that she looks best with her hair brought low to hide her jawbone, but on the few occasions when she has been persuaded to change this style her beauty has been enhanced, according to my notion. However, if Constance is convinced that her fashion is to be preferred, she is right in keeping it."

Marlene Dietrich is another star who knows exactly what she wants and sticks to the same style of hairdress whenever possible. But Marlene has arrived and is wise.

"Joan Crawford is a girl who loves to experiment," Jim went on. "She knows her own mind always, but she enjoys trying new styles and creating a new Joan. I suppose she has many devoted followers who could profit by experimenting, too. If you like to change, or aren't satisfied with the way you look, go to an expert and let him design something for you. Watch the way he does it so that you can keep it looking as it should."

Colleen Moore's Dutch bob used to be her trade-mark, but now that she has grown up, Jim has designed for her a new haircut that is attracting much attention.

Mae Clarke's boy bob, in a day when the very short cut is distinctly out, manages to give her a "fair" that has helped put over her new individuality.

"Claudette Colbert likes to wear her hair short, so she uses wigs whenever long hair is necessary for her screen roles," observed Jim. "She likes her hair so short that I have to give her six permanent waves a year. We get very good windblown effects with her hair, which is very soft and fine."

"Short hair makes any woman look younger, so I do not think it will soon go out. For the screen, girls find that it is well to have hair a little longer so that different coiffures can be designed, but if you are not in pictures, I'd say keep it short."

"It adds years to any woman's age to put her hair in a knot and raise it above the neckline."

Beauty Can Be Made

"IF YOU have a large nose, never have any kind of knot at the back of your head."

"You may have noticed fashion sketches of a new hair style showing rolls on top of the head. This is only for evening, of course, as no one could get a modern hat over such a roll, and it is a fad that must not be followed blindly. Don't attempt it unless you are sure it enhances your beauty, for those who are not bewonderingly lovely will look faintly ridiculous."

The first thing a man notices about a woman, according to Jim, is her feet. He eyes the lady's shoes in that initial instant, so if one would have him raise his glance, it's well to have them neat and shining, with heels well set up and no scuff on the tip.

Then match your shoes! "If you weren't born beautiful, there's still something that can be done about it," averred Jim, "for to many men it isn't the ravishing beauty who counts. He's a little afraid of any one too gorgeous unless he's quite wonderful himself. So if your shoes are neat, you keep your figure, pay attention to your skin and have your hair cared for and look after it, you need not worry about some one else getting your husband or that you won't get one to worry about."

"One of the chief attractions of women is a good skin. Keep yours clean with good soap and water and a pure cleansing cream."

"If you have neglected your skin, so that it has become rough and dry, or oily, or full of blackheads, spend the time and money to go to a good beauty shop to have a massage. Then listen to the advice of the operator, who understands how to care for your particular skin, and follow it. It isn't necessary to have a massage often, but when it is necessary, it's bad to put it off," is Jim's advice.

"Don't think you have to compete with a screen actress when it comes to your eyelashes."

"I've noticed that many non-professionals are using the eyelashes that are bought by the inch," observed Jim. "Don't do this unless you are playing a part on the stage or screen. False eyelashes break the real ones and never look anything but false."

Dyed Lashes Are Out

"A NOTHER warning: Don't have your lashes dyed, unless you must for professional reasons. It not only breaks the lashes, but if you open your eyes a drop of the dye may get into them and prove dangerous. It's a risk I never advise. No, you shouldn't go about with light eyelashes when your soul yearns for dark ones. You can use mascara, which is more natural and carries no risk."

"If your eyes are too close together extend the eye shadow out beyond the eyes at the sides of the face and brush your hair back away from your face."

"But you must study your face if you are thinking of curing defects with the way you do your hair. A girl with a thin face must ask herself if her cheekbones are too high before she brings her crowning glory down around her face. Otherwise, the effect will be as though her cheeks were all puffed out. "Fingernails should be well cared for. If you are not in the professional world, or are not a very exotic-looking person, don't go in for scarlet fingernails. It is best to stick to natural or one of the shades of pink. Silver might be used for a very formal occasion if you happened to be wearing a silver gown, but even then it's a question if natural nails would not be better."

"As to the new fashion of reddening the toenails, that is a fad, not in the best of taste. Only those who enjoy being conspicuous will go in for it."

Being beautiful in Hollywood is part of a star's business, and why shouldn't being as beautiful as you can be part of yours?"

Loizeaux Voted to Impeach Both Men

Senator Explains Stand On Harley-McCutcheon Case

State Senator Charles E. Loizeaux, of Union County, voted "guilty" in both trials of the recent confusing verdict of the State Senate in the Harley-McCutcheon case.

Considerable sentiment has been expressed against the Senate's action in convicting former Judge William B. Harley, of Passaic, for conspiracy to buy a judgeship, and on the same evidence acquitting former State Comptroller John McCutcheon, Passaic Republican leader, of a charge he obtained Harley's appointment after a $15,000 contribution was paid.
