Sandwiches, coffee and food will be the refreshments served. Mrs. Horner expects to serve about two hundred, as the dance which was scheduled to be held last Saturday night was postponed until this week. Ordinarily only conventional refreshments are given, but what's a dance without refreshments, and how could the soldiers be served good things to eat without including the girls too?

The following women are making sandwiches for the occasion: Mrs. W. W. Halsey, Mrs. C. G. Chennells, Mrs. M. Malcolm Leonard, Mrs. Charles Schwartz, Mrs. Harold Plummer, Mrs. Russell Pfingster, Mrs. Edie Jung, Mrs. Erik-Erikson, Mrs. Ethel Hall, Mrs. Beverly Spinning, Mrs. Charles Zoeller, Mrs. M. P. Griffith, Mrs. John Keith, Mrs. Harry Mahogany, Mrs. Steven O. Harris, Mrs. Edmund Malcolm, Mrs. Robert Ferguson, Mrs. Jessie Joyner.

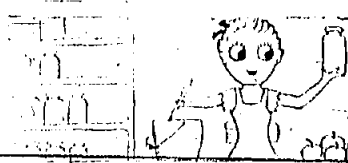

Also Mrs. Edgar Morrison, Mrs. Irving Gidley, Mrs. A. H. Richards, Mrs. Clifford Walker, Mrs. Robert Slaughter, Mrs. John Gates, Mrs. B. F. Linck, Mrs. George Hamilton, Mrs. William Hartz, Mrs. Alvin Danzig, Miss May Pay, and the cooking class from Regional High School, who will make some more loaves of the delicious nut bread that they contributed two weeks ago.

FROM GARDEN TO SHELF Rhubarb For Winter

By MARY ARMSTRONG
County Home Demonstration Agent

As soon as juicy, plump stalks of rhubarb are brought in from the garden for the first time, it is a real treat for the season. Hundreds of New Jersey home-makers will be glad to have a recipe for how to prepare their household rhubarb for winter. Early rhubarb is more juicy and tender than the stalks pulled during hot weather, and as summer approaches the stalks become woody and wormy. So do your rhubarb canning early!

Because rhubarb contains such a large percentage of acid, it is very easy to can with success. The majority of home-makers can't handle a cooked form, but some prefer the cold water method. Regardless of which method is adopted, however, the canning procedure begins with a thorough washing either under running water or in a large pan of water. Lay the clean stalks on a bread board and cut them into inch pieces with a heavy, sharp knife.

Now that we have to be careful about the amount of sugar each jar contains, the acidity of rhubarb is sometimes thought to be a handicap in canning. It is well to remember that the older stalks are sweeter than the younger ones. When the older stalks must be canned, some of their sourness can be removed by pouring boiling water over the baking pieces. Allow the water to stand only a few seconds; then drain it off. Now add sugar to the fruit at the rate of 1/4 cup for each quart you expect to can. That amount is within the limits of your allowance of one pound of sugar for every four quarts, but the rhubarb still may not be sweet enough to suit your taste. If this is the case, proceed with the canning and add more sugar when you open the jar next fall or winter.

The mixture of sugar and rhubarb is put on the stove in a covered dish, to come to the boiling point. When it reaches this point, ladle it into jars which have been sterilized. Because rhubarb is sterilized in the jars for only a very short period of time, it is a sanitary precaution to sterilize your jars and covers before using them for 15 minutes in a steamer or 10 minutes in boiling water which covers them. If some of the jars are ready before the rhubarb, invert them on a clean dish (well until later). Place a rubber on each jar and then fill the jars to the very top edge, wipe off the rubber with a clean cloth, and put the cover on the jar. Seal it tightly.

Although the rhubarb has been thoroughly cooked before it is packed into the jars, it is a wise precaution to place the jars in a hot water bath for a five-minute processing period. Remember to count the time when the water in the bath starts to boil. Since we live in an atmosphere which is contaminated by mold and yeast spores, there is a very great possibility that some of these spores have been "spooned" into the jars with the rhubarb. This short processing period kills any which may have sneaked in, so that they cannot multiply and spoil the food. A jar that has been attacked by yeast, molds or "works," whereas only a layer of mold is found on the top of food contaminated by mold.

PICNIC AREAS PLENTIFUL IN PARK SYSTEM

"Picnic" means more than just an outdoor meal to most picknickers—fishing, climbing, exploring, and boating are often planned along with picnicking camps by groups which avail themselves of one of the many picnic areas in the Union County Park System.

Many groups that have picnicked in the parks recently received and answered a questionnaire concerning any improvements that the Park Commission could make to improve their outings.

There is no charge for the reservation or use of any of the park picnic areas. Union County residents may reserve thirty-six of these areas throughout the park system. Others may use picnic areas on a "first come, first served" basis.

Picnic kits, including valley hat and net; softball and bat; horse shoes and stakes; and a first aid supply may be obtained free of charge at the park office. A five dollar deposit, required while the picnic kit is in use, is returned to the recipient upon the return of the equipment.

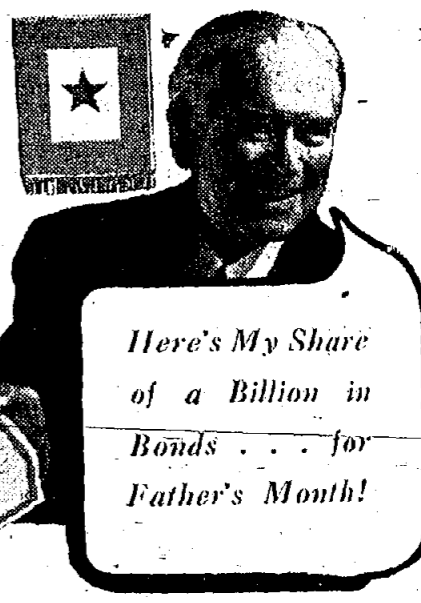

Reservations for, or information about, picnic areas may be had by writing to the Recreation Department of the Union County Park Commission, Box 231, Elizabeth, New Jersey—or by telephoning Elizabeth 2-8431.
